She had just finished counting it up a second time in order to be sure that it was correct, when her neighbor, Mrs. Wilkes, from the next room below in the big tenement house, came in for their usual evening chat. She was a thin, nervous looking little woman of middle age. Neither her faded gray hair nor her dress was tidy. She was a strong contrast to Mrs. Pell, who was always neat and clean; she was much older than Mrs. Wilkes, too.

Most of Mrs. Pell's days were spent in office cleaning, while Mrs. Wilkes' time was well filled with washing and ironing.

After they had exchanged their news of the day, Mrs. Pell said: "Would you think that a body could get a nice lot of flowers for a dollar and sixty-eight cents?"

"Sure and I'd think that a lot of money to be spendin' in such a way," answered Mrs. Wilkes, with a look of surprise on her weather-beaten face.

"I'd like it to be more," returned Mrs. Pell, "but not a cent more than 12 cents a week can I spare."

"I'm sure I'm not knowin' what your talkin' about," said Mrs. Wilkes, the surprise in her face increasing.

"I'll be tellin' you. It's for the graves on Decoration day. I've just set my heart on coverin' 'em with flowers this year. I've been wantin' to do it every year, but somethin' always happened to prevent. But this year, they're goin' to be there."

"Oh!" ejaculated Mrs. Wilkes.

"Yes," went on Mrs. Pell, "I'm feelin' sure there'll be nothin' to prevent this year. And it's white roses I want. Teddy was crazy after 'em."

She rocked her chair, and hid her face in her blue gingham apron.

Mrs. Wilkes could not enter very deeply into her friend's feelings. She had never had any children, and her husband had been lost at sea so many years before that he was now but a dim memory; besides, he had never in life given her any reason to mourn his loss.

But she kept respectfully silent until Mrs. Pell's burst of grief was over. Then she said: "White roses is nice. You ought to be gettin' a lot for so much money."

Mrs. Pell shook her head. "I don't know. Flowers is dear,"

Mrs. Pell carefully put aside 12 cents each week from her meager earnings.

Every time that she passed a florist's window on her way to work, she would stop and look at the flowers displayed, and try to decide which window contained the most beautiful white roses. "For I must get the finest to be had," she would think.

The prospect of buying those flowers often formed the subject of her chats with Mrs. Wilkes.

To the latter $1.68 seemed an enormous sum to spend in any such a way.

"Be sure that you get the worth of your money," she would say.

"They've got to be fine ones," Mrs. Pell would answer.

Spring had been long in coming that year, and it was late in May before the garden roses began to show their colors. Mrs. Pell had few opportunities of seeing any of these, the tenement in which she lived being in a district where there was not enough earth room for a blade of grass to grow. Mrs. Pell, like many of her neighbors, had a few pots of geraniums on her window sills, but they were not luxuriant in growth. The air, close and sunless, was not conducive to floriculture. Mrs. Pell had once tried to raise a white rose, but it had died an early death.

Then her walks to and from her work were not in the resident part of the city.

But on Sundays, when she was not too tired, she went to church. Her way thither led past many beautiful gardens. One of them she particularly admired. It was a large, old-fashioned garden surrounding a beautiful old house. There were roses and roses. Roses climbing over trellises, and clambering about the broad veranda which ran along the side of the house.

They were just such roses as had grown about the little country home to which she had gone as a bride, says the Chicago Advance. The sight of them took her back to the days when she had been so happy.

Then had come the dark time when her husband returned from the war with broken health. To mend their fortunes they had come to the city. But things had gotten worse. Her husband had soon died. She and Teddy had struggled alone. She had looked forward to the day when Teddy would be taking care of her, for he was a good boy. But he had been laid beside his father eight years ago. How he had loved those roses! He had often said that he would have a garden full of them when he was a man. He would be a man now if he were living.

The Sunday before Decoration Mrs. Pell went to church and returned by way of her favorite garden. She stopped to look at the white roses. There were such quantities of them. The air was filled with their fragrance. How she wished that she could have enough of them to cover her graves! Somehow, they seemed sweeter than the flowers at the florists.

The day before Decoration day came. Mrs. Pell had gone much sooner than usual to her work, and by hurrying a great deal, had been able to return home at four instead of six, her usual hour.

It was her plan to put on her best clothes and then go to the florist's and select and order her flowers. She would call for them early the next morning, and take them to the cemetery. The day was to be a holiday.

She had just unlocked her door, and entered her room, when Mrs. Wilkes came in. Her eyes were swollen from crying.

"Sure, and what's the matter?" cried Mrs. Pell.

"It's Sally. She's sick, and goin' to die. The woman that's been takin' care of her wrote to tell me. And she wants to see me once more."

"Well, sure and you'll be agoin'," said Mrs. Pell.

Mrs. Wilkes burst into tears. "It's that I'm feelin' so bad about. It costs three dollars to go, and me with nothin' but a dollar and a half to my name. You see, I paid the rent two days ago, And not one of the neighbors with a cent to lend me."

"And it's too bad, it is," ejaculated Mrs. Pell, feelingly.

"Yes, and there's a train at seven," said Mrs. Wilkes, with fresh tears. "Unless—" she went on hesitatingly, "you could lend me enough!"

"It's too bad, it is," exclaimed Mrs. Pell. "Sure and I paid my rent last week, too." She looked distressed. She was always anxious to help anyone in trouble.

"I know—but—" Mrs. Wilkes hesitated more than before. "I—I—thought perhaps you'd let me have that money you saved for the flowers. Poor Sallie! I'd like to see her once more. She's my own sister, sure."

"Lend you that money! Oh! Mrs. Wilkes, I can't! I've had my heart set so long on coverin' the graves this Decoration day."

"I thought likely you wouldn't want to. Poor Sallie! And I'll never see her again." Mrs. Wilkes turned away with a hopeless air, and went slowly back to her room.

Mrs. Pell hastily prepared to go to the florist's to select and order her flowers. She felt very sorry for Mrs. Wilkes, but of course she could not lend her that money. If she had saved it for any other purpose but that! She had tried for so many years to be able to cover those graves with roses, and now when she had the money—to give it all up.

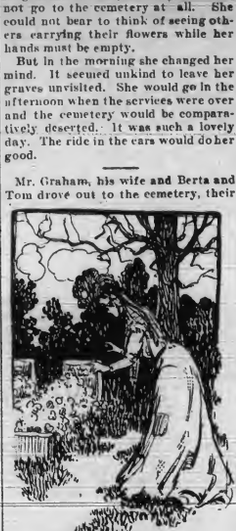
She hoped Mrs. Wilkes did not think her mean. She would have been glad to do anything else for her.

And it was a pity that she could not see her sister before she died. She was the only relative she had, too.

If it had only not been that money! And if it were not Decoration day! She wanted to put flowers on their graves at the time that other people were remembering their dead.

Mrs. Pell's steps became slower and slower, and as she came in sight of the florist's shop, she stood still, and remained in deep thought for some minutes. Then she turned suddenly and walked back to the tenement, and into Mrs. Wilkes' room. She found the latter sitting with her face in her hands and crying.

Mrs. Pell put her precious $1.68 in her hand.



"There," she said, "just take it. Hurry and get ready, and I'll go to the train with you. I do hope you'll find Sallie alive."

"Oh!" cried Mrs. Wilkes, "sure and I always knew you were a good woman. Poor Sallie! I'll be seein' her again."

"Mrs. Pell did not sleep well that night. It hurt her to think of those two graves being flowerless another Decoration day. They were in such a remote part of the cemetery that they never shared in the general decoration of graves. She decided that she would not go to the cemetery at all. She could not bear to think of seeing others carrying their flowers while her hands must be empty.

But in the morning she changed her mind. It seemed unkind to leave her graves unvisited. She would go in the afternoon when the services were over and the cemetery would be comparatively deserted. It was such a lovely day. The ride in the cars would do her good.

Mr. Graham, his wife and Berta and Tom drove out to the cemetery, their carriage filled with baskets of roses. They had almost stripped the many bushes in their garden.

After their grandfather's and grandmother's and Aunt Edith's graves had been piled high with odorous blossoms there was still a large basketful of beautiful white roses left.

"Let us drive around and see if there are any graves without any flowers," said Berta.

"Yes," said Mrs. Graham, "I like that thought."

But there did not seem to be any graves undecorated until they reached a more distant part of the cemetery. There two sunken graves, with weather-worn wood markers at the head, were flowerless.

"How lonely they look!" said Tom.

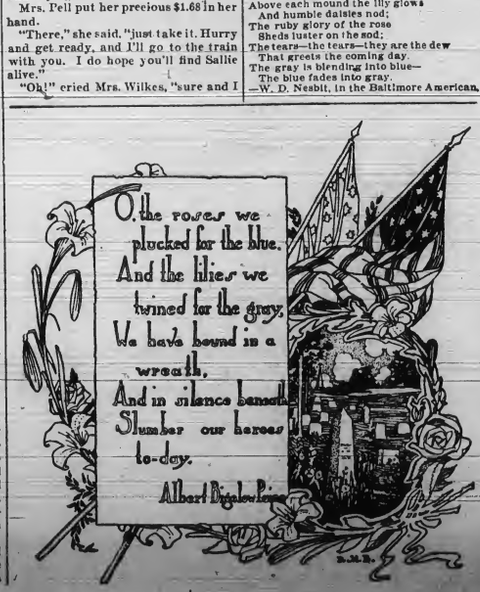
"Yes," said Mrs. Graham, "I think that you must empty this basket on them."

"Let Tom and me do it," said Berta. So she and her brother jumped out of the carriage and went over to the two graves. There were enough roses to completely cover them both.

"Now they don't look so lonely," said Berta, with a backward glance, as she drove away.

And so it was that when late in the afternoon Mrs. Pell came to the lonely spot where lay her husband and son, she found the two mounds a mass of exquisite roses. And they looked like the roses she had had in her little country home in those long past days —the white roses that Teddy had so loved.

PSALM OF THE OLD SOLDIER.



The blue is fading into gray,
Just as when sunset comes
With bugle calls that die away
And softly throbbing drums;
The shadows reach across the sky
And hush the cares of day;
The bugle call and drum beat die—
The blue fades into gray.

The gray is blending into blue—
A sunrise glad and fair,
When, in the richness of the dew,
The roses riot there,
The bitterness of yesterday
Is lost to me and you;
The blue is fading into gray—
The gray blends into blue.

They're sleeping now the long, long sleep—
The boys who wore the blue;
Above the gray the grasses creep—
And both were good and true;
And in the twilight of our life—
The ending of the way—
There comes forgetfulness of strife—
The blue fades into gray.

And humble daisies nod;
The ruby glory of the rose
Sheds luster on the sod;
The tears—the tears—they are the dew
That greets the coming day.
The gray is blending into blue—
The blue fades into gray.

FEELING IN SOUTH AFRICA.

Faith in the Rapid Development of Resources Is Restoring Confidence.

"The ill feeling and bitterness engendered by the late Boer war are fast dying out in South Africa," said Mr. R. Stuttaford, of Cape Town, South Africa, according to the Washington Post.

"The Boers are as fine a people as inhabit the earth, and were only conquered by the superior force England was able to bring against them. Man for man, the Boer is as good a soldier as the world can show. But by magnanimous and generous treatment of a defeated foe the English are gaining the good will of the Boers, and it will not be long until there will be complete reconciliation between the late participants in one of the fiercest wars ever waged.

"The supremacy of British rule is a good thing for South Africa, and in the long run the Boers will be gainers by their defeat. The country is already fast recovering from the ravages of the strife, and in fact there is a high state of prosperity in the Transvaal, the Orange Colony and Cape Colony.

"We have in the ... possessions the greatest gold fields and most valuable diamond mines in the world. The mineral and agricultural possibilities are simply enormous. My belief is that South Africa is going to become the theater of the greatest development that modern history will record. It will afford opportunities for adventurous and enterprising men for the next 25 years, and great fortunes are certain of being made there.

"While in Philadelphia the other day I walked into a fruit store to look at some peaches. The dealer told me that they were imported from Cape Colony, via London, and he had to retail them at 50 cents apiece. I recognized them as a home product and bought a few purely from patriotism. We raise delicious peaches that come to maturity in February, but, of course, they are not so good on landing in the United States after a voyage of many thousand miles."

MARCHING PLANTS.

Varieties That Travel Across Country, Keeping Step with Advance of Human Settlement.

Several years ago attention was called to the fact that the eastern plants of America were marching westward across the continent, keeping step with the advance of human settlement, and conquering the native plants as they proceeded. It was predicted that in time there would be a return of the western plants sweeping eastward and overcoming their conquerors, and it is noted that that return seems already to have begun.

At present Australia presents, perhaps, the best example of this spreading and conquering tendency of man. The weeds that have found their way from Europe to Australia are crowding out the native weeds in many places, and especially in the more fertile lands. In some of the more rocky soils the native plants have the advantage in the contest.

A curious fact, brought out by observation in Australia, is that some imported plants, particularly ornamental garden varieties, cling to the neighborhood of their human friends as if they felt themselves to be strangers in a strange land, needing protection. Although they spring up vigorously within the limits of the gardens, self-grown, year after year, yet they never gain any footing outside.

But the Scotch thistle does not show itself so timid. It has been introduced into both Australia and Tasmania—in the latter island, it is said, by an enthusiastic Scotchman, who wished to see his national flower blooming around him on the other side of the earth, and it has taken advantage of its opportunities without fear and without favor.

HISTORY OF THE LANCE.

One of the Most Ancient and at One Time Popular of Weapons.

Abolition of the lance in the British army has brought out many comments on its history, says the Chicago Daily News. Prince Raymond Montecuculi, one of the most brilliant military commanders of the day, called the lance the queen of weapons and also the most ancient. It was used by the Greeks and Romans, and later by the knights of the middle ages. Charles VIII. of France seems to have been the first to introduce a regular lancer regiment into his army. The corps was abolished by Henry IV., owing to the difficulty of finding men to serve. So lancers disappeared from the French army until the Napoleonic wars. In the meantime Frederick the Great, having seen the excellent use made of the weapon by the Poles, had armed part of his cavalry with the lance, and had ultimately formed a regiment of uhlans. After the partition of Poland in 1807 many Poles entered the French service, and a body of Polish light horse was formed, which Napoleon in 1809 made into a regiment of lancers. A year later Napoleon formed a second regiment of lancers out of part of the royal Dutch guard. This arming of cavalry with the lance proved so successful that Napoleon created more lancer regiments and attached one to each division of cavalry. England did not make any lancer regiments until after Waterloo.

Catarrh Causes Female Diseases.

America is the land of nervous women. The great majority of nervous women are so because they are suffering from some form of female disease. By far the greatest number of female troubles are caused directly by catarrh. These women despair of recovery. Female trouble is so common, so prevalent, that they accept it as almost inevitable. The greatest obstacle in the way of recovery is that they do not understand that it is catarrh which is the source of their illness.

In female complaint, ninety-nine cases out of one hundred are nothing but catarrh.

Peruna cures catarrh wherever located.

$25 to Colorado and Back.

It has been estimated that between 8,000,000 and 10,000,000 persons in the United States take a vacation every summer. They spend between $400,000,000 and $500,000,000 yearly in pursuit of pleasure. This is a great deal of money to spend during a vacation, but this season the expenditure per capita may be somewhat less on account of the low railroad rates offered by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway.

From July 1 to 10 this line will sell tickets to Colorado and return from Chicago for $25. This will enable many to enjoy their summer's outing at slight expense. Colorado summer resorts are cooler than the seashore.

HOW WE ARE RULED.

Rockefeller Pulls the String and the Republican Puppets Dance to the Trust Tune.

The real master and dictator of the republican party is not Hanna or Roosevelt, but Rockefeller, the trust magnate. He rules by deputy and his agent or legate is Senator Aldrich, of Rhode Island. Rockefeller and Aldrich are bound together by business ties, and the son of one has married the daughter of the other. Rockefeller is a wise and prudent man; he does not appear to be interested in politics, preferring to keep in the background and pull the strings that make the republican puppets dance to the trust tune. But Rockefeller is vastly interested in the tariff and Wall street, and through Aldrich, who is chairman of the finance committee of the senate, he is able to manipulate legislation for his selfish advantage. Aldrich is a tariff expert and most adroit manipulator of men in the senate—and that means in the United States. Rockefeller and Standard Oil gave him his start in life, and he is faithful to their interests. For them he has defeated reciprocity, the handmaid of protection, as one enthusiast called it, but really an illusion and fanasy which attempts the impossible, amely, to control the home market, and the trade of the world at 'one and the same time. Rockefeller and Aldrich were too wise to attempt that. They knew that reciprocity is the opening wedge that would break down the protection wall and would if driven too far irretrievably injure some of their pet industries. So reciprocity was put out of sight in the senate closet that contains the many skeletons of republican promises, only to die the lingering death of starvation and neglect. The only protest made was by Senator Dolliver, who was honest in his Iowa ideas, but the effort appears to have exhausted him, for he has been silent as a clam since then. Even the zealous and ardent president has subsided, and like a sheep in the hands of the shearers, is dumb—on this subject, though his mouth is open enough on others that will not interfere with his political ambition. Rockefeller is the keeper of the republican conscience as he is the guardian of those partisans and teachers of the doctrine of protection, who would starve to death without his aid. He has issued his edict and Aldrich will see that it is carried out, that the tariff is sacred and must not be disturbed. It is the cow which furnishes the milk that feeds the industries, which though they have long ago attained their majority, are still out of courtesy styled infants. The tariff being settled, as far as the next congress is concerned, Rockefeller has his henchman, Aldrich, at work preparing a bill, which will draw more millions from the treasury and prop up the tottering financial system that the republican party is sponsor for and that is breaking down of its own weight. It is stated that President Roosevelt has promised to call congress in extraordinary session, early in the fall, as his contribution to the remarkable programme.

Blaine and McKinley, astute politicians that they were, advised and urged reciprocity as a means to overcome the protection incubus on trade; their strong personalities might have brought it about for a season, but the scepter has fallen into weaker hands and the protected trusts are omnipotent. The only exception is the long held-up Cuban reciprocity, and as the sugar trust would gain under that arrangement, it may be conceded. Audacity is a characteristic of republican politicians, and could any political programme be more audacious than to continue to protect the trusts—the few at the expense of the many?

Hay's Blundering.

It he does not give close attention to his secretary of state President Roosevelt will have a war with Russia on his hands that will keep him busy for the balance of his term hunting two-legged bears that can fight more than the kind he has been used to tackle. A war with a first class power would give the balance of us all we could well attend to. If it was only raising the money that the tax gatherers would demand. It will take strenuous work and lots of cash to keep the "open door" in the orient from being closed in our faces. Better refer the matter to The Hague peace commission, which the czar started for just such complications All the trade with Manchuria would hardly pay for the loss of one of our cruisers, let alone the life of one of our sons.

——Just as soon as the march of imperialism and expansion takes us beyond the shores of the continent of North America then there are abundant reasons for a still longer march. We must annex in order to protect what we have already annexed. That, in substance, is the argument. It may not be long before we begin annexing more countries in the antipodes to keep other nations from getting too near the Philippines.—Baltimore Sun.

——President Roosevelt did not care to tackle the "Iowa idea" when in that state, though it was the paramount question that the people were interested in. There is a varied difference between the president seeking a renomination and trying to propitiate all factions of the republican party and the strenuous rough rider.

——Some of the big guns of the republican party might do well to hurry and get on tariff-revision platforms. Some pistol like Gov. Cummins may get at the head of the procession.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

"Trust Regulators are useless while the trusts have their High Tariff bottle."

LEGISLATING ON FINANCES.

Republican Senators Working in Secret on Laws Which Will Favor Corporations.

The future financial affairs of the United States are in the hands of four men, and the next session of congress is expected to ratify the financial bill they have been formulating. Senator Aldrich, of Rhode Island, is the leader of these astute republican politicians and his well-known connection with the great trust and corporation interests bodes ill for the ordinary taxpayer. Senator Allison is another of the four, and the railroad corporations of the west have ever counted him as their friend. Senator Platt, of Connecticut, forms the third of the quartette, and his vote in the senate has universally been for the corporations and combines. Senator Spooner is the remaining one, and, being the leader of the corporation interests in Wisconsin, his vote in the senate may be relied on for the legislation that Wall street demands.

The financial bill that these four leaders of the republican party will evolve will without doubt be the most adroitly drawn proposition that has ever been presented to congress. The great banking interests will gladly lend their greatest lawyers to add their skill to that of the committee. The experts of the treasury department are all at the service of congress, and have already prepared data at Senator Aldrich's request. The people who are finally to pay the bills and suffer the consequences of this legislation that the corporations demand, have no voice or influence in preparing the law. No democratic member of the senate will probably be allowed to know what the bill will call for until the last moment possible before it is introduced. Thus ambiguous or obscurely worded sections, that may conceal provisions especially favorable to the bankers, are the more likely to escape criticism or amendment. It will be remembered that the Aldrich bill which was defeated by the opposition of the democrats at the last session by threatening to debate it fully, was introduced late in the session and was intended to be rushed through without debate. When the new bill is introduced at the opening of the coming congress, it will be futile for the democrats to attempt to filibuster against it successfully. They may delay its passage by fully discussing it, but as congress will sit for probably eight months it will be impossible to talk the most obnoxious bills to death that are brought forward early in the session.

There is a gleam of hope for the people in the position that it is possible the house of representatives may take on this important legislation. There are two factions in that body, one demanding asset currency and the other following the lead of the senators above mentioned. This difference of opinion may lead to a division and allow the democrats, with the help of a few honest republicans, to defeat any very obnoxious legislation. The voters will do well to let their representatives know that they are watching this proposed legislation and that those who vote for a bill that is entirely in the interest of the Wall street banks will not receive their votes when the new congress is elected next year.

POLITICAL DRIFT.

——If there is to be no more trust-busting what was the good of whetting our appetites with just a smell of the ham on the bread.

——Judge Thayer, who wrote the merger decision, is a democrat. When the case gets to the supreme court, the republican majority there may reverse the decision and give Wall street another lease of life for its railroad combinations.

——Postmaster General Payne is in a quandary. To go forward with the investigation of the scandals in his department will involve republican politicians of high degree and to suppress the evidence would be disastrous politically to the administration.

——Secretary Hay had to take the back track and express regret to Russia over his "temporary misconception" of that country's purpose relative to Manchuria. Our state department does not seem to have much conception of what diplomacy really is—a struggle for spoils.

COLORADO.

Summer Tourists' Low Rates.

Western lines are now announcing special low rates to Colorado points for the summer months. This presents a fine opportunity for visiting a picturesque and interesting section of the United States. The trip will afford a realization of the wonderful progress of the West in its commercial development and particularly in its railway service.

It was no longer ago than in the strenuous days of '61 that Colorado was first made a territory and its capital city named for Gen. J. W. Denver, a Kansas Governor. It was not until 1870 that the first Chicago, Union Pacific & North-Western Line train entered the city, and six years later, in the year of the Centennial Exposition, that Colorado was admitted to the Union.

The Chicago & North-Western Railway announces a summer tourist rate of $30.00 for the round trip from Chicago to Colorado points, and similarly low rates from all points East.

The Union Pacific and Chicago & North-Western Railways maintain a double daily train service between Chicago and Denver, only one night en route from Chicago and the Central States and no nights from the Atlantic seaboard. The trains are equipped with buffet, smoking and library cars, Pullman drawing-room sleeping cars and free reclining chair cars. Dining cars, meals a la carte. The best of everything.

An Undertaker's Advertisement.

A man in clerical garb was handing out cards to the home-going crowd at the entrance to the Brooklyn bridge one evening recently. On the face of the card was an identification blank, in case of accidents. The plan looked easy and convenient, and most persons tucked the cards in their pockets. When they got home they found on the reverse side the advertisement of an undertaker who advertised a new scheme in burials. The indorsement of a clergyman read: "His undertaking preparations at the committal service in the provision of tent, matting, chairs and a patent lowering device, go far toward making the last moments with the dear departed as comfortable as possible."—N. Y. Times.

Old Railroad Ticket Is Now a Curiosity.

Mrs. Laura E. Howey, librarian of the State Historical society, of Montana has received from C. E. Reese, of Virginia City, one of the tickets used in the early '60s on the stage lines of Montana. It is from Virginia City to New York, issued by the Wells Fargo company, the fare at that time being $180. The ticket is composed of eight coupons.

The first is by stage, supposedly to Salt Lake, there being left a blank space to be filled in. From there it is over the Union Pacific railroad to Omaha, by omnibus to Council Bluffs and from there to Chicago over the Chicago & North-Western Railway.

From Chicago the ticket is over the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne & Chicago to Pittsburg and from Pittsburg to Harrisburg over the Pennsylvania Central. From the latter place to New York the ticket calls for passage over the Allentown line to New York.

Nothing But Luck.

Enpeck—Meeker is certainly a lucky individual.

Slowun—What's the explanation?

"Last fall he tumbled into an open sewer and recovered $5,000 damages from the city and yesterday he fell out of a third-story window and lit on his mother-in-law."—Chicago Daily News.

A DANGER SPOT.

A dangerous spot for pain is the small of the back; it tells of Kidney ills as do most pains and aches in the back. Kidney ills begin with backache and end with Diabetes, Dropsy, Bright's disease. Cure Kidney and Bladder troubles before they reach the serious stage.

Read how easily it can be done

W. J. Hill, of 40 South Union Street, Concord, N. C., proprietor of hardware and harness store, Justice of the Peace, and one of the best known residents of that city, says: "Doan's Kidney Pills proved a very efficient remedy in my case. I got a box at the Gibson Drug Store and used them for disordered kidneys and backache from which I had experienced a great deal of annoyance, trouble and pain. The kidney secretions had bothered me for a long while, were very irregular, dark colored and full of sediment. The Pills cleared it all up and I have not had an ache in my back since taking the last dose. My back is much stronger and my health generally is improved a great deal. I am glad to make a public endorsement of the Pills trusting that it may be the means of relieving some other sufferer."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mr. Hill will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists, price 50 cents per box.

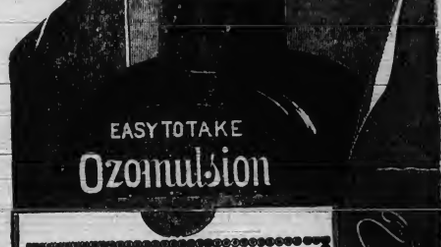
LIFE IS SWEET



even to the farmer, with his endless trouble and worry about weather, crops and insects.

A man can forget his business cares, but he cannot forget a sickness that stays with him (or any member of his family) constantly, day and night.

And if, after trying many different kinds of medicines and drugs, his sickness still keeps on, a man begins to feel as if all his work was in vain.

Life is sweet—but only if you can enjoy it.

If you are sick, or suffer in any way from weakness of any organ of your body, please read the following very carefully, for it may be that we can point out to you a way, both pleasant and safe, by which you can be relieved from pain and sickness, and your life made worth enjoying:

In the first place, put out of your mind the idea that disease is a NAME.

The name is nothing. It hardly matters at all WHAT, you think, or others say, you are sick from.

WE say, and the most advanced medical science of the day says, that if you are sick, IT IS BECAUSE YOU ARE WEAK.

And the very first thing to do, naturally, is to BUILD UP YOUR STRENGTH.

Now, don't go away with the notion that because you have a good strong muscular frame, you are therefore SAFE.

You may be strong PHYSICALLY, but weak VITALLY.

Your internal arrangements need building with Ozomulsion.

Ozomulsion is concentrated, bottled vitality. A Blood-Making Food.

By taking it as a building, medicated, vitalizing food, your organs will be able to get rid, in nature's way, of any disease that now affects them.

Ozomulsion Food is made of the purest cod liver oil, impregnated with vitalizing salts, which regenerate the entire constitution.

Get well; get strong; enjoy yourself.

Trust your health to Ozomulsion.

For women and children, weak, pale, Consumptive, thin and sick, Ozomulsion will do wonders. It Cures Consumption.

SOME of the have been, and some of the would be, leaders of the Democratic party are the greatest obstacles to the party's success.

ENGLAND buys eggs and butter from France and Denmark, chickens from Scandinavia and Russia, and her green vegetables from Holland.

REPORT on postoffice scandals will be made by assistant postmaster-general in three weeks; hundreds of cases of corruption found, including commissions on all supplies; political pressure being used to suppress details.

MARRIED men live longer than bachelors. In other words conjugal life seems a necessary condition of longevity. An authority cites the cases of fifty centenarians, not one of whom is a bachelor. A curious fact, too, is that these fifty centenarians were all widowers.

THERE are in New York three life insurance institutions, two of them mutual associations, whose financial operations practically match those of the United States Treasury. They possess resources in the way of cash or quick assets almost equal to those upon which the Secretary of the Treasury may rely.

JUDGE REDWINE convened the Breathitt circuit court in special session, Monday, for the purpose of suppressing the reign of lawlessness in that county. It is hoped the Judge will be able to bring to punishment every person in anywise responsible for the murders in Breathitt, which have disgraced Kentucky in the last few years.

THE average life of a locomotive on the railways of England is twenty-six years, and on those of France twenty-nine years. In the United States the life of an engine is but eighteen years—not because the good die young, but because it has run in eighteen years about 2,000,000 miles, a distance the English locomotive would be given thirty-six years to cover.

THE promotions of over 3,000 postoffice clerks throughout the country were cancelled by Postmaster General Payne. In the classification of clerks in the several grades covered by first-class offices the number of clerks is prescribed by law. The classification made by George W. Beavers, recently resigned, authorized 7,412 promotions, and it has been found necessary to cut this number almost in half.

EVERY good and law abiding citizen of Kentucky is interested in the outcome of the investigation which Judge Redwine had begun in Breathitt county, Monday. Gov. Beckham will cooperate with the peace officers in Breathitt in their efforts to locate and prosecute the red-handed assassins who are guilty of the assassinations that have brought that county into disrepute.

The Madisonville Graphic commenting editorially on the state ment recently made by Governor Beckham, to wit: "I want to see less politics and more business in Kentucky,", says:

"I want to see less politics and more business in Kentucky" is a sentence that appeared in Governor Beckham's speech at Madisonville and elsewhere. The fact is that this one sentence is worth more than all the balance of his speech put together. It is worth more than all the speeches that have been made or will be made by all the candidates put together. It is what every one who loves his country should contend for. This is neither Democratic nor Republican doctrine, but should be the watchword of both parties, of all parties and of all people. If Governor Beckham means what he says, and we have no right to say he does not, he has taken a step a long ways in advance of the other politicians of the State. If there had been more business and less politics in Kentucky for the past few years, Senator Goebel would now be alive, W. S. Taylor would not be in Indianapolis, Caleb Powers and others would not now be in jail accused of a great crime, and instead of bitterness and recriminations, our State would be the home of the blessed. "More business and less politics." That sounds well, it means something good for Kentucky.

NEW religious bodies are coming into existence, but they are not being made by splits among old ones. For the most part they are composed of followers of individuals. There are exactly 150 religious bodies in protestant and Roman catholic America, 145 from protestant and five from Roman catholic origin, and they increase at the rate of about one a year. The age seems to be religious, and it appears to matter little what new leaders teach—they all get followers. Once launched, these new ventures live, it being a rare thing for any of them to go altogether out of existence.

There is no subject more interesting than that of cultivating corn, and as we are about beginning the season for this work, here are some facts by a writer who has carefully studied this question.

"He directs attention to the fine threadlike roots near the surface as near as they can find both heat and a moist soil. These roots, he says, spread out horizontally and are almost certain to be destroyed or pruned by the cultivator shovels. As the plant develops and has more need for food a second set of horizontal roots are formed, larger than the others. These are the main feed roots of the plant, and in loose soil they grow five to seven feet long. If the condition of soil will permit, these roots will develop at such a depth below the surface as to be safe from the cultivator shovels, but as they branch out into numerous fine, fibrous roots they actually fill the fine, cultivated soil to draw food from every particle, and only shallow cultivation will preventinjury to them.

"Besides the two sets of horizontal roots as described, there are usually two or more sets, beginning at or near the base of the stock as brace roots and go straight down into the subsoil. They have been traced down as deep as four feet. These vertical roots have few fibrous roots attached but serve an important end in being able to bring moisture from the deep soil, late in the season, when drouths are likely to prevail.

"As will be seen, the roots of the corn plant develop as the top grows; also an understanding of the root development suggests the method of fertilization which should be through all the surface soil; and not in the hill nor in the row only. The cultivation should be done so as not to interfere with the roots that want to occupy the ground prepared for them, yet at the same time prevent evaporation of the moisture by maintaining a surface mulch of fine earth, by frequent shallow cultivation."—Indiana Farmer.

It was not my intention to write anything about politics, but I can't resist this opportunity to call attention to a letter I wrote from Washington to the Carrollton News on June 14th 1899. In this letter the statement was made that Col. M. L. Downs would some day be elected to Congress from the 6th district. Here is a tip:—M. L. Downs will get the nomination, which means of course that he will be elected, and its dollars to doughnuts he will make the best congressman this district ever had. He has a number of warm friends in Campbell and Kenton, and if he wants the nomination and makes up his mind to go after it, he will no doubt get it. I can't recall any thing he has failed to get that is if he really wanted it. L. F. H.

In reference to the above the News will say that it has been the height of Judge Down's ambition to pay off the indebtedness of Carroll county and continue to administer the county affairs in a manner that he will receive the encomiums of her citizens when his term of office shall have ended. We have not consulted Judge Downs regarding his probable candidacy, but being the Grand Master of Kentucky Odd Fellows, and a popular man throughout the district, he would make a formidable candidate if he should shy his caster into the ring, and when elected would manage the district affairs in the same able manner he has conducted the county affairs, and as he has taken more interest in politics than few other men in the district have, and no matter whether he got choice or not in a heated race for office, he has always been the first to advocate the nominee's cause and the party's principles, and the News has always advocated the men who have contributed their time and money ror their party's success, and Judge Downs has always done this. He would make a valuable man on the floor of Congress. Bro. Hanks, the News is more than delighted with your suggestion, and seconds the nomination. Judge Downs does not know what the word fail means.—Carrollton News.

THAT the crime of bribery, electoral and legislative, is on the increase in this country, we have an accumulation of painfully convincing evidence. One deep of shame answereth unto another—Rhode Island to Deleware, Albany to Harrisburg, St. Louis to New York. Men whose right hands are full of bribes sit in the high places of government, go about the streets with heads erect are in good repute in society and often in the church. Yet they are confessedly making the very pillars of our public life rotten. Popular elections they are turning into merchandise, and rendering the so-called "will of the people" as expressed at the polls a thing for corruptionists to sneer at even while they manipulate their purchased voters.—Nation.

The Baptist year book for 1903 has just been issued and a summary of its statistics are of interest. The number of churches reported for the United States is 44,829 and ministers 30,809. This is an increase of 376 churches and 248 ministers over last year. It would appear from the figures, remarks the Boston organ of the denomination, that the number of ministers is not keeping pace with the increase of the churches, but it may be said that many of these churches are small and many have preaching but once every two or three weeks, and in many cases several churches are served by one pastor, so that the disparity is not as great as it appears. The total membership in the churches is 4,330,462; in the Sunday schools 1,908,374, an increase of 61,390 church members and 64,905 Sunday-school scholars; 1,251 meeting houses were built during the year, or nearly three and one-half each day throughout the year, the total number now being 27,658, valued with parsonages and other church property at $92,432,714, an advance of $3,042,722 during the year. The total contributions of the Baptist churches of the United States are reported at $15,065,267,02. Of this amount $11,846,389,24 was for church expenses, $601,963,06 for Sunday schools, $200,647,42 for education not including of course, the special gifts of John D. Rockfeller: $1,318,823,51 for missions and $1,017,453,04 for miscellaneous purposes.

If mulching is done, care should be taken to have it extend some distance around the tree, at least more than the place first prepared for the tree.

In a few days Burlington will be without a hotel, which will prove a very considerable inconvenience. Mr. Blyth and wife make good hotel keepers, and it is a great pity that public patronage was not sufficient to justify their continuing in the business.

Tony Bentler does not understand why it was when Cincinnati was built that the alleys were not made wide enough for a hay-hauler to enter them with a load, without tearing the gutters off of the buildings, on either side, as was his misfortune one day last week.

Petersburg was given long distance telephone connection by the Boone County Company, last Monday. To reach Lawrenceburg or Aurora, towns only a few miles distance it is necessary to talk via Cincinnati. But distance cuts no figure in telephonic connection.

The wife of Sam Kirtley, colored, and a neighbor colored woman, had a quarrel, last Friday, and when Sam came home he took up the quarrel, in the progress of which he struck the colored woman in the eye. Saturday, Judge Cason added another chapter to the trouble by fining Sam $5 and sending him to jail for 10 days.

The directors of the North Kentucky Agricultural Association will meet next Saturday, and transact considerable business pertaining to the fair which will be held during the last week of August. The premium list will be revised considerably, and no pains nor labor will be spared to make the next fair a roaring success all along the line.

Burlington and Hebron combined organized a base ball club, last Saturday, with A. B. Rouse, of Burlington and John Cloud, of Hebron, managers. The line-up is said to be as good as the county can present, and will be ready to begin business in a few weeks—as soon as new uniforms, red socks, blue pants and blue caps with white bands, can be presented.

The picnic season will be inaugurated at Harvest Home Grounds on the afternoon of Saturday, June 6th. Good music will be in attendance and everybody is invited. The mention of the committee of the affair, Earl Walton, W. D. Cropper, Elmo Gaines, G. W. Sandford, H. G. Blanton, and A. B. Rouse is a guarantee of a good time for all.

While working near the house, one day last week, Tony Bentler heard his wife screaming. Almost frightened unto death he hastened to her and was very much relieved when he discovered the cause of her alarm was only a black snake that had entered the family room and stretched itself almost across the floor. Tony, armed with corn knife; Eddie with grub-hoe, Buzz Rockwell with a large club, soon dispatched the intruder.

The Best Liniment.

"I have derived great benefit from the use of Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism and lumbago," says Mrs. Anna Hagelgans, of Tuckahoe, N. Y. I have recommended it to many and they always speak very highly of it and declare its merits are wonderful." For sale by all druggists.

Too Great a Risk.

In almost every neighborhood someone has died from an attack of colic or cholera morbus, often before medicine could be procured or a physician summoned. A reliable remedy for these diseases should be kept at hand. The risk is too great for anyone to take. Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy has undoubtedly saved the lives of more people and relieved more pain and suffering than any other medicine in use. It can always be depended upon. For sale by all druggists.

The tobacco growers of Central Kentucky are enthusiastic over the State organization and are giving it a united support. The Woodford Sun says:

"Over 90 per cent of the tobacco acreage of Woodford county has been pledged to the Tobacco Growers' Association and there is strong probability of its being made 'unanimous.' A number of prominent men in this county have volunteered to subscribe for from $500 to $1,000 worth of stock each in the association. 'I believe that in 30 days we will be ready to talk business, said Mr. C. B. Sullivan."

After the ceremony at Rev. Slater's, last Thursday afternoon, Leslie Nichols and bride and those who accompanied them to the minister's, returned to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Noah Clore, parents of the bride, where they were joined by a few friends, and an elegant wedding feast was enjoyed. That night a crowd of about fifteen young men and boys equipped themselves with tin pans and other instruments equally as noisy, and called on the bride and groom, and treated them to an old fashion charivari. The bride's father joined the charivari party, and the boys had a great deal of fun in the half hour it took to induce the bride and groom to show themselves, when they congratulated them and dispersed. Noah says he was greatly pleased with the nice manner in which the charivari parties conducted themselves.

The promoters of the Union Deposit Bank met at Union, last Friday, to elect officers. Having executed articles of incorporation, the stockholders elected seven directors, who in turn elected for President, Dr. M. J. Crouch, and for Cashier, J. L. Frazier. The bank had already purchased a fine lot and have contracted for the erection of a neat and convenient brick building, this they will furnish with safe and other latest improved fixtures. The bank will soon be ready for business, surrounded by a good, prosperous community, with conservative men in control there is no reason why the venture should not be a success, and it certainly will be a great convenience to the business community. We congratulate the people of Union on their enterprise as we are advised that almost all of its $20,000 capital stock was subscribed by residents of Union precinct.

Thousands of practical instances could be given to show the value of improved varieties of corn. For instance one Southern Illinois farmer more progressive than the rest, was induced to secure enough improved seed to plant 300 acres as a result of his study of corn in the Illinois College of Agriculture. These three hundred acres outyielded all of the other fields on his farm more than thirty bushels per acre; and, so far as could be determined, the fields of that entire section yielded about 30 bushels per acre. This increase in yield meant a total gain of about nine thousand bushels, which represented a cash value of about four thousand dollars for that season. As this increase did not represent an increased cost of production, the gain was pure profit. In another case, a farmer in central Illinois became interested in improved seed corn, through the school of corn, judging in the Illinois Agricultural college. He secured enough seed-grown by a corn breeder, to plant eighty acres. As a result, he raised almost twenty-five bushels more per acre on this field than where the ordinary seed was planted. The next year, over one thousand acres were planted with improved seed; and last year over seven thousand acres of improved corn, from the more carefully selected seed, was grown on this farm. In addition, there were thirty breeding fields laid out for the purpose of systematic and scientific improvement of the varieties grown at this place. In northern Illinois the manager of a large farm became interested in the benefits of improved seed corn, with the result that last year nearly three thousand acres of improved corn were grown, and several breeding fields were established.—By A. D. Shamel, of The Illinois Experiment Station, in the May Cosmopolitan.

THE AUTOMOBILE RACE.

Several Persons Were Killed and Injured During Its Progress.

Paris, May 25.—The first stage in the Paris-Madrid automobile from Versailles to Bordeaux, 343 miles, finished at noon Sunday, when Louis Renault dashed at a furious pace into Bordeax, having made a record run of eight hours and 27 minutes. An hour later M. Gabriel arrived, with a still better record of eight hours and seven minutes. It is estimated from the miles that these automobiles covered 62 miles an hour on the road outside the city. These victories, however, were clouded by a series of accidents having fatal results.

The name of W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., disappeared from reports along the route after Rambouillet, where he passed 28th in order at a quarter of 5 Sunday morning, going in fine form. The omission of his name from the dispatches from Chartres, the next town on the road, caused some anxiety, and brought forth a number of inquiries. It was learned later that he, Henri Fourner and Baron de Forest withdrew from the race together before reaching Chartres. All of them suffered breakdowns, and, having lost three hours, they decided that it was useless to continue.

Foxhall Keene, Tod Sloan and W. J. Dannat, the American artist, did not appear at the starting line Sunday morning when their turn was reached and consequently did not take part in the races. C. Gray Dinsmore is thus the only American left in.

Despatches arriving from points along the course add to the list of fatalities and accidents. The most terrible occurred 19 miles from Chartres, where Machine No. 243, driven by M. Perier, was overturned at a railroad crossing and took fire. The chauffeur was caught underneath the automobile and burned to death, while two soldiers and a child were killed. A chauffeur was badly injured by an accident to his motor car near Angouleme. A woman crossing the road in the neighborhood of Ablis was run over by one of the competing cars and killed.

Mr. Stead and his chaufeur, who were first reported to have been killed, are still alive.

It is stated that Louis Renault's automobile attained at Beourdinerie, between Chartres and Bonneval, a maximum speed of 88¾ miles per hour.

It is reported that the Spanish government has forbidden the continuance of the race on Spanish territory.

During the afternoon word of the accidents began to arrive and cast a cloud over the event.. A despatch from Bordeaux announced that Lorraine Burrows had met with a shocking accident near Libourne. 17 miles from Bordeaux, at 1:45 p. m. It appears that M. Barrows had tried to avoid a dog which was crossing the track, and his monster car struck a tree with terrific force. His chauffeur was killed outright . Barrows himself was picked up unconscious but still breathing and was taken to a hospital, where his condition was pronounced critical. His car was dashed to pieces. Shortly afterwards news came that Marcel Renault had been overturned in a deep ditch beside the road near Coupe, 21 miles from Poictiers, and that he was dangerously injured. The automobile club of Bordeaux received a despatch at 4 o'clock saying Renault was unconscious, and, it was feared, dying.

In view of the number of accidents, some fatal, in the first stage of the Paris-Madrid automobile race, from Versailles to Bordeaux, Premier Combes has forbidden the continuance of the contest on French territory. The second stage of the race, which was to have been continued on Tuesday, included a run over French territory from Bordeaux to the Spanish frontier. Premier Combes' action will probably lead to the races being abandoned.

Valuable Estate of James W. Robinson to Be Distributed.

San Diego, Cal., May 25.—The valuable estate of James W. Robinson, once lieutenant-governor of Texas and subsequently a prominent land owner in California, who died here in 1857, is to be distributed by order of court. For some reason Robinson's heir, who lived in Ohio, and elsewhere in the east, were not made aware of his death until long after it occurred, and no efforts were made until recently to settle estate. The estate, which consists of large tracts of land in the vicinity of Roseville, now goes to 71 persons, most of them grandchildren of Robinson, born since his demise.

Saturday was one of the hardest the president has had since he started on his tour. He visited the navy yard at Bremerton, Seattle, Everett, and returned to Seattle again in the evening.

MERCHANDISE BURNED.

Fire in Philadelphia Caused a Loss of Upwards of $1,000,000.

Philadelphia, May 25.—Fire caused a loss of upwards of $1,000,000 Sunday night in the building of the Front Street Warehousing Co. The building was three stories high on Front street and five in the rear, and had two subcellars. Merchandise of a general character was stored in the place. The third floor was packed solidly with matting, and besides this there were in the building, among other things, 1,500 rolls of carpet, 500 barrels of molasses, light and heavy machinery, a carload of wines and other liquors, and a carload of matches.

The building was owned by Jacob Wiseman, and was valued at $65,000. Three firemen were injured, two of them sustaining fractured shoulderblades.

MUST BE TRIED IN MEMPHIS.

The Ohio Warrant For Mrs. Lizzie McCormick Was Dismissed.

Memphis, Tenn., May 23.—Mrs. Lizzie McCormick, alleged long distance murderess, must be tried in Memphis, if at all. In the second circuit court Friday morning Judge J. S. Galloway dismissed the Ohio warrant charging the woman with murder and held her on the Tennessee warrant. The matter will be taken before the grand jury at once. The decision was made after an argument, the Cincinnati officers contending that the requisition they held entitled them to the woman. The court held that the offense, if any, was committed in Tennessee. Detective Sweeney and Lieut. Renkert freely expressed their disappointment and chagrin. They left for home Friday night, but will come back to Memphis to appear against the woman if she is brought to trial.

A HEAVY RAINFALL.

More Than One-Half of Oklahoma City Is Under Water.

Oklahoma City, Okla., May 25.—Oklahoma City was visited Saturday night and Sunday morning by an exceedingly heavy rainfall and damage estimated at $100,000 was done. Many feared a tornado and spent the night in cellars and caves. Sunday and Sunday night more than half of Oklahoma City has been under water, and in some instances water was three feet deep in houses. It required boats to transport women and children through the streets to higher and dryer land. The basements under many of the big wholesale houses were flooded, the water in some cases being 10 feet deep.

The Alton-Dawson Grocery Co. sustained a damage to its stock of $20,000. The damage to the Alexandria Drug Co.'s stock is $10,000. The Oklahoma City mill and elevator lost 10,000 bushels of wheat. Sample cases stored in the basement of the Hotel Lee were damaged to the extent of several thousand dollars. Traffic on the electric railway is suspended, the power-house being under water. All trains into Oklahoma City, with the exception of the Sante Fe, are waterbound, and many washouts are reported west on the Choctaw. The Choctaw, Oklahoma and Gulf passenger train, due from the west this morning, is reported in a washout at Yukon. The Canadian river at this point is more than a quarter of a mile wide, with a four-foot rise in sight. People living in tents along the river front were compelled to flee to higher ground.

All wagon bridges over the river are under water, and the railroads have big forces at work guarding their bridges.

Guthrie, Okla., May 25.—A tornado at Foss, Okla., in Washita county, wrecked 18 houses, killing Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Slagel and daughter and injuring a number of others. Wires in many directions are down.

Guthrie, Okla., May 25.—Early Sunday this vicinity was visited by another deluge, making the 24th consecutive day of rain. The Cimarron and Cottonwood rivers are now at the danger point.

Pittsburg, May 25.—A terrific thunderstorm, accompanied by a high wind, struck this section Sunday afternoon, and besides killing two men did considerable property damage.

Milton W. Robinson, a resident of West Pittsburg, drove to Schenley park with a party of friends for an afternoon enjoyment. When the storm came up Robinson sought shelter from the drenching rain under a big ash tree in Panther Hollow. He had been there but a moment when lightning struck the tree, literally tearing it to pieces and killing Robinson instantly. Robinson's four or five friends, who were within 25 feet of him at the time, escaped without even a shock from the bolt.

John Wilson ran for shelter to a stable about 300 yards distant from where Robinson was killed. The stable was partly destroyed. Later Wilson's dead body was discovered.

At Braddock lightning struck a street car on the McKeesport branch of the Pittsburg Railway Co. and caused a panic among the passengers, many of the men jumping from the car as it sped down the hill. Three of them were pretty badly bruised, and Christopher O'Toole, who fell on his head, is perhaps fatally hurt. The women passengers tried to jump also, but were prevented by some of the cooler-headed among the men. Much damage was done to shade trees, many being blown down and several were split in twain by lightning. The rainstorm was followed by a hailstorm.

Bloomington, Ill., May 25.—A tornado swept across Central Illinois Sunday, causing much damage. No lives were lost. The storm moved from southwest to northeast, accompanied by torrents of rain and lightning. Two grain elevators were blown over at Carlock, and many barns and structures were destroyed. Thousands of shade trees were uprooted. This was the first heavy rain this spring and proved of value to crops.

Sioux City, Ia., May 25.—A cloudburst above Merrill, added to the recent continuous rains, has caused a flood in the valley of the Floyd river, which is a mile wide at Hinton. Great damage to farm property has resulted, much stock drowning.

SIX PERSONS KILLED.

A Boiler in a Saw Mill at Wilcox, La., Exploded.

Plaquemine, La., May 25.—One of the boilers of Wilson & Cochran's saw mill at Wilcox, near Maringoin station, exploded, killing six persons. Nine others are seriously injured, and it is thought that two of them will die. Among the injured are Glover, the sawyer, and J. J. Dolinger, boiler maker, of Plaquemine. TROOPS ARE THERE.

A Battalion Numbering 120 Men in Camp at Jackson, Ky.

The Investigation of the Assassination of James B. Marcum, the Last Victim of the Feud, to Be Commenced.

Jackson, May 25.—A battalion of troops numbering 120 men arrived in Jackson at 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon to preserve order in the town and about the courthouse during the investigation of the assassination of James B. Marcum, the last victim of the Hargis-Cockrill feud. The battalion, made up of one infantry company from Shelbyville and two batteries of artillery from Louisville and Lexington, arrived on a special train from Lexington, and at once pitched camp on the common owned by Alex Hargis, near the center of town.

The arrival of troops was unmarked by any particular incident. Traveling on the special train with the soldiers were County Judge James Hargis and his brother, State Senator Alex Hargis, the two most prominent members of the Hargis family. Another passenger was Judge Bach, who is regarded as the most important of the witnesses summoned to testify before the special grand jury as to the assassination of Marcum. Judge Bach returned from Los Angeles, Cal., to give evidence. During the course of an interview he expressed the belief that no disorder would occur as long as the troops remained. Judge Bach said he did not fear a personal attack, and declared that he would remain at his home without taking any special measures for self-protection.

Public opinion is divided as to the probability of indictment of Marcum's assassin as a result of the work of the special grand jury which will be impaneled Monday, with Judge Redwine sitting on the bench.

Curtis Jett, who is under arrest at Winchester charged with the crime, will not ask for a change of venue if indicted and returned to Jackson. Prosecuting Attorney Byrd stated that it is possible that such a motion might be made by those interested in the prosecution. Doubt is expressed by many as to the probability of witnesses mustering up courage to tell the grand jury all they know. The common belief is that fear of assassination after the troops are gone may seal the lips of those who may know about the killing of Marcum. No time has been set for the withdrawal of troops.

A Sensational Case.

Alston, Mich., May 25th.—Houghton County has never witnessed a more striking medical case than that of Mr. James Culet of this place.

Mr. Culet had spent a small fortune with the best physicians in the county and in addition to this he has tried every medicine he could hear of.

He had a very bad case of Rheumatism and Kidney Trouble, from which he had suffered for twenty years. Nothing he could get seemed to do him any good, and he was gradually growing worse.

He has no Rheumatism now and explains it thus:

"One day I happened to see an advertisement of Dodd's Kidney Pills and decided to try them.

"I made up my mind to give them a good fair trial, as my case was a very bad one and was of over twenty years' standing.

"I used altogether 42 boxes and I can truthfully say that they have driven out every trace of the Rheumatism.

"I feel like a new man, and I can and do most heartily recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills for Rheumatism and Kidney Trouble."

CHANGE OF LIFE.

Some sensible advice to women passing through this trying period.

The painful and annoying symptoms experienced by most women at this period of life are easily overcome by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It is especially designed to meet the needs of woman's system at the trying time of change of life.

It is no exaggeration to state that Mrs. Pinkham has over 5000 letters like the following proving the great value of her medicine at such times.

"I wish to thank Mrs. Pinkham for what her medicine has done for me. My trouble was change of life. Four years ago my health began to fail, my head began to grow dizzy, my eyes pained me, and at times it seemed as if my back would fall from, had terrible pains across the kidneys. Hot flashes were very frequent and trying. A friend advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I have taken six bottles of it and am to-day free from those troubles. I cannot speak in high enough terms of the medicine. I recommend it to all and wish every suffering woman would give it a trial."—BELLA ROSS, 88 Montclair Ave., Roslindale, Mass. —$5000 forfeit if original of above letter proving genuineness cannot be produced.

TRUEST PATRIOTISM FINDS EXPRESSION IN LOYAL LIVING

Memorial Day Sermon by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher

(Copyright, 1903, by J. M. Edson.)

Chicago, Sunday, May 24, 1903.

Text:—"Verily I say unto you, Wheresoever this Gospel shall be preached in the whole world, there shall also this, that this woman hath done, be told for a memorial of her."—Matt. 26:13.

HERE is no more touching or beautiful incident in the life of Jesus than that of Mary and her alabaster box of precious ointment with which she so lavishly anoints her Lord. The fragrance of that deed since that time has filled all the world wherever the Gospel has gone. She of all others understood the Lord and had a dawning conception of His vicarious mission. In a vague way she realized that some tragedy was impending in the life of her Lord, and, moved by an irresistible impulse which she herself perhaps did not clearly understand, she came with her most fragrant and priceless treasure and poured it upon the head which was soon to wear the crown of thorns for the human race. Artist's brush, though it move under the inspiration of mighty genius, can never paint this sacredly sublime scene. No poet, though he speak with the tongue of men and of angels, can ever touch the depths of music which here swell and throb. The sympathy, love, devotion and sacrifice on the part of Mary! The tender appreciation, the quick words of gratitude and the undying testimony of the Lord! What a picture! What a theme! Mary's deed, how opportune, how fitting, how needful! Jesus' appreciation, how full; His testimony, how sweet, how tender, how immortal! "This, that this woman hath done," is told as a memorial of her unto this day, even as Jesus said it should be. Mary, though dead, yet living to-day in the deed she wrought, and speaking a message to the hearts of men. There are elements present in this incident which reveal the wealth of the human heart, and which need but the circumstances to call them forth—loyalty, devotion, sacrifice on the one hand; and gratitude and ready recognition and faithful testimony of the deed on the other hand.

MEN die and pass from the active stage of life, but their deeds live on and on. The human frame is mortal and soon mingles its dust with the yielding soil which gives to each shelter, but the worthy noble deed is immortal, and its luster grows brighter as it shines down through the lengthening years. Mary's deed, wrought so many, many centuries ago, is as fragrant to-day with its message as it was on that day when the perfume of that ointment filled the house at Bethany and wafted its delicate odor to all about. It has shined on and on while kingdoms have reared their glorious heads and then fallen into decay. Its glory has not faded, although the splendor of mighty empires has disappeared.

"We live not in years, but deeds," some poet has sung, and never was truer thought expressed, or fact expressed more truly. Mary's deed lives, and because it is immortal, Mary lives in memory also.

The Nation's life is woven about the deeds of those who have lived, and wrought, and died for it. The sacred dust of its patriots and heroes is the enduring foundation upon which it rests. The nation that forgets the loyal and faithful deeds of its patriotic sons has stepped from the safe road of progress which leads to more glorious achievements, to the pathway of decay and disintegration. It takes the deeds of a hero to inspire and make a hero. The nation that remembers the loyalty, devotion and sacrifice of its people is keeping alive the fires of patriotism which will prove a bulwark of strength against internal and external foe.

NATIONAL Memorial day, or Decoration day as it has become to be popularly known, has been set apart as the day on which to pay special tribute to the soldier dead, and to place flags and flowers upon their graves. Nearly 300,000 soldiers of the civil war lie buried in the 70 national cemeteries established and maintained by this government. The liberality of the United States towards its living soldiers, and its faithfulness in the care of its dead soldiers, are unique and unheard of in the history of nations. After no war, whether of ancient or modern times, have any such systematic exertions been made to secure the collection of the dead and their interment in permanent resting places, as have been made by the government of the United States. But the national cemeteries do not hold all the dead soldiers, for thousands lie buried in public cemeteries throughout the country, and their graves are visited annually and decorated in loving tribute to bravery and patriotism. The soil of this nation has been made sacred by the bodies of the dead heroes who now sleep within its bosom. The life of this nation has been enriched by the blood which has been freely shed in defense of its honor and its unity. It is well that we have provided an annual national Memorial day. It is important, yea, even vital, that we fail not to faithfully observe it, and remember in gratitude and love the sacrifice which gave to us the nation in which we are so proud to claim citizenship.

THE almond-eyed sons of the celestial kingdom worship at the sacred graves of their ancestors, and thus looking backward they live in the past, and yield but slowly to advancement and development. The keen-eyed, clear-brained sons of this great western nation bow before the graves of their soldier dead and thank God that there were men so true and loyal and brave that they were ready and eager in the hour of the nation's need to fight and to die that her integrity might be maintained. Every soldier's grave is sacred soil, and is the spot where the fires of patriotism may be kindled. The fragrance of Mary's ointment has endured to this day, and exerts its sweet influence upon the lives of the followers of Jesus Christ. The deeds of the nation's heroes and defenders exhale a vigor and thrill to the atmosphere of the national life which is felt to-day and inspires loyalty and patriotism in the hearts of all true sons. Death did not terminate their influence; the grave did not consign them to oblivion. Their ashes have proved fruitful soil from which have grown an enduring patriotism and a great nation.

At Brussels the first martyrs of the reformation laid down their lives. They were three young monks named Henry Voes, John Esch and Lambert Thorn. Luther felt deeply for these noble young men, and composed the following lines in commemoration of their death:

"No, no! their ashes shall not die!
But, borne to every land,
Where'er their sainted dust shall fall,
Up springs a holy band."

And the ashes of the nation's heroes have not died. Wherever they have fallen has sprung up a newer and larger patriotism.

IN PAYING tribute to the soldier dead we must remember that the cause for which they fought makes sacred to the nation the lives which were given up in her defense, even though in many instances those lives were evil and godless, and the motives of their service more or less selfish or mean. The microscope must not be used to dissect the army, else will the glaring faults in the individual lives of the soldiers eclipse the supreme and righteous cause which has called them together. Rather must the telescope be used and the army seen as a whole in its struggle to put down slavery and maintain the union. The individual soldier must be identified with the great object to be attained, and if he falls in battle, even though his private life has been low and mean and unworthy, he stands as a hero before the nation, and his blood which he has shed is sacred upon the altar of his nation. Too often to-day the patriotic impulse is checked or stifled with the thought of contempt for the drinking, carousing, godless soldier who was found in every company and regiment, almost, which served in the war. But I believe this is wrong. I would not minimize evil. I would not condone wickedness in the lives of soldiers. Would that every old soldier to-day, and young soldier, too, who went through either the civil war or the Spanish-American war could realize the power and blessing of a clean life. Would that they might know the strength and confidence which comes from fellowship with God through Christ Jesus. Yes, and many a battle has been lost, many a company and regiment been cut off in the conflict, because the lives of the individual soldiers were honeycombed with vice. But notwithstanding all this a heart-felt tribute is due the nation's soldier dead. They fought for that which we are enjoying to-day, a united and powerful and growing nation. If the lives of many of the soldiers were unworthy, let us resolve for ourselves that the heritage which their blood bought for us shall not be stained by unclean or godless hands.

TEST of Patriotism.—A soldier's grave speaks for patriotism, for loyal devotion, for willing sacrifice. Mary would pay a tribute to her Lord and brought the best she had and gave it lavishly. The soldiers who have died upon the battlefields have given the best they had to their country, their lives. Patriotism calls for the best, always.

At the battle of Chancellorsville, when the brave, indomitable Jackson was sweeping down with awful force upon the main body of Hooker's army after the terrible rout of the Eleventh corps under Howard, Pleasanton ordered Maj. Peter Keenan, commanding the Eighth Pennsylvania cavalry, to charge the 10,000 men in front with his 400. Keenan saw in a moment that if he threw his little force into the seething mass of infantry, horses and men would be swallowed up as by the mouth of hell's hottest fire, and few, if any, would be left to tell the story of the deed. But the brave officer, who did not flinch for a moment in the face of almost certain death, also saw that if Jackson's advance was not checked for an instant, to give the union forces time to rally, the army of Hooker would be completely routed and the confederacy win a victory which would mean almost certain success for the secession cause. And the south realizes to-day in its splendid loyalty and patriotism that this would have been a dire calamity for the south as well as the north. A sad smile lit up Keenan's countenance as he unhesitatingly said: "General, I will do it." And leading his men, he pressed forward and was literally impaled upon the bayonets of the enemy. But he checked the mad dash of the enemy, and saved the army from capture and his country from the unutterable degradation of slave-holding rule in the northern states. Here was patriotism which did not count life dear when his country needed its sacrifice. Maj. Keenan was ready to give the best he had. And every green mound under which sleeps the soldier dead is a mute witness to that truest patriotism which is willing to give its best. And this which the nation's defenders has wrought is told and shall be told as a memorial of them.

PATRIOTISM'S Best Tribute.—Over the graves of our soldier dead on Memorial day are scattered the flowers, flags wave bravely and loyally in the breeze, the tread of old comrades is heard, the heads of the multitude are reverently bared, while the eloquent words of tribute are spoken, and taps are sounded and volleys are fired. Yea, forget not to scatter your flowers, fail not to unfurl the flag over the grave of the soldier who loved it well enough to die for it, bow with reverent head, but there let the fragrance of the offering of the soldier dead inspire within your heart a truer and better patriotism than you ever knew before, and go away to live for your country. The soldiers in their graves laid down their lives for their country. You need to take up your life, in all its activity, and live for yours. The truest and best tribute one can pay to the dead heroes is not in flowers and decorations, and eloquent words of praise, but in faithful, manly, womanly living. This nation has its dead soldiers. Its need, now, is living defenders. What this nation is to-day has been bought at the sacrifice of the blood of its loyal sons. What the nation will be to-morrow will be determined by the loyalty and patriotism of the living. The south has its brave soldiers. She has her graves sacred and dear, which to-day are a silent witness of what she has suffered. But the manly surrender of Lee opened a new door for the south. Her sons entered, and are bravely, nobly, splendidly living for a reunited nation and a new south.

ONE of the most disquieting conditions in our country to-day is the careless, flippant spirit which is taking possession of the youth of our land. Memorial day and Fourth of July are fast degenerating into holidays for sports and pastimes, and idle merrymaking. What we need to-day are more old-fashioned Independence Day celebrations, with patriotic speeches; more Memorial days in which the dead soldiers will be reverently remembered and their graves lovingly decorated. Selfishness is so largely dominating in the American life to day that the claims of the nation upon its citizens are swallowed up in the heedless rush after individual desires and aspirations. Patriotism is unselfish.

The story is told of the French gunner who was commanded by his colonel to fire on a small house which was believed to be a nest of Prussians. With pale face the man obeyed. He sighted his piece deliberately, then fired it. "Well hit, my man, well hit," exclaimed the officer, as he looked through his glass. "That cottage could not have been very solid. It's completely smashed."

Turning round, he noticed a tear stealing down the gunner's cheek. "Why, what's the matter?" he exclaimed, roughly.

"Pardon me, colonel," was the reply, "but it was my own little house—everything I had in the world."

Patriotism is unselfish. It is willing to give its all, if its country needs it. We need a new strain of patriotism throughout our land which will put the nation's good in place of self-seeking, which will lift the gaze from a narrow individualism to the larger outlook of national responsibility and destiny.

IN THE crypt of St. Paul's cathedral in London lies buried Lord Nelson, chief among the naval heroes of England. Leaning against the marble tomb is a small square of perforated cardboard worked as a sampler, which for six years has remained there undisturbed. It bears these words, spelled in worsted letters: "In loving memory of our dear Lord Horatio Nelson. Thy will be done," and was brought thither by a child whose heart was full of his tribute to his hero. Into our life for our dead heroes needs to be worked the patriotism of faithful, loyal, manly living. Our lives need to spell out the letters of our patriotism, and though our deeds may go unrecorded and unsung, yet they will be as fragrant in the atmosphere of the national life as was Mary's ointment to the appreciative sense of the Lord, and the exalted and honored place this nation occupies and will continue to occupy among the nations of the world will be perpetual testimonial of the faithful loyalty of its people.

WAYLAID BY A NEGRO.

A Farmer Terribly Beaten and His Daughter Is Missing.

Hillsboro, Ind., May 23.—As Martin Kaiser, a farmer, living near Manchester, and his daughter Anna, aged 17, were returning from church Wednesday night they were waylaid by a Negro. Kaiser was found near the Big Four tracks. He regained consciousness sufficiently to tell that a Negro did the deed. The girl was assaulted and it was thought her body was thrown in Tanner's creek. If caught the Negro will be lynched.

Lawrenceburg, Ind., May 23.—At midnight the entire country was still aroused and searching parties are out for the Negro. Bloodhounds have been secured, but no trace has been found. The body of Anna Kaiser has not been found. Martin Kaiser, the father, is dying. Physicians say he can not live. The Negro will probably be lynched if caught. The Kaiser home is two miles from Guilford, Dearborn county, which is eight miles from here.

The brutal assault was witnessed by Mrs. Mary Griffin and Mrs. Jane Darling, who reside in the immediate vicinity of the crime. Both of these women saw and had a conversation with the supposed assailant a short time before the murderous attack was made upon Mr. Kaiser and his daughter.

A short time before the crime is supposed to have been committed a Negro called at the home of Mrs. Griffin and asked for a drink of water. While there he inquired if there were any men about the place. Being told that Mrs. Griffin's brother was in an adjoining room, he peered through the half-open door and, assuring himself that such was a fact, hastily left the premises. He went directly to the home of Mrs. Darling, where he asked the same questions.

A short time after his disappearance both Mrs. Griffin and Mrs. Darling noticed a man beating something in a clump of brush a short distance from their home, but concluded that it was one of the neighbors in the act of killing a snake.

Five minutes after this a brother of Martin Kaiser passed by and heard groans emanating from the bushes.

There is little doubt that one, if not both, of the Negroes who committed the crimes are now in Cincinnati. Sheriff Axby states that he saw two Negroes, one of whom answers the description furnished by Mrs. Griffen and Mr. Darling, board a C., L. & A. traction car at Homestead at 9 o'clock Friday morning. Homestead is the first stop on the C., L. & A. road east of Lawrenceburg.

THE ELEVATOR DROPPED.

Four Persons Killed and Five Injured in a Dancing Academy.

Pittsburg, Pa., May 23.—Four persons were killed and five were injured Friday night at a dancing academy at 1026 Fifth avenue, by the falling of an elevator from the fifth story through the main floor into the basement. The balance weights weighing a ton fell on the passengers as they lay entangled with beams and ropes in the basement and crushed the dead beyond recognition from their features. On the body of one of the three women killed was a railroad ticket bearing the name Catherine Curtin. The injured were not seriously hurt.

A banquet was holding on the fifth and sixth floors. About 10 o'clock the elevator with 12 passengers started up. When between the sixth and fifth floors the steel cable snapped and the cage dropped 50 feet through the floor above the cellar of the building and was stopped by a braced post of wood. In this inaccessible position the passengers were jammed under broken timbers and twisted steel. Barely had the crash ended when the heavy iron balance weights fell on the victims. All but four occupants of the car had fallen out into the basement. The others were pinioned under the heavy weight. Albert Meyer was held prisoner under the car for an hour. Whisky, water and words of encouragement were passed to him. A fireman crawled down and held his head until he was released.

Prof. L. H. Giles, an instructor in the Pennsylvania Electro Mechanical institute, who was running the elevator, was arrested on a charge of allowing the car to be overcrowded. The ball was given under the auspices of Prof. Giles' school.

Beckham Friday afternoon issued an order designating 30 members of Company C, of Lexington; 30 members of the Shelbyville company and 40 members of the Louisville batteries with one Gatling gun to do duty in Jackson during the grand jury investigation of the Marcum assassination.

Louisville, Ky., May 23.—Maj. John H. Mansir, commander of the First Kentucky artillery battalion, received orders Friday to send 40 infantrymen to Lexington with a Gatling gun Sunday morning where they will join the infantry and proceed to Jackson. The troops will be commanded by Col. Rogers D. Williams, of the Second regiment, and will leave Lexington at 1 o'clock Sunday morning for Jackson, Ky.

SAYS HE'S A NICE MAN.

She Is Now Sorry She Sued Grubbs For Breach of Promise.

Frankfort, Ky., May 22.—The case of W. E. Grubbs vs. Nancy Vance, from Boyle county, recently affirmed by the court of appeals, is a breach of promise suit in which Miss Vance secured judgment in the lower court for $300. She has just written to the court of appeals asking that the Grubbs petition for a rehearing be granted or else "just drop the case," as she says Grubbs is a nice man; that her conscience hurts her and she does not want his $300. Of course, the court can take no cognizance of her letter, but if she wishes to do so she can give the $300 back to Grubbs when he pays it to her by order of the court.

ONE FEUD ENDED.

The Reason Is That Only a Single Member Is Now Surviving.

Sergent, Ky., May 22.—"Boys, I'm killed; better give up," were the words with which John Roberts sought to end a feud of many years' standing. The Roberts and Gardner families have long been at outs, and a few days ago the Roberts side sent a challenge to the Gardners. Thursday they met at a "blind tiger," and indulged freely in liquor before beginning hostilities. When the shooting began John Roberts fell, advising his friends to quit. For 20 minutes, however, the fire was kept up. Finally Flex and Wm. Gardner fell mortally wounded, and Will Roberts, brother of John, the only surviving member of the Roberts family who was unhurt, has declared himself satisfied.

Owensboro, Ky., May 22.—Mrs. M. Dowell, of Louisville, married for months, arrived here Thursday in search of her husband. He has not been seen for three days, and opinion is divided as to whether he has left for parts unknown or has committed suicide.

May Need Two Companies.

Frankfort, Ky., May 22.—Gov. Beckham is still in Owensboro, and at the adjutant general's office it is announced that so far no orders have been issued to send troops to Breathitt. It is believed that Judge Redwine will request at least two companies of soldiers.

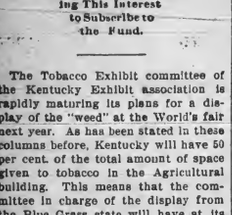
DISPLAY OF THE WEED.



Kentucky Tobacco Signally Honored by Fair Officials.

ALL GROWERS TO SEND IN SAMPLES.

Premium Specimens From the Different Tobacco Fairs Will Contribute to the Success of the Exhibit — A Special Sub-Finance Committee Asking This Interest to Subscribe to the Fund.

The Tobacco Exhibit committee of the Kentucky Exhibit association is rapidly maturing its plans for a display of the "weed" at the World's fair next year. As has been stated in these columns before, Kentucky will have 50 per cent. of the total amount of space given to tobacco in the Agricultural building. This means that the committee in charge of the display from the Blue Grass state will have at its disposal 5,000 square feet.

Mr. Chas. D. Campbell, the chairman of this committee, proposes to make the exhibit not only instructive and valuable, but strikingly original. At the next meeting of his committee he will present a plan that will contemplate securing from every tobacco grower in the state—and there are something like 30,000 of them—a sample of premium tobacco. He is not making public the scheme of his exhibit, but enough of it is known for us to assure the public that every tobacco grower who contributes a sample will be given full credit in the display for his donation, and will be proud of the fact that he has contributed a good specimen.

Mr. Campbell has a committee consisting of about a score of the state's best known tobacco people, representing every distinctive type of this Kentucky product. He has recently issued a letter to the members, asking each to secure in his district, 30 samples with the name of the donor on each sample, and to represent in the samples collected each grade of tobacco from trash to fine leaf. These samples will consist of 15 hands. They may be from the 1902 crop or the 1903 crop. In case they are from the former, they will have to be delivered in Louisville before Oct. 1. If from the latter, not until March 1 next year. A committee of three is to be appointed by Mr. Campbell to secure samples from all the tobacco fairs held in Kentucky between this date and March 1, 1904.

The General Finance committee of the association believes that the tobacco growers, dealers and warehouse men and manufacturers will be willing to contribute handsomely to the fund that will make possible a perfect exhibit of Kentucky tobacco. It has elected Colonel Sam H. Stone, of Louisville, chairman of a special subcommittee on tobacco, and Colonel Stone has appointed as his associates quite a large number of prominent tobacconists in different sections of the state. A meeting of several of these was held recently in Louisville when it was decided to make every endeavor to raise $5,000 among the tobacco interests of the state. A systematic and vigorous campaign for funds is to be inaugurated at once.

The Missouri Commission of the World's fair has set aside $30,000 for the casting in bronze, for permanent preservation in Forest park, of the statue of Napoleon, to be executed by Daniel C. French, of Jefferson, by J. Q. A. Ward, and of the statue symbolical of Missouri, which will occupy a place in the Terrace of States. The statue of Napoleon and Jefferson will stand at the edge of the Grand Basin respectively west and south of the Administration building and east and south of the Electricity building.

COMMISSARY.

May 30.—Dance at Harry Acra's, last Saturday night.

Leomer Louden and wife entertained his brother, Jesse Louden, last Sunday.

Richard Louden and family were the guests of Richard Lacy and family, last Sunday.

James and Will Rogers and wives, and W. B. Walton and wife, were Sunday guests of T. J. Walton and wife.

Heavieat rain fell at the Commissary on Tbursday night of last week, that has fallen here in one day or night for 25 years.

Mrs. Frank Cantwell, of Ind., Mrs. Rose Louden, of Middle Creek, and Mrr. Geo. Ranes, of Lost Section, were guests of Mrs. P. J. Nettles, last Sunday.

Mrs. T. J. Walton was at Rising Sun, one day last week, and on Monday of this week, having some dental work done.

News reached the Commissary last Sunday evening of the death of Lester Cantwell, of Indiana. He was at one time a resident of Boone county, and lived on Middle Creek, and in the vicinity of East Bend.

Fred McAtee and wife, of Wilmington, Ind., were visiting his father, Jas. McAtee, from Thursday until Saturday, when they returned home accompanied by Mrs. McAtee's mother, Mrs. James Louden, of McVille, for a week's visit and recreation.

Mrs. Charles Burns and daughter, Carrie, sole owners of the Excelsior Weaving establishment in McVille, have moved their machinery to their larger and more commodious building and are now better prepared than ever to accommodate the public in their line of business.

Many thanks, Mrs. T. J. Walton, for the nice strawberries and mug of cream sent me by your nice little boys, Willie and Joe, and the dish of the same sent last Monday evening. There is no one that has better and kinder neighbors than I, and there is no one who does more kind and accommodating acts for his neighbors than I, and they show their appreciation by giving me sausage at hog killing time, cooked parsnips in their season, (of which I am very fond) pies and cakes, strawberries and ice cream. There is never anything lost by an act of kindness, but much to be gained. Kindness is a language peculiar to itself, one the blind can see, and the deaf, hear.

Charles Burns and family, of McVille, were considerably run down at the heel in health early in the spring. Being an agent, I persuaded them to try the Elixir of life, and they decided to try a years treatment, and while they have been taking it but a short time, they have very much improved in health and prosperity. James Louden noting their improved condition ordered a year's treatment, as himself and wife are not enjoying the best of health. The remedy is put up in bottles containing 52 doses, enough for one year, as it only requires one dose per week, and is sold at $1.50 per bottle. The Elixir of life (Boone County Recorder) is one of the best known remedies for dispepsia, rheumatism, gout, blues, lumbago, liver and kidney trouble, spavin, ringbone, splints, and all kindred diseases human flesh is heir to. The Elixir of life can be procured by calling on Geo. Thomas, at the Commissary, or addressing him at Burlington, or direct from the manufacturer, W. L. Riddell, Burlington, Ky., but you must instruct him to credit the sale to the Commissary agent.

Mrs. Claud Popham, nee Miss Lou Cotton, died in Illinois last week, and was buried at Aurora. Her husband was a son of Jno. Popham. They had been married just six weeks.

MIDWAY.

J. L. Jones' little son, David, has measles.

Farmers are, generally, done setting tobacco.

Allie Roter and wife were in the city last week, shopping.

William Brown, our smallpox patient, is getting about well. No new cases.

Harry Roter was visiting friends in Rising Sun, Ind., several days last week.

Our old favorite, William Holden, of Walton, is painting Mrs. Susan Underhill's house.

Several friends from the city were visiting Peter Krause, last Saturday and Sunday.

The heavy rain, last Friday night, did considerable damage to the Beaver and Big Bone pike.

Dr. Mal Hu occupied the pulpit at Hughes' Chapel, Sunday morning and night, and preached at Big Bone, M. E. church Sunday evening. A large crowd considering the bad weather.

His Last Hope Realized.

In the first opening of Oklahoma to settlers in 1889, the editor of this paper was among the many seekers after fortune who made the big race one fine day in April. During his traveling about and afterwards his campaign upon his claim, he encountered much bad water, which, together with the severe heat, gave him a very severe diarrhoea which it seemed almost impossible to check, and along in June the case became so bad he expected to die. One day one of his neighbors bought him one small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic Cholera, and Diarrhoea Remedy as a last hope. A big dose was given him while he was rolling about on the ground in great agony, and in a few minutes the dose was repeated. The good effect of the medicine was soon noticed and within an hour the patient was taking his first sound sleep for a fortnight. That one little bottle worked a complete cure, and he cannot help but feel grateful. The season for bowel disorders being at hand suggests this item. For sale by all Druggists.

IDLEWILD.

Idlewild is glad to report good health.

Mrs. Lizzie Huey, of Union, visited her relatives here this week.

Clifford Hedges sold to Edgar Graves a fine harness horse, for $150.

A small, black hog destroyed many tobacco plants for our farmers.

W. K. Gaines sells nice, large strawberries, [illegible] for 25 cents.

Mrs. Zeke Rice, of Bellev[illegible] visiting her mother and sisters near here.

Mrs. L. Gaines entertained sister Sproles and Mrs. Sallie Huey, a few days since.

We extend our sympathy to the family of Fountain Riddell, of Burlington, in their bereavement.

Mrs. A. Stephens, of Hebron, was the guest of her son Charles and wife, near here last week, and called on several of her friends in this neighborhood.

CONSTANCE.

Mrs. Chas. Kottmyer has pneumonia.

W. Grimsley, of Newport, was in town Sunday.

A. Frabel has moved into part of the house occupied by his brother.

Bro. Thomas, we think your reply to our opinion of your proposed contest was a most miserable flicker. You had better flicker again and flicker out. It is strange a person can not express his honest opinion of anything without having some slur thrown at him that would better fit under the nose of his assailant. It seems that if such a contest is gotten up you intend to be IT, just simply because you made the proposition. You well know that what I said are facts that can not be truthfully denied, and no one knows better than you that it had no such meaning as you tried to picture in your miserable flicker. You are continually accusing some one of misrepresenting. As to being afraid to risk the home opinion of the people on my writing, I will say that I am not ignorant enough to think that I am the best writer, or that I could in any way win a prize therefor. It would be foolish in me to enter a contest in which I know I have no chance of winning. As to yourself, I honestly believe if you have any idea of winning in such a contest that you intend to do so through the three unfair reasons which I gave.

A CHANGE OF FAITH.

The Presbyterians Unanimously Adopt a New Confession.

Infant Damnation Is Ousted From the Creed—Three Additional Chapters Are Added to Confession Concerning the Love of God.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 29.—The Presbyterian church of the United States in general assembly by unanimous vote Thursday adopted the revision of the confession of faith as prepared by the committee appointed by the general assembly in 1901. The "Tennessee overture" in regard to "separate presbyteries in the same territory," which was commonly known as the "colored question" of the Presbyterian church, was referred to a committee and the report of the special committee on divorce and remarriage was adopted.

Protests from Lehigh and from St. Cloud presbyteries were thrown out by vote.

Dr. Van Dyke then proceeded with the report of the revision committee. He read the detailed vote on each of the 11 overtures, which showed that no one overture had received more than ten negative votes. The overtures were voted on seriatim and adopted. But one voice in the negative was heard, and this on overtures 5, 6 and 7.

By the adoption of the 11 overtures, important additions, amplifications and amendments are made to the articles of the confession of faith.

Infant damnation is ousted from the creed in the following words: "That concerning those who are saved in Christ, the doctrine of God's eternal decree is held in harmony with the doctrine of His love to all mankind. . . . That it is not to be regarded as teaching that any who die in infancy are lost. We believe that all dying in infancy are included in the election of grace and are regenerated and saved by Christ, through the spirit, who works where and how he pleases."

For section 6, chapter xxv. of Confession of Faith, the following is substituted: "The Lord Jesus Christ is the only head of the church and the claim of any man to be the vicar of Christ and the head of the church is unscriptural without warrant in fact and is an usurpation dishonoring to the Lord Jesus Christ."

Three additional chapters are added to the confession concerning the "Love of God for all men, missions and holy spirit."

Dr. Minton, chairman of the revision committee, spoke briefly and was followed by Dr. Charles A. Dickey, who said that the adoption of this report was an omen of speedy union or, at least, speedy unity of all the presbyterians in this country, and a step toward Protestant unity.

On motion of Moderator Coyle the report of the revision committee was adopted by unanimous vote, and the next 20 minutes was spent in song and prayer.

THE TEXTILE WORKERS.

A General Strike in Philadelphia Will Take Place Monday.

Philadelphia, May 30.—Although the strike of the textile workers of Philadelphia for a 55 hour week was set for Monday, the suspension was begun at quitting time Friday night. During the day the employes of the eight mills stopped work before the closing hour, making 12 mills already on strike. The hands at one mill were locked out. Reports received at the headquarters of the textile workers up to midnight show that 37 firms out of nearly 500 in the city had agreed to reduce the hours of the workers from 60 to 55 a week. Members of the textile workers' executive committee say that the strike will be more general than the manufacturers believe. They say that fully 60,000 persons will refuse to go to work on Monday unless their demands are granted. The manufacturers feel confident that the men will not win the strike.

THEY COMPROMISED.

Trouble Between Freight Handlers and Railroads at Chicago Settled.

Chicago, May 30.—The trouble between the freight handlers and the railroads entering Chicago was virtually settled Friday night. The management of the Lake Shore road took the initiative and made a proposition to their men which was accepted. The men in their demands asked for a wage increase of 25 per cent. At a meeting Friday night the officials of the road offered to compromise the difficulty with an increase that averages a little more than four per cent. After considering the matter for several hours the men agreed to the proposition and each side signed the contract. The new scale goes into effect June 1 and is to exist for one year.

STRIKER SHOT AND KILLED.

B. Kentch, a non-union boxmaker, was fatally stabbed. McWilliams and Dick Kilders, also a union foundryman, were going to a labor meeting when they met Kentch and Ed Todd. A quarrel was started in which Kentch was stabbed, and as he sank to the ground two shots were fired, killing McWilliams. It is not known who shot McWilliams, but all three of the surviving participants of the encounter are under arrest.

TO BE REINFORCED.

Danville Company Receives Orders to Go to Jackson, Ky.

Two Corporals Court-Martialed For Passing Through the Lines and For Sleeping on Duty—Troops Are Badly Worn Out.

Jackson, Ky., May 28.—The special grand jury Wednesday afternoon began investigation of the assassination of City Marshal James Cockrill here last July.

Jackson, Ky., May 29.—The frustration of what the troops believe was a plot to rescue or kill Curtis Jett and Tom Waite Wednesday night increased tension in Jackson Thursday. How many men were involved beside the one fired on and who returned the sentry's fire, and what relation the incident had to the playing of a search light on the jail grounds from a nearby mountain side earlier in the night are questions in which actual interest is felt.

The illness of Judge Redwine put a new phase on the entire situation. If his condition grows worse a special judge will probably be appointed. The attempt to remove the special bailiff, B. J. Little, is a matter of much interest. The grounds offered are that his brother married Mrs. E. Marcum's sister and that the relationship might influence him in the discharge of the duties of sheriff.

The Gatling gun squad remained on duty all night and momentarily expected to be called on to repel an attack. Very few of the soldiers slept at all.

Capt. B. J. Ewen, star witness in the Marcum investigation, shook the dust of Jackson from his feet Thursday, both hurriedly and unceremoniously.

Lexington, Ky., May 30.—Orders were issued at midnight to send more troops to Jackson. Col. Roger Williams, who was called to Lexington by business Friday night, received a cipher message from Maj. Embry Allen, who is in command in his absence, stating the necessity for more men. Col. Williams immediately conferred with Gov. Beckham, who approved the call. Col. Williams then called Capt. Lillard, of the Danville company, by telephone and ordered him to immediately assemble his men preparatory to coming to Lexington on a train, arriving at 6 o'clock. The company left here for Jackson at 7:40 a. m., arriving there at 11. Capt. Lillard said he could bring 40 men. They were assembled and held at the Danville armory Friday night.

Col. Williams later sent an order to Louisville for the company there to be held in readiness for orders to move in case further reinforcements are needed. The message from Maj. Allen did not state what prompted the requisition for more men. Col. Williams said:

"It is true that the men there have been heavily taxed in the rigid patrol duty required, and more men will relieve this. However, I will not surmise as to what development or anticipation of what development actuated Maj. Allen."

Many people in Lexington construe the call for more troops as confirmation of the rumors that a force of men who proposed to rescue Curtis Jett and White was being recruited in the interior of Breathitt county.

Jackson, Ky., May 30.—Jackson was quiet Friday night and had been throughout the day. Not a shot was fired and the soldiers anticipate no trouble. The guards are pretty badly worn out on account of continued service. Corps. Jones and Ragland were court-martialed on account of passing through the lines in four instances and sleeping on duty in the second. Jones had been on duty 48 hours. The verdict in both cases was kept secret.

Jackson, Ky., June 1.—Commonwealth's Attorney Byrd and Attorney Thomas Marcum, brother of the man whom Jett and White are accused of assassinating, who will assist in the prosecution, held a conference Sunday night and formally announced that the trials of the men would be held at this term of court. Byrd said, finally, that he would not request or recommend a change of venue. He says that the moral effect produced by the presence of the troops would be lost and the danger to witnesses, if there is danger, would be increased. Jurors will be secured from some other county.

It is believed that the defense will try for a continuance.

Capt. R. A. Burton, of Shelbyville, preached in a local church Sunday afternoon. A few soldiers who could be spared attended.

So far as can be observed, the returning of a second indictment against Jett, charging him with James Cockrill's murder has not affected his peace of mind. The sentries on Sunday night were looking for the search-light which was seen again Saturday night. The soldiers hope to locate it. The town was quite Sunday.

FLOODS IN THE WEST.

Twelve Square Miles of Kansas City, Mo., and Suburbs Are Under Water.

A NUMBER OF LIVES WERE LOST.

Several Fires Broke Out in Flooded District and a Great Conflagration is Threatened.

The City Without Water Supply as the Flood Having Disabled the Pumping Station—Railroad Traffic Is Almost Paralyzed.

Kansas City, Mo., June 1.—A message from Kansas City, Kan., by way of Leavenworth at 2 o'clock Monday morning says that 27 men were on the Union Pacific iron bridge which spanned the Kansas river when it went down, and all of the men were drowned. It is said that many persons saw the helpless men drowned.

Kansas City, Mo., June 1.—With the waters of the Kaw and Missouri rivers nearly four feet above the disastrous level of 1881 and their swollen tide spread over 12 square miles of the city and its suburbs, Kansas City Sunday night endured the worst flood of its history.

In the valley of the Kaw or Kansas river, between this city and Kansas City, Kan., a report has it that a number of lives have been lost. One report says 14 and another 30, but in the midst of demoralization of traffic and the ordinary means of communication it is impossible to verify these reports.

Twelve bodies were counted as they floated past during the day. In nearly every instance they were lying across pieces of wreckage. On the roof of a cabin that came swirling down could be seen the body of a woman and her child.

The financial loss has been increasing all day and bids fair to continue. The heaviest loss is at Armourdale, where the losses to the packing industry and others is placed conservatively at $2,500,000. Argentine, another suburb, has suffered losses estimated at $500,000. Other losses which can not now be estimated will increase the total very materially.

Armourdale, with a population of 16,000 people, is deserted and its site marked only by the tops of buildings and a number of fires.

Seven fires, believed to be chiefly box cars burning, could be seen from the bluffs Sunday night. There is some danger that the flames will spread to the partially submerged buildings adding greatly to the already heavy loss. The fire started by the intrusion of the flood into a lime house.

AT ARGENTINE.

Two-Thirds of the Town Is Inundated, and Many Are Homeless.

The refugees from Armourdale for the most part are huddled together in the immense auditorium of the convention hall although several hundred found havens with friends in more fortunate parts of the city.

Two-thirds of Argentine is under from 10 to 20 feet of water. Over 4,500 people in this suburb found safety in the higher part of the town. All bridges over the Kaw river are down and the only communication with Armourdale is by boat.

Kansas City Sunday night was without a water supply, the flood having disabled the pumping station, and the utmost care is being taken that no fires shall break out. Even a small fire, it is feared, would start a conflagration. Only one street car line in the city was running Sunday night owing to the disabling of the power plants by the flood.

The city is blockaded with trains unable to get out. Not a train went out of the city except east Sunday and it is said that there is little prospect of an improvement in the situation for several days.

The stage of the river at 6 o'clock Sunday night was 30 feet 7 inches. The previous high record was made in 1881 when the river rose to 26 feet 3 inches.

The Union station by the rise of the flood Sunday was rendered practically useless. At one end the water was three feet deep and at the other it was a foot higher. In the baggage room baggage was fastened to tackle and suspended in the air out of the reach of the water. Numerous rescues, some of them made by the narrowest of margins, occurred during the day.

RAILROAD LOSS HEAVY.

Freight Cars Break Loose From Their Trucks and Float Away.

The Santa Fe railroad loss is very heavy, but can scarcely be estimated until the flood abates. The railroad has 100 miles of track in the Argentine yards and several miles of freight cars stand submerged. Some cars have broken loose from their trucks and floated down the river. The current has left the old channel and has moved south, taking all the buildings in its path. The Santa Fe track is under water all the way to Holliday, eight miles from Argentine, up the Kansas river valley. The Turner bridge, three miles above Argentine, went out at 10:30 o'clock Sunday morning. Its wreckage lodged against the county bridge at Argentine, which succumbed at noon. The Belt line steel railroad bridge fell immediately afterward. Then in succession the Twenty-fourth street bridge and the county bridge at Fifth street were carried away. The railroad bridge was valued at $75,000 and the other four at $25,000 each, making the bridge loss $175,000. Five hundred frame dwelling houses are under water, and with a further rise many people lined the banks Sunday watching the procession of houses, cars, trees and other debris that floated down.

At 6 o'clock Sunday evening eight distinct fires were burning in the flood district between 11th and Bluff streets, three blocks west of the Union depot and Toad-a-loup, the latter a settlement near Armourdale. It is impossible to reach any of the fires as telephone communication is cut off and the use of boats are uncertain. The fires were viewed through a field glass from the top of a high building on the bluff. All the fires appear to be isolated except one at 11th and Bluff streets, which started in a lime warehouse and spread to a fruit warehouse. Close to the fruit house, which is still burning, is a shed containing 30 barrels of oil. If this should catch fire the flames might spread to the wholesale district.

At Toad-a-loup three blocks of small buildings appear to be burning, while at another a big string of box cars are afire.

THE FLOOD AT TOPEKA.

The Loss of Life Is Placed at 250—Property Loss Enormous.

Topeka, Kan., June 1.—Leading men have made a careful examination of the flood and all its conditions in this city and as a result of their investigation they give 250 as the probable number of lives lost. A more conservative estimate places the number of dead at 175. The higher number is as apt to be correct as the lower. The number of dead is merely a matter of estimate. Twenty members of rescuing parties tell of how they saw people drop from houses only to be swept away by the flood and others tell of men who, terrified at the approach of the fire, dropped into the water where they sank and did not reappear.

This estimated number of dead does not include the large number classed as missing, who can not otherwise be accounted for. Neither does it include the number who are supposed to have lost their lives in the fire. In the latter class there is absolutely no means of arriving at even an approximate number of victims.

Two hundred houses were burned Saturday in the flooded district owing to no fire protection. The property loss from this and the flood up to the present will aggregate over $4,000,000.

Fifty big blocks are almost ready to crumble owing to the action of the water. Eight thousand people are homeless.

At 11 p. m. Sunday the lumber yard in North Topeka was again burning. Houses are burned out on each side of the lumber yard, and the fire is not expected to spread. Twelve engines and cars loaded with scrap iron have been loaded on to the Santa Fee bridge and although a great mass of wreckage is pressing against the bridge it is holding its own.

Two women and a baby were drowned Sunday night by the capsizing of a boat. They had been rescued by Chas. Estes and Miles Sawyer at the foot of Monroe street. These young men made 26 trips out into the river after refugees Sunday.

THE WORK OF RESCUERS.

For Hours Knee Deep in Water and Frequently Up to Their Necks.

The ardor of the rescue work of the heroic rescuers was not abated in the least by the conditions which confronted them. For long dreary hours, knee deep in water and some times in water up to their necks, they worked with might and main. Sunday night they can probably point to 300 or more rescued ones who otherwise might have been swept away in the current. Many of those rescued were taken from the tops of houses and treetops.

Large contributions have already been received for the benefit of the sufferers. The amount given by Topeka citizens alone will aggregate $100,000. To this is to be added an immense quantity of clothing, provisions and general supplies. Outside towns have generously offered aid, notably among which is Galveston, Tex.

There is ground for hope that the worst has passed. So treacherous has the Kansas river proved itself Sunday in the rising of the water Sunday night so slowly as to be imperceptible the five mile stream is settling back into its rightful channel. Up and down the official gauge has fluttered all day. Sunday night, however, City Engineer McGable issued a bulletin giving out the cheering intelligence that the waters had subsided to the extent of exactly 7½ inches.

SITUATION AT OTTUMWA, Ia.

The Flood Is Two Feet Higher There Than Ever Before.

Des Moines, Ia., June 1.—A telegram from Ottumwa late Sunday afternoon stated that the situation there is most critical. The flood is two feet higher than ever before and the business district is completely invaded with disastrous effect. Railway traffic is completely tied up. THE BLIND PROPHET.

He Declares That a Fearful Storm Will Visit Ohio in August.

Findlay, O., June 1.—According to George W. Jacobs, known throughout Northwestern Ohio as "The Blind Prophet," next August will see numberless acres of land, villages, towns and cities laid waste before one of the fiercest cyclonic storms that ever raged in the region of the lower lakes. He says it will leave death and desolation in its wake, and will rival the Galveston and Johnstown horrors.

The acquaintances to whom Jacobs has made this prophecy are almost beside themselves with fear. Their faith in Jacobs is made firm as a result, it is said, of his having pictured to them President McKinley prostrate from a wound inflicted by an assassin six weeks before the Buffalo tragedy.

Jacobs has lived in Findlay since the war. He receives a small pension, with a monthly allowance from a fund established by a citizen of Findlay, now deceased, for the needy blind.

MORMON DEFIANCE.

Brigham H. Roberts Hurled It at the World at the Tabernacle.

Salt Lake, Utah, June 1.—Brigham H. Roberts hurled a Mormon defiance to the entire United States in the tabernacle Sunday afternoon, and in an address remarkable for its eloquence, sarcasm and denunciation scored the Presbyterian general assembly, which has been in session in Los Angeles.

Mormonism, he said, has come to stay. He referred with withering sarcasm to the warning uttered by one of the delegates at the general assembly last week, who likened Mormonism to an octopus and said that it can not be civilized, reformed nor educated, but it must be crushed and that the time to strike is now.

"The Church of Jesus Christ, or Latter Day Saints, occupies a position so exalted that it can smile at the efforts of men to crush it or destroy it," he said. "The aimless reasoning and impotent utterances of these men are shafts that fall harmless at the feet of God. They can not deal with us according to the ordinary laws of civilization. Mormonism can not be reached through civilization, education or reform."

SWEPT BY FIRE.

A $300,000 Loss in the Manufacturing District in Racine, Wis.

Racine, Wis., June 1.—Fire Sunday afternoon swept the southern manufacturing district of Racine, doing $300,000 damage. The main losses follow: Racine Boat Manufacturing Co., factory, lumber, $100,000; J. I. Case threshing machine shops, $150,000; Standard Oil Co., tanks and sheds, $25,000. Half a dozen residences and small factories, $25,000.

The fire started in the boiler room of the Racine Boat Manufacturing Co. and before the firemen had arrived a tank of gasoline which was stored near by for use in the gasoline boats built by the company exploded. A tower of flame 300 feet high shot up into the air, but as it was Sunday no one was about the factories and no one was injured.

Two Negroes and a White Boy Killed and a Third Terribly Beaten.

Pittsburg, Pa., June 1.—Two Negroes and a white boy were killed and a third Negro terribly beaten in a quarrel over a game of craps at High Bridge, West Liberty, Sunday afternoon. The enraged mob of whites had the rope about the neck of the third Negro and were dragging him to a tree to lynch him when he was rescued by officers.

Both sides had revolvers and during the battle a hundred or more shots were fired. The quarrel was the result of an attempt on the part of the white boys to break the crap game.

STATE NEWS PICK-UPS.

LOCKED THE CHURCH DOORS.

A Constable Searched the Armed Worshiper at White Oak.

Greenup, Ky., May 28.—At Big White Oak a large congregation had gathered at the church for public worship. Just as the minister had read his text Constable Nando Feity announced that several persons present had pistols on their persons, and that he proposed to make a search. He locked the doors, whereupon about 20 young men jumped out of the windows and began a promiscuous and indiscriminate shooting. The entire neighborhood was terrorized and the meeting broken up.

The constable captured Jackson Bundy and Conrad Lucas and brought them to the Greenup jail. Tuesday Lucas pleaded guilty in quarterly court, and Judge Bennett fined him $25 and ten days in the county jail. Bundy will be tried later.

Feity has returned to the neighborhood, and says he will not rest until all the offenders are punished. No one seems to know what so many armed men were doing in the church, unless it was a spirit of devility, as no one seemed to be quarrelling.

DR. SAMUEL S. SCOTT.

Dr. S. S. Scott, who died at Erlanger, Friday, May 22, 1903, was born December 12, 1820, near the village of Poplar Grove, Owen County, Ky., and was taken by his parents to Gallatin (now Carroll) County, near Ghent. His father, Robert M. Scott, resided during most of his life in Carroll County, and followed the business of manufacturing flour and lumber, and was a man of fine natural ability and of wide influence. Carroll County continued to be his home, except for short intervals, until he was nearly twenty-five years of age. His grandfather Scott was a native of the north of Ireland, and emigrated from Belfast about 1790, settling at Lexington, where he taught school for some time. He served as a Lieutenant in Wayne's campaign against the Indians in the Northwest. His grandfather Garvey enlisted in the army and served through the Revolutionary war, being present at the surrender of Yorktown. Dr. Scott was kept in the best schools of the country until his sixteenth year, when through the friendship of George N. Sanders, he secured a cadetship at West Point; but about that time met with an accident maiming one of his hands, rendering him ineligible.

At the age of seventeen he began to clerk in the store of his uncle, John C. Lindsay, at Ghent; and while engaged in that capacity, frequently met Lewis Sanders and his son, George N. Sanders, and heard them discuss politics with the Whig leaders, and there laid the foundation of his attachment to the famous dogma of State Sovereignty. In 1844, he was with George N. Sanders on the Committee of Correspondence on the subject of Texas annexation, appointed at a meeting held at Ghent. That affair, in which he was one of the actors, became the turning point in the lives of several distinguished politicians, and, to some extent gave a new aspect to the political organization of the country.

In February, 1850, Col. Theodore O'Hara wrote him from Washington City to know how many men could be recruited in Carroll County to aid in an expedition to liberate Cuba, at the same time communicating to him the plans which had been arranged by Gen. Lopez, himself and others concerned in the scheme. He at once espoused the Cuban cause, and, with the aid of Major William Hardy (afterward Dr. Hardy), he raised two hundred and twenty-five men, with whom they embarked for New Orleans on April 4th of that year. Those with twenty-five others, made the Kentucky regiment in the first Lopez expedition. Theodore O'Hara was its Colonel; and T. T. Hawkins and William Hardy were its Majors. Dr. Scott was senior surgeon. The recruiting was conducted in great secrecy, none of the men knowing that they were not going to California. On the coast of Yucatan they were joined by Lopez, with the rest of the expedition. They shortly after landed the whole force, in the night, at Cardenas. At the first fire of the sentinel, O'Hara was wounded and carried to the rear. But, after a short contest, the garrison and Governor were surrendered to Lopez. But being repulsed during several engagements of the day, they embarked on the following night on the Creole, and, in a deplorable condition landed at Key West. The expedition, though one of the most daring and exciting in the annals of modern warfare, had for its result the usual fate of such adventures.

At the opening of the civil war, his principles led him to take the side of the South. In 1860, as the result of a correspondence with William L. Yancy, that noted Southern leader came to Kentucky and delivered a speech at Florence. He used every exertion to induce Kentucky to go with the South, and, failing in his purpose, went to recruiting for the Confederate army, raising the greater part of Capt. A. S. Medari's company of Col. Roger Hanson's regiment. He served as a private in that company for several months, but was engaged most of the time in recruiting up to the fall of 1861. He finally reported to Dr. David Yandell, Medical Director of Bowling Green, and was appointed surgeon to one of the hospitals there, but was soon after made surgeon of Major Philfer's battalion of Arkansas cavalry.

While acting in that capacity, he was elected, without his knowledge, as member of the famous "Council of Ten," the legislative body of the "Provisional Government" of Kentucky, to fill the place of Gen. Geo. B. Hodge. He remained with the "Council" until after the battle of Shiloh, still holding his position in the medical service. He was subsequently ordered to Eastern Kentucky, and became surgeon of the Fourth Kentucky Cavalry, under Humphrey Marshall, with which he remained in the capacity of surgeon, brigade surgeon, surgeon of division, and, for a time, medical director of the Department of Southwest Virginia and East Tennessee, until Col. Giltner marched to Mt. Sterling to surrender, in 1865. He then, with a small party, joined Gen. Breckinridge in North Carolina, and was among the last to surrender.

He then returned to Kentucky and resumed the practice of his profession, having graduated in the Medical Department of Transylvania University in 1842. In 1853 he graduated from the Medical College of Ohio.

In politics he was a straight-out Jeffersonian Democrat, and in 1877 was one of the electors on the Tilden ticket, receiving nearly 200 votes more than anyother district elector in the State.

Several years ago he moved to Erlanger and resided with his son, Robert J. Scott, who with his wife, gave his father the tenderest care in his declining years. So attached was he to Boone county and her people that he refused to surrender his citizenship here, and continued to exercise the right of suffrage in Florence voting precinct so long as he was able to go to the polls.

Dr. Scott was a man of great strength of character, and never forsook a friend nor abandoned a cause he once espoused. He was naturally a leader, and was one of those men who would always come to the surface in public emergencies, and was a fine specimen of independent manhood.

[The child in the above picture is that of Henrietta Evelyn, the two-year old daughter of R. J. Scott, to which her grand-father was devoted in his declining years.]

THE Democratic party believes in home rule—All Wrong Young don't—hence he is not a proper person for chairman of the party's managing committees.

THE Seventeenth Annual Session of the Kentucky Chautauqua will be held at Woodland Park, Lexington, June 30 to July 10, inclusive. One of the best programs ever offered will be given.

The Court of Appeals reversed the life sentence in the case of John Hensley, convicted of the murder of Bud Speirs, in Breathitt county, last March. The appellant claimed he was forced into trial on the day the indictment was returned against him.

MR. ALL WRONG YOUNG could render the Democratic party in Kentucky an invaluable service by stepping down and out as Chairman of the State Central and the State Executive committees.

RECENT developments indicate that the make-up of the Postoffice Department at Washington, and that of the Missouri legislature, are very similar in the matter of accepting bribes.

RECENT actions of Mr. Allie Young indicate that, instead of his considering himself a servant of the Democratic party in Kentucky, he is laboring under the hallucination that he is the sole owner and proprietor of that party.

FOUNTAIN RIDDELL.

"God's Finger Touched Him and he Slept."

The town and community are in mourning on account of the death of one of its best citizens, Fountain Riddell, which occurred May 30th, 1903, at 11:35 o'clock a. m.

He was born two and one-half miles north east of Burlington, Ky., January 9th, 1833, and lived all of his life in Boone County. He was a son of John and Florenda (McKay) Riddell, natives of Virginia and Kenton County, Ky., respectively.

Fountain Riddell was reared on the farm. He read law under Judge A. S. Downey in Asbury University, Indiana, and with James W. Calvert, of Burlington. He began the practice of his chosen profession in 1858, and it was not long before he acheived a marked degree of success. By reason of his devotion to his clients and his unerring integrity, his practice became both large and lucrative, and he commanded the respect of all with whom he came in contact.

In politics, always a democrat, his party, in 1859, elected him to the legislature, consequently he served through the exciting and trying called sessions of 1860 and 1861 (the beginning of the civil war), being the youngest member of that body.

Upon the organization of the Boone County Deposit Bank, in January, 1886, he was unanimously selected its president, and served in that capacity until April 6th, 1903, when he resigned on account of his failing health As president of the bank, he served both that institution and its patrons with the same untiring energy and honesty that characterized his whole life.

The writer feels that he is especially qualified to testify to Mr. Riddell's sterling qualities as a citizen, friend, husband and father, having known him since 1859, and for the last 18 years that acquaintance has been of the most intimate and confidential character. In all these years no man could gainsay the statement that he

"Bore without abuse
The grand old name of gentleman."

The entire county can bear witness to Mr. Riddell's many good qualities as a man, neighbor and citizen, but, to those of us that knew something of his home life, was given the opportunity to see him at his best.

On March 10th, 1870, he married Miss Louesa Hawes, and four children were born to them, two having died in infancy and two, N. E. Riddell and Henrietta Riddell, remaining to share with a sorrowing mother the irreparable loss of a husband and father, who was ever proud of them. J. C. R.

Funeral Monday, June 1.

The funeral was conducted from residence at 2 p. m., by the Masonic order, of which he had been a member since December, 1858. A large number of brethren from the several lodges in the county participated in the beautiful ceremony, the pallbearers being the following brother Masons: Dudley Rouse, Geo. G. Hughes, F. P. Walton, O. W. Gaines, Dr. J. M. Grant and L. H. Voshell. The interment was in the cemetery north of town.

Action of Boone Co. Deposit Bank.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Boone County Deposit Bank held Monday, June 1, 1903, the following resolutions were adopted: Be it resolved,

1st. That in the death of Fountain Riddell his wife has lost a kind and faithful husband; his children, a good and indulgent father; the community, a most valuable citizen; the Boone County Deposit Bank, one of its most solicitous officers and friends. He was genial and kind in his intercourse with his associates on the Board of Directors for the past seventeen years. He so lived and acted as to challenge the respect and confidence of all who came in contact with him.

2d. That M. T. Garnett, Clinton Gaines, J. J. Rucker, D. Rouse, Edgar Cropper and J. C. Revill be appointed pall-bearers.

3d. That a page on the Minute Book of the Bank shall be dedicated to his memory with the following inscription:

"In Memory of Fountain Riddell, born January 9th, 1833, died May 30th, 1903. A learned lawyer, an incorruptable Bank official and gentleman."

An honest man—he was an ornament to the town and community in which he lived, and an honor to his race.

That a copy of these resolutions be given his family and also published in the Boone County Recorder.

Bar Meeting.

At a meeting of the Boone county bar called by Circuit Judge John M. Lassing, and held in the court house in Burlington at 10:30 o'clock a. m., Monday, June 1st, 1903, for the purpose of preparing resolutions of respect upon the death of one of its members, Fountain Riddell, who departed this life on May 30th, 1903.

Upon motion A. G. Winston was elected chairman, and A. B. Rouse, secretary. On motion and second the chair appointed the following committee on resolutions:—George G. Hughes. S. W. Tolin, and Judge John M. Lassing, who presented the following, which were adopted: Be it resolved by the members of the Boone county bar

That in the death of Fountain Riddell the profession has lost a shining light; his good wife, a devoted husband; his children, a kind, indulgent and loving father; his brothers and other kindred, one who through life always acted with an eye single to their good; and the community, a good citizen.

He has left a place among us which will not be filled. Born January 9th, 1833, he lived man's allotted time, and died May 30th, 1903. He lived all his life among us, and of him it can be well said that he was loved most by those who knew him best. He was an able lawyer as was attested by the success with which he met while actively engaged in his profession. Always honorable and fair, he commanded the respect of the court and the friendship of his brother lawyers.

He entered upon the practice of law, his chosen profession, in 1858, and was connected, at different times, with James W. Calvert, R. C. Green and H. P. Stephens as partners, and at the close of each of his respective partnerships, they stood his true and loyal friends, an evidence of the high plane upon which he conducted his profession.

He consented to make the race for the legislature in 1859, was elected and served during the turbulent session of 1860 and 1861 with marked credit to the wisdom of his constituents. Though often thereafter urged to do so by his party, he refused to seek or accept any office, stating that he preferred the quiet and peace of a home life to the honors which any office could give.

His constancy and devotion to his family was remarkable, and this fact will make his loss to them all the more severe.

We extend to them in this hour of sore affliction our heartfelt sympathy, and direct that a copy of these resolutions be furnished them and that they be published in the Boone County Recorder and spread at large on the records of the Boone Circuit, and the Boone County, courts, and that a page of record of each court be set aside to his memory.

The Chair having called for remarks, S. W. Tolin, Judge J. M. Lassing, Sidney Gaines, Jo. C. Revill, Judge P. E. Cason and A. G. Winston responded very appropriately.

Upon motion of Judge Lassing, A. G. Winston, S. W. Tolin, Sidney Gaines, Joc C. Revill, Judge P. E. Cason and J. W. Duncan were appointed honorary pall-bearers.

The county judge has placed in the hands of the overseers of roads printed instructions, which will be of material assistance to these officers in the performance of their duties if they will make themselves familiar therewith. There is no small position that gives a man a better opportunity to display good judgment, and fidelity to a public trust, than the humble office of overseer of public roads, and it is a pleasure to see so many who manifest a sense of the responsibility they assume when they accept the position. Good roads are indispensable to the prosperity of a county, and the men who spend the people's money in an effort to keep up and improve the public highways undertake a work the magnitude of which is great, and the result of their efforts are closely watched by a critical public that provides the funds, which should be expended in the most judicious manner.

The Certain Reward of Obeying God

Noah and His Ark as a Testimony Against This Generation.

Sermon by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher.

(Copyright, 1903, by J. M. Edson.)

Chicago, Sunday, May 31, 1903.

Text:—"Thus did Noah; according to all that God commanded him, so did he."—Gen. 6:22.

THE simple, direct statement of our text bears a wonderful tribute to the patriarch Noah. He obeyed God. This is the greatest testimony which can be borne of any soul. We who read the complete story of Noah's life and see plainly the reward of that obedience may be quick to exclaim: "How foolish and how fatal it would have been for him to do otherwise than all that the Lord commanded him." But if we will try to forget for the time being the glorious ark riding in safety on the crest of the mighty flood, bearing its living freight above the watery graves of those who refused to hear God's voice or heed His warnings, and stand with Noah when the command of God first came to him, we will see that only implicit faith in God could have given Noah the courage to act. Is it not probable as Noah saw the sun rising day after day, in his strength and glory, as his feet passed through his grain-laden fields, and bearing orchards, as he heard the music of the birds, as he beheld the busy rush of life all about him, people marrying and being given in marriage, commercial and industrial enterprises commanding and occupying the skill and energy and brains of mankind; is it not probable that Noah found it hard to believe and obey God? In obeying God he could not hope to secure the support or even indorsement of his neighbors and friends. Perhaps he knew that at first it would mean opposition in his own household.

BUT there were other things besides ridicule and opposition and persecution which would make the obeying of God no easy thing. He must give up personal plans and ambitions. It must not be supposed that, up to the time the command came to Noah, he had been standing around idly waiting for something to turn up. The Lord always seeks out the busy hands and brains to work for Him. He has no more love for the drone than has the employer whose success depends upon the industry of the men he employs.

And I, for one, believe that Noah was one of the most industrious and successful men of his time. He was respected and looked up to in the community. The godly life always commands the respect of the wicked. There is no doubt that the times in which Noah lived were distressingly bad, for the record preserved by God declares that "the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually."

But Noah lived an upright life, and his excellencies made him a commanding figure in the country in which he lived. He was an important and influential citizen, and as such was undoubtedly full of his own plans and ambitions. And so, when the command of the Lord came to him to turn from these things and build the ark, it doubtless cost him no little struggle to obey.

THE Christian has to meet the same conditions to-day in yielding obedience to God, but the reward is as certain as that which came to Noah. We see so clearly the glory which issued from Noah's obedience, that we forget that, when Noah performed the Lord's command, the reward of that obedience was still ahead of him, and unrealized, while the skepticism and opposition all about him strove to drive him from his task, and make him unhappy and rebellious under the command of the Lord. But he obeyed God in the face of it all, and reaped a sure reward of that obedience. This is the first thought which we wish to drive home to the heart of the Christian, yes, and to the unsaved soul, as well. Obeying God paves a safe roadway to final victory and glorious reward. To the Christian it leads to all the riches that are in the treasure house of God; it leads to the crown of life, the crown of righteousness, and the crown of glory. And to the unsaved soul it leads from the land of death to life and liberty in Christ Jesus. The one command to the unsaved is: Repent and believe on Jesus Christ. Obedience to this command reveals the reward of Eternal Life to the soul after that obedience is rendered. The soul that walks with Noah and does all that God commands it will not pass over an easy pathway, but the glory of the certain reward which rests at the other end tinges the horizon of the sky of life, and encourages and leads the soul on. It is no imaginary pot of gold at the end of the arching rainbow. That is what the world is chasing after. Man is obeying his own impulses and desires with the vision of the yellow gold drawing him on to the end of the rainbow of life, and when he comes to the end he finds it disappears, as the mirage in the desert fades before the disappointed gaze of the dying traveler. There is no sure reward awaiting the soul that obeys man rather than God, and that follows its own inclinations. It is always a case of the rainbow and the never-found pot of gold when God's commands are forgotten and disobeyed. But as surely as Noah rode in the ark on the flood which destroyed those who had derided him, so surely will the soul that yields obedience to the command of God ride above the storms and floods of life to the mountain top of blessing, and to him will come the olive branch of God's peace, and the rainbow of God's eternal presence will speak its reassuring message to his soul.

OBEYING God is expansive in its scope; it is elevating in its tendency. Look at Noah! His obedience to the commands of God involved the destiny of the whole human race to the present day. He did not build for himself and his family alone. He reared his ark that it might be a part in the great plan of God's redemptive work for man. The sound of his hammer is heard to-day, solemnly warning the world of another Judgment day to come. Christ used the story of Noah to drive home this very truth to His hearers. "As the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of Man be. For as in the days that were before the flood, they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noe entered into the ark, and knew not until the flood came, and took them all away; so shall also the coming of the Son of Man be." The world prides itself on its breadth of life, the scope of its activity, the largeness of its aims and ambitions, but, bless you, they are as narrow and sordid in breadth and scope and largeness in comparison with the life which unfolds in God's will as the planet on which we live is small and insignificant in comparison to the universe of which it is a part. To obey man's will is to limit the horizon of the life, and confine its possibilities to the few short years which mark the passage from the cradle to the grave. To obey God's will launches the soul on the limitless expanse of God's purpose in His vast universe and gives wind and sail to carry through the unending years of eternity.

OBEYING God is elevating in its tendency. It fixes the vision of the soul up above the things of life, it draws the soul on and on until at last it gains the presence of God. Who is supreme over all and above all. The world's wisdom tells you to aim high, and you will hit something; to fasten your chariot to a star. The possibilities of human aspirations are limited. The aim may be high, the star may be hitched on to, but what beyond these? The limit is reached, and disappointment crowds in at death. But the soul that obeys God is always on the up-grade. His destiny is not limited to human ambition or even the far, twinkling star, but with God Himself. Obedience to God is the only elevator line which passes through the realm of human possibilities into the regions of God's Heaven. Obedience to God lifts the vision from the center self and fixes it on the beacon light of God's unfailing blessing.

Alexander's ambition was to conquer the world, but death ended career and ambition, and loosened his grasp on the small part of the world which he was permitted to subdue. His ambition and hope ended in the dark, cold grave. Timour, the Tartar, desired a universal conquest, saying the earth was too small for more than one master. "It is too small to satisfy the ambition of a great soul," declared he. The sheik of Samarcand is said to have replied to him: "The ambition of a great soul is not to be satisfied by the possession of a morsel of earth added to another, but by the possession of God, Who alone is sufficiently great to fill up an infinite thought." And only obedience to God can give entrance to the glorious realization of that ambition.

ONE man, willing to obey God implicitly in the face of an unbelieving and wayward world, can set it by the ears and gain an audience. He is a marked man. It may be true sometimes that the world may laugh, it may ridicule, it may denounce and oppose. God's servants always have to meet these conditions. But the man who obeys God runs, "not as uncertainly," and fights, "not as one that beateth the air." Obeying God, then, gives clearness of vision and definiteness of aim. These two qualities are absolutely lacking in their fullest sense in the people of the world. I dare to challenge the soul that is living outside the will of God to disprove this declaration. Only those who obey God have clearness of vision and definiteness of aim. The people of Noah's day were as blind as bats, and as shifting as the wind. They could see the glitter of gold; they were far-sighted in human enterprises and commercial possibilities; they could see pleasures that would gratify the lust of the eye and the pride as far as man's foot could travel, and his appetites plunge him; they could dream of some new thing every day, and exercise cunning ingenuity in its creation, even as do the people of this generation, but they had no vision that could see the coming flood, and the sure judgment of God. They were blind on the Godward side. And because they were blind and would not see, they dared to joke about Noah's flood, and his new boat. Possibly some of the more scholarly and learned of their number went about the country lecturing on the mistakes of Noah, and weaving smooth sentences and plausible theories and springing witticisms to strengthen the people of the world in their unbelief. The world hasn't grown a bit old in its unbelief towards God since Noah's day, nor in its methods of attacking God's Word and God's way. As a weather prophet and architect, Noah was considered a dismal failure, but obedience to God enabled him to look a hundred years farther than the people who were laughing at him, and it gave him definiteness of aim, which made the building of the ark the supreme object of life. Many contemporaries of Noah were apparently living with more definiteness of purpose than was the builder of the ark, and it seemed that they were accomplishing more, but when God's testing came, the flood swallowed up everything that man had been doing, except the great ark, which floated out upon the dark waters and proved that only he who builds into the great purpose and plan of God has real definiteness of aim.

ANOTHER reward of obeying God is that of the possession of a perfect confidence, which day by day unfolds into the nearer realization of the future hope. Perfect confidence; that peace abiding in the soul, which rests undisturbed even though the storms of life rage without. This is a condition to which the people of the world are absolutely strangers. Only those who obey God can know what it is to rest in Him; can know the confidence with which each act of obedience is performed; can know with absolute certainty that the final results are to be as enduring as God Himself. The soul that is building only for himself; the Christian, perhaps, who is following his own will, instead of the will of God, has to face the hours and days and weeks of anxiety and worry. But he who obeys God has no reason to be troubled or anxious over the ultimate results. Yes, doubts and difficulties may come along the pathway of obedience to God, but not as to the final issues, but only as concerns some of the minor details which are to be worked out in attaining the supreme end. I have no doubt that many a difficulty came to Noah in the building of the ark. In carrying out many of the details of that structure he was building for God, it is more than likely that he had his days of doubt and trouble. But all through those long years of building there was no shadow of doubt as to the certainty of the completion of the ark, or as to the necessity for its use. And so it is always with those who obey God. Their confidence is in One Who never fails, and the act of obedience links their destiny with the eternal purposes of God.

IT IS declared of Noah that he did ALL that God commanded him. That little word ALL is a mighty word in its influence on final results. Noah did ALL that God commanded, and so there was room in the ark for all that God was to preserve alive therein. He did ALL, and, therefore, there were no leaks to sink the craft after it started on its voyage. He did ALL, and it was a stanch and serviceable craft, able to endure the deluge of forty days and forty nights, and ride safely on the waters until they subsided. This is an important word to look at in considering this matter of obedience to God. But right here is where so many Christians fail. This little word ALL trips up their unwary feet, and the craft they build for God is defective, leaky and unsafe. But it is well to remember that you are the one who must ride in the ark you are building for God. Noah observed the ALL of God's commandment, and hence he reaped a sure reward of his faithfulness. But it is so hard to render full and complete obedience, and not follow the personal desires of pride and ambition. Saul found it so. He did not observe the ALL of God's command when he went out and warred against the Amalekites. He saved the best of the cattle, and brought Agag back as a living witness to his valor and prowess. But the ALL of God's command required that not even the fat cattle and Agag, the great king, should be saved. And the failure of Saul to heed this little word ALL cost him the kingdom, and sent him headlong to a dismal end. No smallest detail escapes the watchful eye of God. The ALL must be done before He can bear testimony to the soul: "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." God said of Noah: "According to all that God commanded him, so did he." That brief sentence is a complete epitome to the life of Noah. One knows that that hundred years' contract for the Lord was discharged faithfully in every detail. Will God be able to bear like testimony for you and me? If so, that which you are building for God will float as surely as did the ark of Noah, and will bear the precious freight with which it is loaded safely to the desired haven. Peter said: "We ought to obey God, rather than men." Let us add: To obey God means final and eternal success. To obey man brings untold misery and at last defeat and death and oblivion.

All Good.

The man who learns God learns all good. Put God before yourself.—Rev. Dr. Dixon.

FINANCIAL LEGISLATION.

Republican Leaders Engaged in Preparing a Bill to Prop Up Tottering Structure.

The republican party has been the sole architect of the financial policy of the United States and after years of tinkering now acknowledges that the whole fabric is a failure.

The leaders are now preparing more legislation to prop up the tottering structure which has given warning, by various cracks and flaws, that it is unsafe. It should be noted that the demand for financial legislation does not come from the public, or even from the country banks, but from Wall street. There is a constant wail of distress from the kings of finance who rule the financial world and dictate to the republican leaders, that more money must be provided or they will not be able "to move the crops."

Having secured from complacent secretaries of the treasury pretty much all the loose cash in the treasury, to the tune of over $150,000,000, these Wall street financiers are constantly calling for more. The republican leaders of the senate are preparing to aid them, to the extent the Rockefeller element think most profitable to their interests. The chief demand of their bankers is to be allowed to withdraw the United States bonds that have been deposited to secure the loans from the treasury and replace them with municipal or railroad bonds. This would release $154,000,000 of United States bonds that could then be used as a basis for further bank circulation. These Wall street bankers are also the chief owners of the railroads and control or can borrow railroad bonds to substitute as aforesaid. The further demand is made by Wall street that the receipts from customs may be deposited with the banks as the receipts from internal revenue taxes now are. The Aldrich bill provided for this and as a sop to public opinion further provided that one and one-half per cent. interest should be paid on such deposits. As no interest has been paid on the vast amount now loaned the banks and they are in constant dread of the requirements of the treasury being such that some or all of the $154,000,000 they now hold might be demanded, it was intended by the interest provision of the Aldrich bill to give the banks a more complete and legal control of that money. It is probable that the banks will never repay that vast sum if the Aldrich bill or a similar one is enacted, as it would result in a panic if they should be called upon to do so. The money having been loaned out by the banks on Wall street securities, it would be necessary to call those loans and that would result in most instances in throwing the stocks held as collateral on the market, and down would go the price and a full fledged panic would surely result.

There are other advantages the banks want, but they are not entirely agreed on details. Some are demanding that asset currency be issued by the banks to gradually replace the present bank notes now secured by United States bonds. Some of the republican leaders in the house of representatives favor that plan, but the senate leaders do not seem to agree with them.

The public, whose interests do not appear to be much considered, do not care what the bank currency is, so that it is safe and on a par with greenbacks and treasury notes and always receivable for debts and purchases. Greenbacks have been an ideal money for the people, but they are now rarely seen in circulation, the new plan being to retire them, probably because the banks make no profit on their circulation. The treasury notes, silver certificates and the national bank currency is the present money in the hands of the people and the gold and gold certificates in the bank reserves. As long as there are different kinds of money the banks will always keep the best in their own vaults and pay out what they consider the most undesirable. If asset currency—bank notes without bonds as security—is provided for in the new law, it will be the least desirable money, as it will have only the assets of the banks back of it, and will rapidly supplant even the silver certificates in the ordinary transactions of the great mass of the people. This constant tinkering with the currency and always for the benefit of the banks should be enough to defeat the republican party and will do so when the next time of stress comes around, and unless all signs fail the periodical panic is not far off.

PARAGRAPHIC POINTERS.

——Reform in New York is traveling a hard road, but, then, how can it be expected to prosper under republican auspices? The whole history of that party since the war has been a never-ceasing fight against reform.

——From the roasting that Gov. Pennypacker and the Quay machine is getting from republican and democratic newspapers alike, the Pennsylvania bosses have discovered that it is impossible to muzzle the independent press by any libel law their ingenuity can invent or their partisan malice execute.

——It is the tariff which allows the trusts to make these high prices for their products. Had there been no such overcapitalized combinations, the competition between the separate establishments would give to the people the benefit of prices regulated by the cost of production, and would make the prosperity more general and more enduring.—Philadelphia Record.

——The "Iowa idea" refuses to down. By Iowa idea is meant the democratic idea of tariff reform, which was taken up by the Iowa republicans last fall and embodied in their state platform.—Buffalo Times.

"Teddy's Sleepy Cat No Trusts Will Catch."

ADMISSIONS OF REPUBLICANS.

Throw Side Lights on Post Office Scandal and Cause Patriots to Quake.

The post office scandals have warmed up so in the rear of that republican patriot and statesman secretary of the republican national committee and erstwhile assistant postmaster general, Perry S. Heath, that he has fallen to explaining about his share in them. He freely admits that there were irregularities during the war with Spain, but claims that even the postmaster general and the cabinet sanctioned what was done. He confesses that large amounts of money were used for purposes for which they were not appropriated, but says that the idea that funds were used for private use is "utterly silly." The war with Spain being in progress the soldiers had to be supplied with mail, and, to put it in the language of the patriot Heath, "there was no time to dally. It was up to us to get busy and to get busy quick." From the charges and rumors of the doings of the department during the busy reign of Perry and the other patriots who hovered around him—and names high up on the republican scroll of fame are mentioned—there is no doubt that but little time was wasted in getting down to business.

The redoubtable Perry does not mention the irregularties in the appointments and promotions but he does say that Mr. Tulloch, who has made some of the charges, "was relieved by Postmaster General Smith, which he had a perfect right to do," and makes further uncomplimentary remarks about that gentleman which indicates that he was an "obstacle" to Perry and the department. It was not long after this that Perry was fitting out the expedition to Cuba which looted the post office department in that country, in which Hanna's friend, Rathbone, and Perry's friend, Neely, met their Waterloo at the hands of the ungrateful Cubans and were convicted of embezzlement and reposed in a Cuban bastile until pardoned.

Many republican patriots were indeed very busy in those days making hay while the sun shone and laid the groundwork for most of the scandal and disorder that is now partially coming to light.

If some of the other departments had the X-rays turned on them, not in the subdued way in which the post office department is being examined, but in the full glare of the public scrutiny and all had their inst deserts, there might be hardly enough republican leaders left unsmirched to hold the national convention.

Always After Office.

Dr. Woodrow Wilson, president of Princeton university, in an address at Chicago on "Patriotism," said that "President Roosevelt owes his high position to the fact that he was a politician who did not care to hold office." President Wilson should look up the facts before he attempts to teach people. Mr. Roosevelt has been one of the most persistent office seekers and is now engaged in a stumping tour for the nomination for the highest office. The first office he held: in the legislature of New York, he diligently sought, directly he had concluded his education at Harvard university. He then was appointed on the United States civil service commission. Then he was New York police commissioner, after that assistant secretary of the navy, resigned that office and asked for the appointment as colonel of the Rough Riders. At the conclusion of the war with Spain, was elected governor of New York and sought the office most strenuously. It is true he protested for some days against being nominated for vice president, but while saying nay, consented, and thus by accident became president of the United States. If there is a more persistent office seeker and officeholder than Theodore Roosevelt, the record has been most successfully concealed.

——The "black-and-tans" have defeated the "lily-whites" in Alabama, and the same kind of purchasable delegation will be on hand at the next republican national convention, that have sold out to the highest bidder in times past. It seems impossible for the republican party to reform, even when it is to its manifest advantage. Buying delegates has become a rule, whenever there is a contest, and the candidates have the price in their pockets.

——President Roosevelt is giving all his cabinet a chance to show their ability on the stump; the last one to be ordered to the front is Secretary Wilson. So far he has not invited Postmaster General Payne; probably because it would be uncomfortable for him to tell the people about the scandals in his department.

——Mr. Roosevelt will never get a currency sufficiently elastic to stretch as rapidly as the capitalization of a modern corporation.—Detroit Free Press.

QUESTION OF A PROFESSOR.

University of Chicago Scientist Moved to Ask Whether Man Is an Automatic Machine.

Is a man a mechanical and automatic machine, whose length of life is affected by constant or intermittent vibration? This is a question which experimental physiologists at the University of Chicago have set for themselves to answer.

"As a result of our work," declare Prof. A. P. Matthews and B. R. Whitcher, in the last issue of the American Journal of Physiology, "we have become convinced of the probable truth of Meltzer's opinion concerning the importance of mechanical shock in the life history of the body and other cells."

Following this assertion, Prof. Matthews raises the question as to how constant submission to shock by motormen, street car conductors, and factory employes may affect the length of their lives.

"The question thus raised is of considerable practical importance," writes Prof. Matthews. "For example, what effect has the constant vibration of the floors of mills on the length of life, the vital realstance, and physiological functions of mill operatives? How far will mechanical jarring account for the digestive and vaso-motor disturbances many suffer in railway travel? Are the motormen or conductors of street railways influenced by the violent shocks to which they are constantly subjected?"

TUNNEL UNDER CHANNEL.

Yerkes Makes Proposition for Connecting of Britain with the Continent.

Charles T. Yerkes, who ran over to Paris for a week, had such a bad time crossing the English channel in gales that he said on his returning to London:

"Henceforth I am a warm advocate of a channel tunnel. It is incredible that so trifling an engineering work should be allowed to keep England from reaping the advantages which free intercourse with the continent would give."

Mr. Yerkes is now undisputed master of the field so far as "tube" construction in London is concerned. His are the only "tube" schemes which parliament is allowing to be proceeded with pending the report of the royal commission on underground rapid transit, which probably will not be published for a year.

Cleverness, discernment, and hustling abilities have placed Mr. Yerkes in this advantageous position. If he had been guided by his English partners he would be now in the same position as his rivals, whose schemes are indefinitely hung up.

Find Novel Way to Fight Duel.

A newspaper, published at Blagovestchensk, the capital of the government of Amur, in Asiatic Russia, states that, as dueling pistols cannot be obtained in Manchuria, Russian officers at Zizikar have invented a novel substitute. The principals in a duel draw lots, and the loser is obliged to take the next train on the Manchurian railroad from Zizikar to Charbin and then return. If he survives the inevitable derailing of trains and returns uninjured, honor is satisfied equally as well as though shots had been exchanged.

Sir "Hopeful" Lipton.

Sir Thomas Lipton is confident that he has the America's cup as good as lifted. One of the most pleasant things about Lipton, says the Chicago Record-Herald, is his hopefulness.

AGRICULTURAL HINTS.

A NUT OF INTEREST.

Growing Pecans for Market Is an Industry Having Quite a Pronounced Boom.

One of the latest industries to be boomed is pecan growing. Some enthusiasts even see in this valuable nut a rival as a money-maker to the peach.

Botanically the pecan (Hicoria pecan) belongs to the hickory family. The tree is one of the largest of the forest, growing from 75 to 170 feet high, with wide spreading branches and symmetrical dome-like top.

The nuts are generally oblong and vary in weight from 25 to over a hundred per pound. The shells are relatively thin and much more easily cracked than those of the common hickory nut.

The pecan is found native in river bottoms from Iowa and Kentucky southwest into Mexico, and seems to prefer a moist, rich soil. It is successfully grown, however, in many other states and on a variety of soils. the Michigan station reports that pecan trees obtained from Iowa nuts have grown well at the South Haven substation since 1890 and proved entirely hardy. The Stuart pecan from Texas, however, has required protection to prevent its killing back each winter.

PECAN (HICORIA PECAN).

Generally pecans will not be commercially successful north of parallel 40. Pecan nuts are grown on a commercial scale in California, and orchards have been planted in a number of southern states. Texas and Louisana at present furnish the bulk of the annual crop, mostly from native trees.

Florida is believed to be well adapted to the growth of pecans, especially in the western and northern parts, and there seems to be opportunity for a considerable extension of the industry. Trees grow in Florida on a number of soils, varying from the black hummock to the less fertile high pine lands. On the richer soil the trees seem to develop wood at the expense of the fruit, while on poor soils the trees make less wood and bear more fruit. A Georgia grower stated that he had found sandy loam soils with a clay subsoil the best for pecans.

THE USEFUL CORN PLANT.

New Ways in Which Stalk, Leaves, Pith, Tassels, Husks and Cobs Are Utilized.

A long course of experiments, carried on at Kankakee, Ill., under the encouragement of the United States department of agriculture, have determined that good use may be made of the entire corn crop, not the grain merely but the stalks, leaves, pith, tassels, husks and cobs as well. Different varieties of paper of good grade can be profitably manufactured from various parts of the plant. One kind is made from the hard shell of the stalk, another from the pith and a third from the husk. From the pith is turned out the finest grade of oil paper, almost equal to linen paper.

A machine has been invented which will take the corn stalk, as it grows, husk the ear, separate the husk from the stalk and then remove the shell from the pith. The manufacturers will send this machine into a field and propose to the farmer to buy his corn crop as it stands. If the farmer wishes his corn after it has been husked, he can have it, otherwise it will be purchased and marketed by the owner of the machine, who will convert all the remaining portion of the plant into some form of manufacture.

ALL AROUND THE FARM.

Farm for profit rather than crops.

A deep furrow makes a full crib.

A poor seedbed makes an empty barn.

"No humus, no hominy," as the wise farmer says.

Thrifty weeds on a farm indicate an unthrifty farmer.

A fence made of farm implements typifies an unprogressive farmer.

No manure for crops, a whip for the horses, and poverty for the farmer.

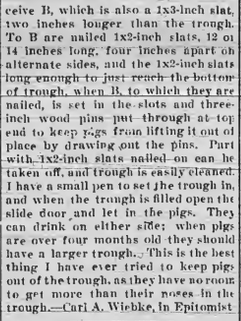
Count the cost of each crop beforehand, and figure the profit afterward.

Because of the scarcity of labor, some California fruit growers are tearing out their peach orchards and planting to alfalfa.

About the only public lands open for homestead settlements in California are the arid regions, says an official of the land office department.—Farm and Home.

EARLY AND LATE PIGS.

Instructive Discussion of a Subject Wherein Every Western Farmer Is Vitally Interested.



Every swine raiser probably has his own ideas about the proper time for the pigs to be littered, and there is no doubt that the different localities and the accommodations for their reception which have been provided make a difference as to the best season for them to come. If good shelter and comfortable houses for the brood sow have been provided, there is no doubt that the pig farrowed in February or March will be a profitable piece of property, but without these they had better come later. If the breeder follows the practice of raising two litters a year, as many of them do, early farrowing is a necessity. A pig that makes its appearance from the middle of February to the latter part of March can be so managed that the second litter can come and be well on the way before the cold weather sets in. A pig which comes early in the season has the advantage of grass and he will thrive, come to maturity and become fat at much less expense than one which is farrowed in the fall.

Another advantage is that pigs born in the early months of the year can be fattened and sent to market before the hogs which have been fed on the new corn are sent in to glut the market and cause a depreciation in prices. In addition to having warm shelter, the brood sow should have more than ordinary care when she is expected to bring forth her litter while the cold weather is still in evidence. During the period of gestation they should not be kept fat enough to make good pork, but at the same time they should be kept in good condition. Their food should not consist exclusively of corn, but should be varied with a diet that will produce bone and muscle as well as fat and warmth. A good feed for sows at this time is potatoes, boiled and mashed and mixed with ground oats and corn, with the addition of a small quantity of bran. The small potatoes which have been sorted out from the marketable ones can be utilized very profitably in this manner. Scalded clover hay is also a good addition to the slop, as is also all the skim milk that can be spared from the kitchen.—Chicago Drovers' Journal.

ECONOMICAL FEEDING.

Designer of the Device Says It Is Sure to Keep the Pigs from Getting in the Trough.

I will here try to describe my pig trough, and hope I can make it plain enough for you to understand. I make a V-shaped trough out of 1x6 and 1x5-inch boards; to each end of trough I nail A, which is made of 1x3-inch slats, with a slot cut in top end to receive B, which is also a 1x3-inch slat, two inches longer than the trough. To B are nailed 1x2-inch slats, 12 or 14 inches long, four inches apart on alternate sides, and the 1x2-inch slats long enough to just reach the bottom of trough, when B, to which they are nailed, is set in the slots and three-inch wood pins put through at top end to keep pigs from lifting it out of place by drawing out the pins. Part with 1x2-inch slats nailed on can be taken off, and trough is easily cleaned. I have a small pen to set the trough in, and when the trough is filled open the slide door and let in the pigs. They can drink on either side; when pigs are over four months old they should have a larger trough. This is the best thing I have ever tried to keep pigs out of the trough, as they have no room to get more than their noses in the trough.—Carl A. Wiebke, in Epitomist.

FEED-SAVING PIG TROUGH.

Quick Growths, Big Profits.

A quick growth and an early maturity, returns the best profit among cattle, swine, sheep and poultry. The intelligent farmer, in preparing his stock for market, should always bear in mind the importance of pushing his stock from the time they are born until placed on the market. Every day should see a gain in weight along the lines of profit, yet at the same time, this crowding should not be overdone. There is danger of injuring animals by overfeeding, especially when young If, however, the feed rations are properly made, looking toward just enough and not too little, or too much, good results may be expected in the end.—Midland Farmer.

Washing the Horses' Legs.

Too frequent washing of horses' legs with incomplete drying, and the use of soap and warm water in the winter time, cause most of the cases of "scratches," and the surest way to start their cure is to abandon washing. The dry mud is easily brushed and combed out; but it is quite a difficult matter to dry the skin after using soap and water on long haired legs. This also applies to the legs of light horses from November to May and especially as regards horses having white "stockings," for such legs are more tender than those of dark color and prone to troublesome irritation and scratches, or "mud fever."—Rural World.

Not Acquainted with It.

The Sunday school teacher was impressing on her pupils that discomfort always follows wrongdoing. "What is it hurts you here when you're naughty?" she asked, placing her hand on her chest. "Stomach," a small urchin replied, memories of stolen fruits coming into his mind. "And do you know," said the teacher, "those little heathen mentioned nearly every organ in the body and never mentioned that abstract thing, a conscience?"—N. Y. Times.

Minnesota Man's Discovery.

Adrian, Minn., June 1st.—Philip Doyle, of this place, says he has found out a medicine that will cure any case of Kidney Trouble. As Mr. Doyle was himself very sick for a long time with this painful disease, and is now, apparently, as well as ever, his statement carries the confirmation of personal experience.

The remedy that cured Mr. Doyle is called Dodd's Kidney Pills.

In speaking of the pills, Mr. Doyle says: "In regard to Dodd's Kidney Pills, they are certainly a wonderful medicine—the best that I have ever taken.

"I was very bad for a long time with Kidney Trouble and could get nothing to help me till I tried Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I used altogether about ten boxes, and I can say emphatically that I am completely cured. I am entirely well, without a symptom of Kidney Trouble left.

"I can heartily recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills to anyone who is suffering with Kidney Trouble, for they made me all right.

"I have advised several of my friends to try them, and not one has been disappointed."

Two Interesting Letters From Thankful Women.

Miss Camilla Chartier, 5 West Lexington St., Baltimore, Md., writes:

"Late suppers gradually affected my digestion and made me a miserable dyspeptic, suffering intensely at times. I took several kinds of medicine which were prescribed by different physicians but still continued to suffer. Summer Catarrh.

"I wrote you for advice, and I now take pleasure in informing you that my improvement is very great indeed. I did not expect to improve so quickly after suffering for five long years. I am feeling very good and strong. I thank you so much for Peruna. I shall recommend it to all suffering with the effects of catarrh, and I consider it a household blessing. The Court of Appeals granted the rule requiring Circuit Judge Cantrill to vacate the bench in the case of Caleb Powers. The opinion by Judge Hobson holds that the former court decision is binding on Judge Cantrill, and on the present Court of Appeals.

A BIG sensation was created on White Oak, Boyd county, a few Sundays since, when, just as the preacher had read his text constable Nando Felty announced that several were present with pistols on their persons and that services would be suspended until the aforesaid persons were searched. He then locked the doors and about twenty young men jumped out of the windows and took to the brush.

The Augusta Chronicle gives out the following information in regard to the business done by one of the large packing houses in Chicago:

"Imagine a procession of ten thousand cattle, marching two by two, in a line fifteen miles long; let twenty thousand sheep follow them bleating along twelve miles of road; after them drive sixteen miles of hogs, twenty-seven thousand strong; then let thirty thousand fowls bring up the rear, clucking and quacking and gobbledegobbling over a space of six miles, and in this whole caravan, stretching for nearly fifteen miles and requiring two days to pass a given point, you will see the animals devoted to death in the packing house of one company at Chicago in a single day."

Many years ago one of the pleasant occasions in neighborhoods in this county, immediately upon the completion of the planting of the corn crop, was the old fashioned squirrel soup. The farmers in each neighborhood would select a place to meet at noon on some day appointed, and they would arrive at the noon hour, having killed from five to a dozen squirrels each. The neighborhood cook had always preceded the hunters with all necessary cooking implements and articles required to season the soup. All hands would engage in the preparation of the game, and while the large kettles of soup were maturing the hunters rested in a dense shade near a splendid spring and recited anecdotes and their experiences in life, and when the dinner was announced, a feast that could not be surpassed was enjoyed by all. The latter day fishings are not in it a little bit when compared with the "squirrel dinner" of half a century ago, and which occasions became obsolete because of the woodsman who would not spare that tree. The thoughts of these by-gone occasions are yet rer sishing to the survivors of the crowds that use to assemble at the neighborhood soup, but the participants in these occasions are like the almost boundless forests in which they sought the principal supply for their feast—have disappeared from the face of the earth.

The bride who finds a spider on her wedding dress may consider [illegible] blessed.

Although the outside world knows but little about it, there are some hundreds of women who spend their working hours in mixing drugs and dispensing medicines. Some have passed on and become chemists, the first woman chemist in London having qualified as long ago as 1875. But there are many who are simply dispensers in the dispensing rooms of the large hospitals, or helping private doctors, or employed by the large dispensing chemists and in the laboratories of large dycing and chemical works. To a great extent these women are the daughters of medical men, for the fact that the portals of this profession were open and comparatively speaking, were easy for women to enter, has hardly been realized until lately by others.

Many apothecaries say women make much better dispensers than men; for they are neater and take up the profession more as a life work. Men who have failed in their examinations fall back upon dispensing, but women go in for it, and you know women are naturally more careful in little things, they are more accurate. This is no doubt why they get on so well in this profession. They are so much neater than men are; you go into a man's dispensary after a busy morning, perhaps after a rush, and you wouldn't be able to find a thing—he wouldn't himself—not a thing; but if it is a woman who does the dispensing you will soon see the difference. Every bottle will be in its place, everything neat, spick and span, and ready for use in a moment. No time is wasted there in a glorious hunt around for the simplest thing.

The newest industry opened up in the Ohio valley is a pearl button factory at Madison, which at present works 15 operates insides, and a large fleet of johnboats and men in the river and on its surface. It is the first factory for working up mussel shells that has been established on the Ohio river. The johnboat crews are supplied with grappling hooks, dragnets and other devices for seining the bottom of the river, and when the mussel is caught it is opened, the meat removed and the shell thoroughly cleaned and rinsed, so when they are taken to the factory they are perfectly clean and fresh. When the river gets down to a normal stage the outfit of the enterprise will be increased and a force of not less than 100 persons will have lucrative employment through it. There is now a small camp of tents, men, johnboats and other apparatus at Notch Lick, three miles below town, preparing to get out shells for the factory at Madison.—Carrollton News.

"If women would pay more attention to their health we would have more happy wives, mothers and daughters, and if they would observe results they would find that the doctors' prescriptions do not perform the many cures they are given credit for.

"In consulting with my druggist he advised McElree's Wine of Cardui and Thedford's Black-Draught, and so I took it and have every reason to thank him for a new life opened up to me with restored health, and it only took three months to cure me."

Wine of Cardui is a regulator of the menstrual functions and is a most astonishing tonic for women. It cures scanty, suppressed, too frequent, irregular and painful menstruation, falling of the womb, whites and flooding. It is helpful when approaching womanhood, during pregnancy, after childbirth and in change of life. It frequently brings a dear baby to homes that have been barren for years. An item of mine in last week's paper, viz: that the trade had all gone to Aurora since there is no way to get to Rising Sun except by skiff, created consternation among some of the people here. Because of that statement some thought the McVille and Rabbit Hash ferries had quit running and that the Swan had changed her time, and, in consequence, Kentucky was shut off from Rising Sun. It was supposed that people would understand that it was meant shut off by river, as people do not travel in a skiff by land. For the benefit of those wishing to go to Rising Sun, it is now stated that the Swan has not changed her time, nor have the ferries suspended, and that they can cross at either McVille or Rabbit Hash as heretofore.

We attended the Confederate reunion at New Orleans, and were highly pleased at the royal welcome extended to the old veterans. Everything was done on a grand way for the comfort and entertainment of the old wearers of the gray. To give anything like a just description of all that was done would occupy too much space, so we enclose a short clipping from the Mobile Register, which will give in condensed form a good idea of the enthusiasm and welcome we received.

"New Orleans, May 22.—To New Orleans was revealed this day what no man has seen for two score years and more.

"For a few brief hours she held close to her heart the incarnate spirit of the Confederacy, and for her it lived and breathed again. Always hers to love, it was to-day hers to have and hers to hold. Once more she pressed to her lips the white-starred cross of blue on the crimson field and flung it loose to the winds that loved it well, the symbol of the cause for which the heroes fought and by whose blood it was purged and sanctified.

"Again the martial airs of forty years ago were borne upon the breeze, again the streets were trod by men of war, again the cheers for the marching host rang high, and again the echoes returned the 'rebel yell,' that Southern cadence of the fighting cry of the fighting Anglo-Saxon race, that never for a thousand years has suffered any save the dead of au alien breed to sleep upon a battlefield.

"It was a day such as New Orleans had never seen before, such as she may never see again. It was a revelation in passionate patriotism, and to the old soldiers of the South an offering of affection that was closely akin to worship.

His Last Hope Realized.

In the first opening of Oklahoma to settlers in 1889, the editor of this paper was among the many seekers after fortuue who made the big race one fine day in April. During his traveling about and afterwards his campaign upon his claim, he encountered much bad water, which, together with the severe heat, gave him a very severe diarrhoea which it seemed almost impossible to check, and along in June the case became so bad he expected to die. One day one of his neighbors bought him one small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic Cholera, and Diarrhoea Remedy as a last hope. A big dose was given him while he was rolling about on the ground in great agony, and in a few minutes the dose was repeated. The good effect of the medicine was soon noticed and within an hour the patient was taking his first sound sleep for a fortnight. That one little bottle worked a complete cure, and he cannot help but feel grateful. The season for bowel disorders being at hand suggests this item. For sale by all Druggists.

It has been reported in some communities that I have abandoned my practice as veterinary surgeon. I wish to correct this statement and say that all calls will be answered as soon as I possibly can. Yours Respectfully,

DEALING WITH THE DEVIL

How the Enemy of Man's Soul May Be Made to Flee

Sermon by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher.

(Copyright, 1903, by J. M. Edson.)

Chicago, Sunday, June 7, 1903.

Text: "Resist the devil, and he will flee from you."—James 4:7.

THIS is glorious assurance to the buffeted soul. Every one is forced to meet the devil face to face, but too few have the blessed experience of seeing his retreating form. Only he who resists his attacks has the joy of beholding the undignified flight of the enemy of man's soul. Christ declared that the devil was the father of liars, and as such he is the progenitor of a cowardly race. He is bold and fearless when the object of his attack hesitates to strike the defensive blow and yields to his advance, but let determined resistance be offered and soon the devil is confused and in full and ignominious retreat. The fleeing devil is the only kind of a devil God would have the soul know. In the galleries of Heaven is hung the masterpiece of the ages showing the Son of God watching the fleeing form of the devil, while bright angels come hovering down to minister to Him after He has faithfully resisted his attacks. But in the infernal regions, where the devil reigns supreme, the artist imps are never permitted to paint such scenes. It is a tabooed subject. The devil, like a great many people, never likes to look at himself as he really is. He has preserved the picture of the scene in the garden with his victory over Adam and Eve, and all about are hung paintings of his subsequent triumphs—Noah drunk, Moses angry and arrogant; David, the adulterer and murderer; Elijah fleeing before the wrath of wicked Jezebel, and the long list of other triumphs which he has gained over the human race; but nowhere can be found the wilderness scene with Jesus resisting and utterly routing the devil. The censorship has been rigid, and the devil has kept his forces busy expunging from the records the incidents wherein he has figured ignominiously.

MAN experiences so many of the victories of the devil, and witnesses so few retreats, that he comes almost to hold the view that the devil is irresistible. But it is God's Word that the flight of the devil is as certain as the resistance is determined. "Resist the devil, and he will flee from you." The fleeing devil is an encouraging and refreshing picture to get before the soul. Let us look long and earnestly at it, so that its truth and meaning may be indelibly impressed upon the heart. It is needless to say that the fleeing devil is a defeated devil. Look at that retreating form! Cowardice gives swiftness to those flying feet. The cringing outlines of the figure betoken baseness and despicable stealth. The blackness which the devil always heads for when in flight opens to receive him and is suggestive of foulness and destruction and death. The devil never retreats until he is defeated, but when he is routed what a despicable creature he is. But note another thing. The fleeing devil is an unmasked devil. His sheep's clothing never covers his hinder parts. His disguise which makes him appear as an angel of light is not ample enough to reach all about him. When he caught a glimpse of one of God's angels and determined to have garments cut after the same pattern he forgot all about the back breadths and seams, and his tailors, while carefully following his instructions, were able to make for him a garment which was deceptive in appearance from the front view, but which never has and never can be made to meet and cover behind. So the fleeing devil is an unmasked devil. From the front view he looks like anything but the devil he is, but get him on a run to the rear and he is seen in his true light. The chameleon changes its color to harmonize with the object to which it is clinging, and the devil has a similar ability. When the soul meets him face to face it is hard to penetrate the disguise and realize that it is the devil and not some goodly and desirable personage. But let resistance manfully assert itself and demand to see the hinder parts, and the gentle sheep that has come bleating to be taken into the bosom and fondled and cherished as a most desirable possession is discovered to be the ugly, shaggy gray wolf which would eat out the vitals.

THE reason a good many people dispute the existence of the devil is because they have never seen him in flight. He has so successfully identified himself with conditions, and things, and impulses, and desires, and appetites, and ambitions that his personality is obscured. But the fact of the matter is that God and His Word recognize and speak of him as a real person from Genesis to Revelation, and it is something more than an influence or natural human tendency with which the soul has to deal. Not only must the reality of the devil be felt, but the directions from which his attacks are made must be clearly understood. To be forewarned is to be forearmed. Military success is always dependent upon the knowledge of the movements of the enemy and the point at which the attack is to be made. To be surprised is to be half defeated at the very start. The attacks of the devil always come from any one or all of three directions. By way of the flesh or the lower animal nature, by way of the higher human nature or temporal ambition, and by way of the religious instincts or spiritual pride. Every temptation which comes to man may be classified under one of these three divisions. It is illustrated by the threefold temptation of Jesus in the wilderness. It is with a conception of the full scope of temptation which leads John to write: "All that is in the world, the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world."

The devil is a great general, even if he is a coward and poltroon, and he has long since learned that the weakest point is the place where victory is most likely to be won. A great many people willfully or carelessly refuse to recognize that they have a weakest point.

OUR text is suggestive of the battlefield. When the devil is around it either means fight or surrender. The devil never fights unless he has to. His favorite method is to suggest a truce at the very start. If the soul consents, he encamps on the spot and immediately sets his snares which entrap the soul and bring it under his power. James, who tells us to resist the devil, in the opening portion of his letter shows us how the devil operates. He takes the matter up at the point where the soul has entered into a truce with the devil and the latter has camped on the spot. Then, says James, "man is drawn away of his own lust, and enticed. Then, when lust hath conceived, it bringeth forth sin: and sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death." These words describe accurately the way in which the devil wins his conquest over the soul. The devil has come in the guise of some temptation. Instead of immediate resistance and no parleying the voice of the devil is listened to as he pleads for a hearing. It is at this point that temptation begins to be sin. The devil, given his opportunity, is not slow to hold up the temptation in its most attractive light. He covers up the sting. He makes it appear to be a thing greatly to be desired. He works his spell as he did in the garden with Eve and makes the thing desired look good and wholesome and delightful. Here is where "man is drawn away of his own lust and enticed," and it is only a step farther to the full commission of the deed and the complete victory of the devil over the soul.

"Vice is a monster of so frightful mien,
As to be hated needs but to be seen;
Yet seen too oft, familiar with her face,
We first endure, then pity, then embrace."

THE above lines of Poe is the thought of James expressed poetically, and shows the process by which the soul is brought to final and unconditional surrender. But if it is a case of fight, let us go out to the battlefield and witness the conflict. In Bunyan's Holy War, wherein the author graphically describes the subjugation of the town of Mansoul by the devil and its subsequent deliverance by Emmanuel, the son of the good and great King Shaddai, Capt. Resistance is represented as standing on the walls of the town to defend it against the attack of the devil, and it is not until this brave defender has been killed that the devil is able to win his conquest over the town of Mansoul. And how often this scene is being reenacted to-day. The town of Mansoul attacked, Capt. Resistance, the only fighting man in the place, goes out to give him battle. If he be killed the town is absolutely at the mercy of the enemy. Capt. Resistance may be brave, he may fight hard, yea even desperately, but if he is not properly equipped for the conflict he will at last fall before the "fiery darts of the Wicked One." Resistance must be intelligent to be effectual. One must understand the degree and quality of resistance which turns an attacking devil into a fleeing devil. There is a resistance which repels the devil, but does not cause him to flee. He never shows his back in such a case, but just backs off face front and knows he has been delayed but not defeated. The devil isn't made to tremble a bit in the face of the resistance which some people offer, for he is quick to discover that it lacks the true staying qualities. Man fails to equip his Capt. Resistance with the armor that can protect and the sword which can wound the devil and make him flee.

FAITH is the only armor which will turn the poison darts of the devil. Without this shield in the hand, Capt. Resistance is sure to be killed sooner or later. This is a bit of armor which comes from God's workshop, and the devil's most powerful guns have never been known to penetrate it. To-day when a nation produces a new and powerful gun, the other nations seek to construct armor for its ships and forts which will offer safe and sure resistance to its steel-pointed missiles. Man has been experimenting for thousands of years to discover some armor of his own manufacture which will be able to turn the broadsides of the devil, but up to the present time we have never heard of any that was strong enough to resist. Strange, is it not, when this is true, that man fails to equip himself with the simple and light but impregnable armor of faith, and to take the Sword of the Spirit which is able to cut the devil asunder and make him flee? Resistance which fails to provide this shield and this sword is sure to prove unavailing. This is the resistance which James means when he declares: "Resist the devil and he will flee from you."

AND when the soul has put the devil to flight, it ought to keep him on the run. Oh, if the saints who are in Christ Jesus, and who know that it is true that the only way to win victory over the devil is to use the shield of faith and the Sword of the Spirit, would only keep the shield before them and the sword in hand they would soon have him driven into a corner, the chains would be snapped upon him and Christ surely would come to reign. The trouble is that the devil has not run very far before the soul lays aside the shield and sheathes the sword, confident that victory is final and complete. But the discarded shield and the encased sword act like a tonic upon the nerves of the devil. He is as sensitive to such movements on the part of the saints as the needle in the compass is conscious of the attraction of the pole. He checks his hasty flight, he takes new breath and fresh courage and returns to renew the attack from another quarter. The shield of faith laid aside soon gathers rust and mold, and the sword put into its scabbard is a harmless weapon, and when the attack comes the soul is taken off its guard, and in the confusion the shield and sword are either forgotten altogether, or so much time has to be spent in rubbing off the rust and unsheathing the sword that the devil is given a powerful advantage at the very start.

WHAT would be thought of the army which would fail to fortify the camp and would carelessly stack its guns, when it knew that the enemy was lurking about watching for an opportunity to strike a blow? It would be supreme folly. It would invite sure defeat, and just condemnation upon the general who commanded the army. And is not the soul that fails to prepare for the attack of the devil, who is constantly going about seeking whom he may devour, as worthy of condemnation? No wonder the devil's victories are so many! No wonder the Christian so often is such a miserable spectacle before the world! No wonder he brings reproach upon the name of Jesus Christ and His religion! No wonder that the testimony of the lips is not more powerful, when the life behind the lips is made hideous with the defeats which the devil has inflicted! Paul declared that the Gospel of Jesus Christ "was the power of God unto salvation," and it was when Paul was bearing witness to that Gospel by word and deed. But every word which Paul spoke for his Lord was backed up by that brave resistance against the inward and outward attacks of the devil which enabled him to live a victorious life. But the Christian who is not resisting the devil daily and hourly in inward thought and outward act, and compelling him to flee from him, might better shut his mouth and hide his light under a bushel, for his life of defeat will put the stamp of the lie upon his testimony, and the world will refuse to receive it. Resist the devil before you begin to confess the Christ. It is the resisting saint who shines the brightest and the farthest. The road of resistance is the highway which leads to the crown of life and the place on the throne with Christ. The brightest promises are given to those who overcome, for the resistance which the saints offer the devil are the blows which are forging the chains which will help to bind him some day.

OUR text is not only a declaration of fact, which has been reenforced by God's faithful children in all ages, but its first clause is a command: "Resist the devil!" It is in the imperative mood. There is no weakening "if." James might have said: "If you resist the devil, he will flee from you." But he does not. He bluntly tells you and me to "resist the devil." That short, plain command of three words defines the only attitude of the soul towards the devil. No compromise; no terms, short of absolute and determined opposition. The people of the world and a good many Christians are in mortal terror of giving offense to the devil. They like to handle him with gloves and are careful to rub the fur the right way in order not to rouse the monster to raging passion. But God's command is: "Resist the devil," and when you do God will take care of the consequences, and it will not be long before the devil is fleeing in terror. The passive attitude of Christians is contrary to the will and purpose of God, and violates the spirit of His Word. The words of Jesus: "Resist not evil," might be quoted to disprove this and to contradict the command of our text, but if you will take the pains to read all the section of the fifth chapter of Matthew, in which these words occur, you will readily see that they have their application in matters of revenge and of persecution. Those who have been demanding "an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth," are told to "resist not evil." But those who are beset by the devil and who encounter the forces of evil at work in whatever form are commanded to "Resist the devil."

"There is a battle to be fought,
An upward race to run,
A crown of glory to be sought,
A victory to be won.

"The shield of faith repels the dart
That Satan's hand may throw;
His arrow cannot reach thy heart,
If Christ control the bow.

"Be strong then in the Lord of Hosts,
And in His mighty power,
The man who in the Savior trusts,
Is more than conqueror."

Under Obligation.

Every man, whether he will or no, is under inexorable obligation to God and man.—Rev. Dr. Monk.

PRESS MUZZLING.

Last Resort of the Republican Manipulators Results in Confounding the Brigands.

For nearly half a century the state of Pennsylvania has been ruled by confederated scoundrels in the service of confederated monopolists and in the name of the republican party. Political conditions have grown steadily worse and worse, until the entire country has been shocked by the enormity of the corruption and plunderings of the Quay machine. It became necessary, therefore, to prevent publicity in order to perpetuate the power of the brigands, and hence the Quay majority in the legislature at its last session passed a bill for the protection of corruptionists against criticism and the suppression of truth by means of radical changes in the law of libel.

The object of the new libel law, which was signed by Gov. Pennypacker on the 13th of May, is clearly twofold—to terrorize the press and to reward blackmailers and shysters. It creates a new artificial crime by requiring under a penalty the name of the editor and the proprietor of every periodical or newspaper to be conspicuously printed therein. It provides for compensatory damages to any person who may be made the victim of "mental or physical suffering" by reason of any "negligent" publication whether true or false. It thus attempts to abrogate the established law of libel which allows the truth to be given in evidence on the plea of justification; which requires malice to be shown except where falsehood proven—in which case malice is presumed—and which gives no damages for mental or physical suffering, but only for injury to "reputation," which is treated as property. This remarkable change is the result of that part of the act which gives "punitive damages" to anyone who has been subjected to mental or physical suffering by reason of cartoons, or headlines in large type, or other device calling special attention to any alleged delinquency of public officers. The entire act is a penal statute in disguise and was born of the same principles and aims which gave rise to the sedition law passed by congress in 1798 by the federalists. And not since the great campaign against that orious act, conducted by Jefferson and Madison, has there been a more universal or indignant protest against any act of an American legislature. Even the republican newspapers denounce it as an outrage. Gov. Pennypacker has been excoriated for signing it, and ridiculed for his absurd attempt to justify its enactment. But the governor is no more guilty than the legislature which enacted it. He has done no more than the federal administration has done along the same line. The odious Philippine sedition law, adopted by congress and approved by the president, is indeed far worse than this new Pennsylvania sedition law. Gov. Pennypacker's reasoning in his remarks on the necessity and utility of the act might have been borrowed from the answer of Secretary Root in the mandamus case of Taylor vs. Root, or even from the opinion of the court in that case. The general trend of the official class under the republican regime is indeed better exhibited by Gov. Pennypacker and the Pennsylvania legislature than it is by those newspapers which criticise them. In national politics Charles Emory Smith has shown himself to be precisely what Pennypacker is in state politics. The medieval, monarchical and federalist spirit which dominates the entire republican machine is simply the essence of the new Pennsylvania libel law, as it is of all the federal laws passed by the same machine. It is fortunate for the country that Quay and his cousin, Pennypacker, have given us an object lesson in imperialism which even the Philadelphia press can understand; and it is reasonable now to hope that the entire country may have its eyes opened to the corrupt, domineering, vicious policy of the republican party. It is reasonable, indeed, to hope that in 1904 we may witness such a revulsion of public sentiment against federalism and its methods of suppression and fraud as that which carried a democrat into the presidential office in 1800.

Tariff, Prices and Trusts.

Can the republicans afford to continue their opposition to a revision of the tariff, when it is admitted that the trusts "have played a very considerable part in forcing up prices." If the tariff on trust productions was reduced the trusts would have to lower their prices to prevent similar productions from abroad competing with them. If the tariff was abolished on some trust made articles, that the trusts are selling abroad cheaper than here, to hold the home market the price of such trust productions would have to be made as low as the foreign goods could be imported for. This should not stop home production, but would cut the exorbitant profits now made by the trusts and divide up prosperity a little more evenly so that we might all get a share of it.

——The republican party claims to represent the intelligence of the country, and yet the remonstrance to the administration's Philippine policy contained the names of 57 college presidents and 400 professors, representing the leading colleges of the country.—The Commoner.

——Some of the so-called trusts object to what they consider the rude methods of the courts and legislatures where they are concerned, but it may be noted that when a railroad gets after a telegraph company, it does it with an ax.—N. Y. World.

"MUZZLING THE PRESS"

HANNA'S FIGHT FOR LIFE.

The Ohio Boss Is Making a Great Play for Supremacy in Party Affairs.

The political enemies of Marcus A. Hanna, of Ohio, do not propose to permit him to escape the fate they have planned for him by accepting his prophecy that Roosevelt is to be nominated. They are going on the assumption that the wary Marcus is dissembling and they are forcing the fighting. Presently he will come into the open and admit that the welfare of his party may demand another leader than Roosevelt, says the St. Paul Globe.

Hanna is not the man to quit while there is anything left to fight for or with. He makes no bones about his sentiments. While there is some pretense of amity between the white house party and the men who dominated the republican party in the time of McKinley, it is known to be only a pretense. Roosevelt is not the man to forgive those leaders who forced a vice presidential nomination on him with a view to getting rid of him—and the fact that they made his political fortune in doing it is no more calculated to reconcile him than it is to contribute to the political ease of Hanna and Platt. He is making himself a new platform, he is running for a nomination for the presidency and that without regard to the men who furnish the sinews of war for his party. He has taken the position that Hanna and the men who act with him are not absolutely necessary to the success of a presidential candidate of the republican stripe. Mr. Hanna's mission in life is to demonstrate to the president that the political conventions must observed.

The fight will be worth the watching. Hanna has the republican machine—the organized body that works for office and requires much money for its maintenance—at his command. The younger men who have not yet come to appreciate the value of the machine are accepting Roosevelt as a most serious proposition just now. When they come to understand that the purse strings will not be loosened for their man they will get into line. The south does not offer much encouragement actual to the Roosevelt men, for the negroes who are sent to national conventions are sent by the machine—not because of their merits. It will take more than the shoutings of the noisy ones, who think they know and admire the strenuous life, and the independent negro delegates to name the republican standard bearer, and Hanna is still fairly certain that his day will come.

The "swing around the circle" has not settled the republican nomination in favor of Roosevelt. It has not even had the effect of weakening the Hanna following. The man from Ohio is busy in the east and middle west, while the president is looking after the coast. And because he doesn't make a noise it must not be presumed that Senator Hanna is not making a good fight. He knows he is battling for his political life and if they kill him off the Foraker-Roosevelt men will know that they have been in a serious row. In any event, the contention must split the republican party. It would take something like a year more of the fight on Hanna to send that statesman to the country on election day or to repudiating the men who are trying to steal the machine he built.

OPINIONS AND POINTERS.

——For a man that is rheumatic as to his leg, and is obliged to walk with a cane, Mr. Hanna covers a surprising lot of ground in Ohio politics.—Detroit Free Press.

——And now Mr. Roosevelt says we must dominate the Pacific ocean! But if we do that it will be necessary to control the approaches according to the Mahan school of strategy, and we should have to annex South America, Australia and Asia. Mr. Roosevelt is laying out a strenuous life for the nation, that is liable to induce the use of nerve tonics.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

——That alleged Hanna-Roosevelt feud in Ohio is petering out rather ignominiously. There will be no Hanna opposition to Mr. Roosevelt so long as Hanna has reason to believe that the president is willing to "be good" and let the trusts and the republican national machine have the right of way. Of late the proofs of such willingness have been overwhelming.—St. Louis Republic.

——The St. Louis Republic thinks the democratic opportunity is in the tariff question; that the demand for a lowering of the tariff is wider than party lines, and comes from the people, as a whole, and that the republican attitude is akin to defiance. This sounds like good reasoning, but it will have to be acknowledged that the republican leaders, while in their hearts they see their wrong position on the tariff, hope to bridge over one more presidential campaign with prosperity. Then they may revise the tariff and fool the barons.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

BREAKING IT GENTLY.

Thought She Might as Well Bring the Undertaker Along While on the Way.

This is a true account of one person's idea of "breaking the news gently." The cook, whose home was off in the country, appeared before the "powers above" with a letter in her hand, relates the New York Times.

"I'll have to go home for a couple of days, mum," she said. "My cousin's just written to me," and she handed over the crumpled bit of paper with an audible sniff.

"Dear Mary," it ran, "you had better come home at once, your father is very sick," and it continued with many particulars of the illness.

At the end was a postscript, which, like the old joke of a woman's P. S., had the pith of the matter.

"So long as you'll be driving up from the village, you may as well bring the undertaker along with you in the wagon."

Ambiguous Epitaph.

There is a reminiscence of a very old epitaph in the statement of an Indian newspaper that in northern India a tombstone stands to the memory of a good missionary, with these words: "He translated the Scriptures into Pushtoo and was accidentally shot by his khitmutghar. Well done, thou good and faithful servant."—London Globe.

TESTED BY TIME.

Mrs. Robert Broderick who resides at 1915 Virginia St., in San Antonio Texas, tells an experience that will interest every reader. It shows as well that Doan's cures are lasting cures. She says:—"Up to the early part of the year 1902 I had been a sufferer from kidney troubles for many years. The pain in my back became worse and worse until it was a daily burden that interfered with every duty. I was much afflicted with headaches and dizzy spells and was unable to rest well nights. In May 1902 after using Doan's Kidney Pills I made a statement for publication declaring that they had entirely relieved me of the pain in my back. I have since then had a year's time in which to study the effects of the medicine, and while I have had slight touches of the trouble since, the use of the pills has always driven away all signs of the disorder and I have become convinced of the fact that the first treatment was practically permanent in its effects, and I know that a box of Doan's Kidney Pills kept on hand is a sufficient guarantee against any suffering from the kidneys or back. I should advise every sufferer to take Doan's Kidney Pills, and I know that they will be surprised and pleased with the result."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mrs. Broderick will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists, price 50 cents per box.

WESTERN CANADA'S IMMIGRATION.

Rapid Settlement of the Wheat Fields Lying North of the 49th Parallel.

[From the Chicago Record-Herald.]

"Canada has anticipated a very heavy immigration this year, and she now has figures to show that she is actually getting it in a way to meet all her expectations. In the first four months of this year the doors of the Dominion opened to 40,672 persons, according to a report prepared by the committee on agriculture and colonization of the Canadian parliament. This is almost twice as large as the immigration in the corresponding months last year, and fully three times as large as in 1901, the respective figures being 22,482 and 13,593.

"Most of these newcomers have been attracted by the wheat lands of the Northwest territories. They have moved direct from Winnipeg and they have turned that city into a great camp, in which they have been fitting themselves out for the last stage of their adventure for new homes.

"Of the immigration of this spring a little over a third has come from Great Britain, the figure being 16,457. This is three times as large as the British immigration of the corresponding months of the preceding year, and it is within 2,500 of the number of immigrants that the United States attracted from Great Britain and Ireland in the same period this spring. As to the remainder of the immigration into Canada, 13,570 settlers came from the United States, a 50 per cent. increase over the preceding year, and 10,445 from Continental Europe, a 40 per cent. increase.

"These 40,672 immigrants into Canada may appear trifling in comparison with the 297,670 persons who entered the United States in the same period, but they are proportionately more important to the country. Canada's population is one-fifteenth of ours, but her immigration is now two-fifteenths as large as ours. It is worth remembering also that Canada's immigrants are almost entirely of Anglo-Saxon and Teutonic races, while our immigration is now two-thirds made up of Romance and Slav elements.

"Speculation is natural as to the future of Canada in her relations to the United States when her Northwest territories are filled up, but the one absolutely certain fact of the near future is that the United States is to have a great competitor in the grain markets of the world."

The above editorial article taken from the columns of the Chicago Record-Herald of May 2 26th shows the condition of the Canadian immigration, which as pointed out, has had a Northwest growth—a marvelously increasing growth—for the past six or seven years, until this year, it is confidently assumed the increase to Canada's population, by way of Immigration, will exceed 100,000. This is accounted for by the great agricultural resources which abound there. It is no fairy tale, but the matter-of-fact experience of the tens of thousands bear ample testimony to the wealth and riches in store for all who choose to accept of the opportunities offered.

Those who wish to learn more of the country can secure illustrated atlases, pamphlets, etc., giving full and reliable data issued under Government authority, by applying to any of the authorized agents of the Canadian Government. "Little Animosities" Curves.

A man of geometry and trigonometry figures out that "Little Animosity," the baby 16-inch gun at Sandy Hook, is a certain failure in a light breeze. "I witnessed the three shots fired," he said, "and noticed that the projectile described a curve to the right equal to about one-fifth of a degree, or 12 minutes. Now, supposing that this deflection from a straight line had been continued throughout the entire range of the gun, which is said to be between 20 and 21 miles, what would have happened? The projectile would have described a complete circle, coming back to its starting point. If this could be safely accomplished in practice it would mean a great saving, as the shells could be repeatedly used."—N. Y. Press.

He has a suit pending for the recovery of one of the richest mines in the Nome region, but has no means with which to prosecute it and the case is likely to go against him by default.

At a society dinner last year Rev. Theodore L. Cuyler contributed to the fun of the evening by propounding this conundrum: "Why was Noah the greatest financier of his time?" No one was able to answer, so he gave his fellow diners a year to think it over. This year Dr. Cuyler was unable to attend the dinner, but he telegraphed this answer: "Noah was able to float a stock company at a time when all his contemporaries were forced into involuntary liquidation."

William Waldorf Astor has never recovered his social footing in London since he snubbed one of King Edward's friends by turning him out of doors when he came to the Astor residence without invitation, having been brought there by one of the guests, with whom he had been dining. But the royal cold shoulder does not extend to the expatriated American's son, for young Waldorf is quite popular at court. He was even included among the small number of "personal friends of their majesties" who were invited to celebrate the fortieth anniversary of the king's wedding.

When on a cruise Capt. Charles D. Sigsbee, U. S. N., always takes a bicycle with him and has had the pleasure of wheeling in nearly all the civilized countries of the world. When the ill-fated Maine was sunk in the harbor of Havana in 1898 Capt. Sigsbee, who commanded the vessel then, had on board a bicycle, which went to the bottom with the ship. A few weeks later divers working in the sunken vessel came across this wheel, which they brought to the surface, and later it was exhibited as not the least interesting of the Maine's relics. Capt. Sigsbee is still an enthusiast.

NOW FOR THE COUNTRY.

Funny Genius of the Chicago Tribune Cheerlies His Lay About Spring Pleasures.

Ha, ha, the gladsome spring has come; let's close the city flat and nail the windows all down tight, and can the family cat. For now it's ho for the countryside, it's ho for the house at the lake, it's ho for the woods, and ho for the birds, and also ho for the rake. Get down the bamboo fishing rod, dig up the bathing suit, it's shrunk, and when pa puts it on, O, won't he be a beaut?

O, think of the joyous times we'll have; just think of the moonlit nights, which reminds me to take the peppermint—it's good for mosquito bites. O, think of the dreamy stillness there; say, fill that gun with lead—I know a screech owl in the woods that's going to get killed dead. Ah, next to nature's heart, O, that's the place to live, and put the rubber blankets in, for the roof leaks like a sieve. We'll have a garden all our own, on strawberries we'll sup, unless the neighbors' hogs get in and root the garden up. Pack up the latest novels, too, life's story we will learn, and when the firewood gets wet they're very nice to burn. We'll grow so rugged, strong and brown, we'll know what real health is; don't forget to put the quinine in to keep off rheumatiz. And, papa dear, take him along, he swears at rocks and rills, but we've got to have some sucker there to pay our little bills. So don't ask why, but come with us, be merry woodland elves; when summer's o'er and we return we may ask why ourselves.

He said—"Sneezing."

She said: "My goodness! How in the world could they put you in here for sneezing?"

He said: "I woke the gentleman up."—Cook County Jail Journal.

DOCTOR ADVOCATED OPERATION--- PE-RU-NA MADE KNIFE UNNECESSARY.

CATARRH is a very frequent cause of that class of diseases popularly known as female weakness.

Catarrh of the pelvic organs produces such a variety of disagreeable and irritating symptoms that many people—in fact, the majority of people—have no idea that they are caused by catarrh.

If all the women who are suffering with any form of female weakness would write to Dr. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio, and give him a complete description of their symptoms and the peculiarities of their troubles, he will immediately reply with complete directions for treatment, free of charge.

Mrs. Eva Bartho, 133 East 12th street, N. Y. City, N. Y., writes: "I suffered for three years with leucorrhea and ulceration of the womb. The doctor advocated an operation which I dreaded very much, and strongly objected to go under it. Now I am a changed woman. Peruna cured me; it took nine bottles, but I felt so much improved I kept taking it, as I dreaded an operation so much. I am today in perfect health and have not felt so well for fifteen years." Mrs. Eva Bartho.

Miss Maud Steinbach, 1309 12th St., Milwaukee, Wis., writes:

"Last winter I felt sick most of the time, was irregular and suffered from nervous exhaustion and severe bearing down pains. I had so frequently heard of Peruna and what wonderful cures it performed so I sent for a bottle and in four weeks my health and strength were entirely restored to me."—Miss Maud Steinbach.

Every where the women are using Peruna and praising it. Peruna is not a palliative simply; it cures by removing the cause of female disease.

Dr. Hartman has probably cured more women of female ailments than any other living physician. He makes these cures simply by using and recommending Peruna.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

...GO., RECORDER.
BOONE...Wednesday, - - June 10, 1903.
W. L. RIDDELL, - - Publisher.

THE postoffice department slanders continue to grow, and are becoming very annoying to the adminstration.

WHILE the Democrats are fighting among themselves the Republicans are lining up to elect the next President.

AN attempt was made early Monday morning to assassinate B. J. Ewan, the leading witness for the prosecution in the Marcum case at Jackson.

WITH few exceptions the Democratic press in the State is demanding Allie Young's retirement as chairman of the party's governing committees.

THE last issue of the Williamstown Courier contains the pictures of fifteen of the largest taxpayers in Grant county. The largest list is that of J. H. Musselman, $37,739. Mrs. Kate Conrad is second with a list amounting to $33,965.

INDICTMENTS have been returned by the Washington grand jury against the Groff Brothers for their alleged offers of bribes to A. W. Machen. The case of James N. Tyner, whose wife rifled a safe in the Post-office Department will be considered next by the grand jury.

THE district court of the United States at Chicago has made the order perpetual by restraining the great packers from carrying out such agreements and methods as violated the law forbidding combinations in restraint of interstate trade and the obstruction of the laws of supply and demand.

THE Republicans of Lee county have called on Judge Beckner, of Winchester, a recent acquisition from the Democratic ranks, to become a candidate for the Republican nomination for Attorney-General. Verily it does seem that the g. o. p. in Kentucky is soon to be the property of ex-Democrats, both as to federal and State positions.

State Auditor Coulter, collected through Auditor Agent, Allie Harrison, the sum of $3,015 back taxes on real estate in Bell County. The taxes were due on lands that were sold at Sheriff's sales in 1891-92 and 1893 and more than half of the $3,000 was for penalties and interest. It is a rare thing that a tax claim 12 years old is ever collected, but the new revenue law seems to be catching old claims as well as new ones.

The Democratic State Executive Committee at Frankfort by a vote of eight to three endorsed Chairman Allie W. Young in his recent action in regard to the Lonisville primary. The resolution of endorsement was offered by C. M. Meacham, who has recently been antagonistic to Young. Judge Lassing, Judge Lee and Judge Jones were the three who opposed the resolution. Referring to the matter the Courier-Journal said:

"Committeeman Lee arose when his name was called and objected to the adoption, or even the consideration, of the resolutions by the committee. He urged that the other side had not been given fair treatment in not being accorded a hearing, and argued that the executive committee should not mix in the wrangles brought on in the party by the State Central Committee. He voted 'no' very positively, and sat down. Judge Lassing and Judge Jones had their names passed to the bottom of the roll call. Lassing then arose and made objection to the resolution and voted 'no' and Judge Jones pursued a similar course. Judge Lassing explained his vote by saying that he did not doubt the honesty and loyalty of Mr. Young and that he was personally friendly to him, but that he seriously doubted the wisdom of the interference of the committee in the matter. He said that much of the trouble in the party had arisen through the belief of some that fair hearings had not been given and authority had been transgressed. Therefore he thought action certainly ought not to be taken until all the committee could be notified of the contemplated consideration of this question. Judge Jones indorsed what Lassing had said. The resolution was declared adopted and Young arose and thanked the committee for its action. In his remarks he was especially bitter toward the Courier-Journal for its publication of his movements and actions recently."

It has frequently been remarked, and as often demonstrated, that there is no essential difference in the treatment of negroes North and South when conditions are similar. When negroes appear in northern communities in sufficient numbers to give trouble, they are liable to be treated precisely as they are under similar conditions in the South. The disposition to resort to lawless violence is always to be deplored, but the point is that it is not a sectional matter at all, and those who try to cast discredit upon one section on account of it would do well to look nearer home. Details of the riot which occurred just out of the city limits of Pittsburg on Sunday show that large parties were in the habit of going out to West Liberty borough to play and to witness games of baseball, which were permitted by the authorities provided there was no gambling allowed. Some negro chuck-a-luck players and crap-shooters persisted in going out there to prey upon the crowds attracted by the ball games. When an attempt was made to drive them away they drew revolvers, and severely beat a negro who was the "mascot" of the ball club. A riot followed, in which one negro was shot and beaten to death. Another was shot and wounded and dragged by the neck over a four acre field, and was with difficulty saved from hanging. Various others were badly injured.

It will be observed that the provocation in this case was much smaller than that which is so often the occasion of mob violence in the South. The negroes, however, were the aggressors in the first instance. They manifested a contempt for the laws and the rights of others, though a resort to legal remedies in the first place might have prevented any serious disturbance. But hot blood brought on a collision, and there was an outburst of violence which was uncontrollable.

Some half a dozen negro gamblers, resolved to ply their trade at all hazards, precipitated this riot and resort to mob violence. What wonder is it, therefore, that in communities where there are hundreds of negroes many of them inclined to lawlessness, there should be outbreaks of similar violence? Such summary vengeance is not to be justified in any section, but when Northern communities come in contact with lawless negroes, as in this instance they are helped to the conclusion that the mob spirit is not at all a matter of geography, but is just as liable to manifest itself in one section as in another when the provocation is the same.—Courier Journal.

Monday, with the river standing at 37.5 feet, St. Louis and vicinity felt the full force of the flooded Mississippi. Twenty lives are known to have been lost, 25,000 persons are homeless, over 200,000 acres of fertile farming lands, are submerged, and the factory district of East St. Louis is flooded, causing a total estimated property loss of $3,000,000. Railroad traffic is almost completely suspended as a result of the high water. It is probable a special session of the Kansas Legislature will be called to appropriate money for the construction of new bridges and to furnish farmers seed with which to replant their crops.

AN effort is being made to get Hon. A. E. Wilson, of Louisville, to quit being a candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor. Mr. Wilson's political aspirations have a habit of not paning out much. It was not many years ago that he wanted to be the Republican candidate for U. S. Senator before the Kentucky General Assembly, and thought he had the nomination nailed down, but when the time came he discovered he had been entirely forgotten as a candidate. It is said of Mr. Wilson that he is a very excellent gentleman which may be the cause of his political stranding.

The cases of Jett and White were called at Jackson Monday and postponed until Tuesday to allow time to summon twenty-five additional veniremen from Magoffin county. The veniremen in Jackson are kept under guard at the court house. They are in charge of George Whittaker, who by agreement of the attorneys, has been appointed deputy elisor. Judge Redwine has decided that Jett and White may occupy the same cage, but they will be in separate cells about nine feet apart.

THE Republicans are crawling over each other to get into the Roosevelt band wagon. Even Mr. Hanna did some hustling the other day to secure a front seat.

IN a fight at Pittsburg, Laurel county, Sunday, Joe Prewitt shot and seriously wounded Jerry and Ballard Spurlock, brothers. It is believed Jerry Spurlock will die. On the same day at Brock, in the same county, an attempt was made to assassinate George Watkins. He was shot in the back, but the wound is not considered dangerous.

As the result of an order closing the saloons in Huntington, West Virginia, and prohibiting the sale of whisky without a physician's prescription containing quinine, the supply of that drug gave out in a remarkably short time.

THE indication is that all the next Republican national convention will have to do will be to ratify President Roosevelt's nomination (it being already made by the rank and file of the party), and select his running mate.

It is seldom that the farmers of this part of the country are as far behind with their work. The work of preparing their corn land was done between showers, which have been so frequent since corn came up that it has been impossible to cultivate it, and the weeds are are having a full swing. Some who waited for their ground to dry out have not planted their corn yet. Prospects for a crop of corn are gloomy about now.

There was a cloud burst in the Pt. Pleasant neighborhood, last Saturday about noon. It did much damage to plowed land, fencing and poultry. That prong of Gunpowder creek which has its source in that neighborhood came down like a torrent, sweeping everything before it. While Captain A. B. Pattison was visiting the battle field at Gettysburg the other day he succeeded in locating a large bowlder behind which he sought shelter during the furious attack of the Confederate troops on the exposed position of the Union ranks. Miss Florence Thacker, aged about 17, of London, Laurel county, was a guest of jailer Adams about 30 hours, last week. She is an inmate at the School of Reform at Lexington, and several weeks ago she and six others made their escape from that institution. Miss Florence and one of her companions made their way to Cincinnati, thence to Petersburg, this county. A reward had been offered for their capture, and when her companion visited Aurora a few days after their appearance at Petersburg, she was arrested and lodged in jail there from whence she was taken back to Lexington. The Thacker girl learning the fate of her companion, left Petersburg, going to Clinton Gaines' near Bullittsville, at which place she was found by Constable Ab Black, last Wednesday, who brought her to Burlington and lodged her in jail that afternoon. Judge Cason was soon in communication by telephone with the Superintendent of the Reform School at Lexington, who requested that the girl be held, and Thursday evening he came and took her back to Lexington. When first brought to Burlington Miss Thacker expressed herself as very much opposed to returning but when the Superintendent arrived she had changed her mind and was willing to go with him. The Thacker girl made the sixth one that had been captured and returned to the school.

TRIAL OF THE FEUDISTS.

Curt Jett and Tom White Will Be Tried at Jackson, Ky.

Jackson, Ky., June 4.—The order changing the trial of Curt. Jett and Tom White, charged with murder, to Morgan county was withdrawn Wednesday morning, and the cases are to be tried here as soon as a jury can be summoned from an adjoining county. The trial was set for Monday. The attorneys for defense and prosecution in the Jett and White murder cases can not agree upon an elisor, and Judge Redwine will appoint one Thursday morning. Capt. B. J. Ewen, the star witness in the Marcum murder, returned to Jackson Wednesday night. Late Wednesday evening Capt. Ewen requested a guard for his home. Capt. Longmire with 10 men was detailed for this duty.

With the trials of Curtis Jett and Tom White set for Monday there is no developments of special interests to be expected before that day. However incidents wholly unexpected and of liveliest interest have crowded upon one another in rapid succession since the troops have been in Jackson and the news situation bids fair to remain rich in possibilities. The lull in striking events will mean no diminution in the work developing upon the soldiers and the call of the sentry, the tramp of relieving squads, and the blast of the bugle will be heard with unbroken regularity. The militia will always be on the alert for possible attack, and no precaution will be omitted.

The capture of the searchlight which has been operated on the mountain side and possibly the arrest of prowlers who insist on firing off their pistols nightly in the vicinity of the camp may be incidents of the week. Thursday morning Judge Redwine will announce the appointment of an elisor to perform the duties of sheriff during the trials and will direct him as to the county from which he is to secure a jury. Judge Redwine would not give out the name of the man chosen Wednesday night. The cancellation of the order transferring the cases of White and Jett to Morgan county was not unexpected, and while not what Jackson people have urged and wanted, the decision to hold the trials here was by comparison gratifying. It was not believed that a more undesirable place could be found until West Liberty was chosen.

Jackson, Ky., June 5.—The sensation of the day was the attempt of Sheriff Callahan to be recognized for services in the trial of the cases of Curtis Jett and Tom White, accused of the murder of J. B. Marcum. Invited to withdraw his claim, he refused, and after the filing of affidavits by the prosecution was formally removed. His deputy, John Jones, was then appointed elisor. Neither side offered objection to him. "It is your duty," said Judge Redwine, "to summons only men who are intelligent and honest and of good repute. Get on your horse as soon as this storm is over, go to Magoffin county and order 60 men to report here by Sunday night."

Jones left on the mission Thursday afternoon. Jones is a native of Troublesome creek, in Breathitt county, and has been a deputy sheriff eight years. Because he tried one of the Eversoles while justice of the peace during the French-Eversole feud, his house was riddled with bullets, but he escaped. He was thereafter identified with the French faction.

The cases of Jett and White will be called Monday.

THE GREAT BUILDING LOCKOUT.

Contrary to All Anticipations It Is Still on in New York.

New York, June 4.—Contrary to all anticipations, the great building lockout is still on. At the meeting Wednesday of the United Board of Building Trades, representing the labor men, the faction which favors a continuation of the strike lockout, won. By the vote of 22 to 13 the board decided to support the contention of the United Building Material Drivers' union. Incidentally it rejected the report of the committee of five which recommended as a basis of settlement that the drivers be thrown out of the organization. There was a big fight in the board and it was finally decided to put the matter over for final settlement until Monday.

As far as the lockout is concerned this not only puts the situation back where it was, but injects a fighting element in the board.

Five Persons Were Killed and About Thirty Injured.

Columbia, S. C., June 4.—Six miles out from Sumter an excursion train on the Atlantic Coast line loaded with Negroes early Wednesday ran into a washout. THE FLOOD AT TOPEKA.

List of Known Dead 71—Much Property Damaged.

Sixteen Bridges Across the Kansas River Are Gone—The Waters Are Subsiding and Business Is Resuming at Kansas City.

Topeka, Kan., June 5.—The bodies of seven more flood victims were found Thursday. The list of known dead now reaches 71, with 30 people identified. It is the belief that many bodies are yet in the wreck. Scores are reported missing and there is no way of immediately locating them. The Union Pacific depot has been improvised as a morgue and there the bodies are gathered to await identification. The river Thursday fell 13 inches. This makes a drop of over five feet from the high water mark. It is just now that the devastating power of the flood is becoming known. North Topeka is a total wreck. There is a town there—the plaything of the elements—which seem to have worried it until they are tired and then left it stranded. The water is still over a great part of the town. In the residence district it is seven feet deep in most places and there is considerable current. But the current is no longer strong and flows along as if only anxious to get back into the bed of the river.

The business part of the town is a sorry looking place, the damage of the waters being almost complete. The fronts of most of the stores have openings broken through. The contents of most of the stores are ruined. The currents came rushing through with such force that they upset counters and boxes and whatever came in their way, and dragged the goods stored high on the shelves into the water. In nearly every building which was not washed away the contents are piled high on the side the furthermost down stream, and over all there is a slime of fine sand mixed with a little mud. This deposit varies from a few inches to two or three feet and is over everything.

In the residence districts practically the same sights presents themselves.

From Manhattan, Abilene, Salina, Florence, Lincoln, Center and Hutchinson come reports that the water has about spent its force and that the towns are slowly recovering.

Kansas City, June 5.—Estimates of the damage done by the flood are reducing. At first they ranged from $10,000,000 up. But now they are all much below that sum. The greatest loss was of the 16 bridges across the Kansas river. The packing house plants did not suffer severely. The buildings are all uninjured. At Armour's the fires were lighted late Thursday afternoon. The wheat and flour in the mills and the elevators were not injured, but 750 carloads of grain submerged on the tracks was ruined.

The railroads began to open cars Thursday, but the greater part of the freight cars are still partly covered. Small storekeepers in the flooded district are ruined, and the losses on buildings are distributed among thousands of owners.

With the rapid fall of river business is resuming its normal condition. The water works are pumping back water from the Kansas river, not fit to drink, and the danger from fire is over. Electric car lines is in operation. The telephone and telegraph connection will be established between the two Kansas Cities Friday.

At the stock yards 2,500 hogs and 300 cattle were drowned. A force of men began Thursday to remove the carcasses where lodged in drift. The current through the stock yards district flows ten miles an hour. This makes it difficult to get about, the water being still deep, but the stream carries away the refuse promptly.

Most of the missing persons have been accounted for and it is not thought the total dead will exceed eight persons.

TWO TRAINS CAME TOGETHER.

Eleven People Killed and Several Injured at Stilwell, Kan.

Topeka, Kan., June 5.—Eleven persons were killed Thursday at Stilwell, Kan., in a head-end collision between Santa Fe passenger trains which were running at a high rate of speed on the Missouri Pacific tracks on account of the flood. On the east-bound train five passengers and three tramps were killed. Only one trainman was injured.

Among the dead are Frank Hoover, Steubenville, O.; B. McMahon, Prescott, Ariz.; H. B. Ward.

Among the injured are Wm. Woods, Steubenville, O.; Owen Patchman, Ottawa, Ia.; A. L. Sellers, North Manchester, Ind., right arm fractured and chest injured, and John Green, Indianapolis, left leg fractured.

Five coaches and both locomotives were thrown into the ditch.

Orders were somewhat mixed, it is said, on account of the strange tracks. Since the flood destroyed or disabled the Santa Fe tracks on its main line trains have been running over the tracks of the Missouri Pacific road.

News of the wreck was delayed on account of the poor wires left by the rains and the flood. A relief train went to Stilwell as soon as possible.

The tracks were cleared by sundown and traffic was resumed.

The dead and wounded were taken to Kansas City. The train was unable to reach the station because of floods and the wounded were carried for miles in ambulances to the Missouri Pacific hospital.

RANCHMEN'S QUARREL.

Dewey Cattlemen Kill E. M. Berry and Two Sons.

St. Francis, Kan., June 5.—Authentic reports received Thursday night from the scene of Wednesday night's tragedy in the southern part of this county indicate that the Dewey cattle men went to the Berry cattle ranch and killed E. M. Berry and his two sons, mortally wounded another and seriously injured the fourth.

The Berry version of the matter is that three of them were working in the field and two of them at the house, all unarmed, when a gang of the Dewey men, with Chauncey Dewey at their head, rode up and deliberately attempted to kill them all. Dewey alleges that they went over to get a water tank that belonged to the land, that the Berrys opened fire on them and they did the killing in self-defense.

There had been bitter feeling between the Berrys and Deweys ever since the Deweys invaded the country. About two years ago the Deweys commenced to acquire title to all the land they could in the southeastern part of this county and the adjoining corner of Rawlins. Sherman and Thomas counties. The Berrys are among the few who have stayed with their homes, and have been in continual litigation. It is said that Chauncey Dewey and two of his men, McBride and Wilson, did the shooting.

The coroner's jury finds that Chauncey Dewey, from behind a sod wall, killed one of the Berrys and mortally wounded another and that the Berrys were absolutely unarmed.

Sheriff McCulloch wires from Atwood that he has Dewey and his men under arrest.

The Deweys belong to a rich Chicago concern. They own thousands of acres of land.

MACHEN INDICTED.

Charged With Sharing Profits on Government Contracts.

Two Postal Clerks Arrested Charged With Conspiracy to Defraud the Government in Purchase of Leather Pouches.

Washington, June 6.—The grand jury Friday reported an indictment against August W. Machen, former superintendent of the free delivery service of the post office department, who was arrested several days ago charged with sharing profits on government contracts for letter box fasteners. The indictment was brought for violation of section 5501 of the Revised Statutes, the penalty for violation of which is a "fine not more than three times the amount asked or accepted or received and by imprisonment not more than three years."

The amount which the indictment states he received illegally is $18,987.79. Mr. Machen was in court with his attorneys when the grand jury reported and immediately gave bond in the sum of $20,000 for his appearance in court. His sureties were O. G. Staples, David Moore, F. M. Criswell and Emanuel Speich, of this city. The trial will occur in October.

By securing an indictment of Machen before Saturday, the day set for his preliminary hearing before Commissioner Taylor, the government has scored a victory in that it has avoided the necessity of showing its hand at a preliminary hearing.

In discussing the case with his friends Mr. Machen says that certain checks which it is maintained were sent to him in payment of his profits in the groff fastener and which have been secured by the post office inspectors, were sent him by his business partner, George E. Lorenz, of Toledo, O., and formerly postmaster of that city.

Mr. Machen claims that his partnership with Lorenz was a strictly legitimate one and that the checks transmitted to him by Lorenz were in connection with mining business which the firm conducted. Mr. Machen further states to his friends that he was not a partner of the Groff Bros.' concern and that he did not receive any of the profits from the sale of the letter box fastener to the government.

It is expected by the post office department that the grand jury will report on the cases of the Groff Bros., of this city, the contractors for the letter box fasteners, early next week.

As a result of the sweeping investigation of affairs at the post office department Thomas W. McGregory, clerk in charge of the supplies for the rural free delivery service, and C. Elsworth Upton, of Baltimore, one of McGregor's assistants, were arrested Friday. They are charged with a conspiracy with Charles E. Smith and others to defraud the United States government in the purchase of pouches from C. E. Smith of Baltimore.

The complaint sets forth that McGregor and Upton agreed with Smith to obtain for him orders for many thousands of leather pouches such as are used by rural letter carriers. The price agreed upon was 90 cents per pouch; the actual value was less than 50 cents. Smith was to pay to them the difference between 90 and 50 cents per pouch.

It is stated at the department that the actual number of pouches which were purchased exceeded 20,000, for which the government paid 90 cents each or $18,000 in all. Smith received and retained of this for his own use $10,000. The remaining $8,000 was paid to McGregor and Upton. The government could have bought the entire number of pouches from the manufacturers for $8,000. McGregor was the clerk in charge of rural free delivery supplies, and Upton was one of his assistants.

Thos. W. McGregor has been in the postal service since 1891. He came here from Nebraska as a messenger and subsequently was promoted to a clerkship and finally was appointed by Mr. Machen in charge of the supply work of the rural free delivery service. Mr. Upton is a Baltimorean and has been in the postal service for 13 years.

Saved His Life.

Whitehall, Ill., June 8th.—Mr. Lon Manley had Bright's Disease and after his home doctor had treated him for sometime he finally told him that he could do nothing more for him, and that he would surely die.

A friend who had heard of what Dodd's Kidney Pills had done in cases of Kidney Trouble, advised Mr. Manley to try a treatment of this remedy.

He did so and everyone was surprised and delighted to see an improvement in a very short time. This improvement gradually kept on as the treatment proceeded, till now Mr. Manley is well. He says:

"The doctor said he had done all he could for me. He gave me up. A friend advised me to take Dodd's Kidney Pills, and in a few weeks I was nearly all right again.

"I am not dead, and can truthfully say that I feel better today than I have for years. Dodd's Kidney Pills are a wonderful remedy and I will always praise them and recommend them to everyone suffering as I did."

Mr. Manley's recovery has caused a profound sensation, as no one ever thought he would recover.

We imitate only what we believe and admire.—Wilmott.

A COLLISION AT SEA.

More Than One Hundred Passengers Drowned Near Marseilles.

At the Same Time the Boilers Exploded Intensifying the Horrors—So Far Thirty Dead Bodies Have Been Recovered.

Marseilles, June 8.—More than 100 persons, passengers and crew, were drowned near Marseilles Sunday in a collision between the Insulaire and the Liban, passenger steamers belonging to the Fraissenet Steamship Co., of Marseilles. The Liban sank and 77 passengers and 17 of the crew were saved, while the remainder perished. The steamer Liban left Marseilles Sunday morning on her regular passenger trip to Bastia, Corsica, and was run down and sunk by the Insulaire off the Maire islands.

The collision was witnessed from the pilot boat Biechamp, which was about two miles distant. The Biechamp immediately repaired to the spot to render assistance. The force of the collision had cut a great hole in the Liban's side and it already was making water rapidly. The captain saw that the only chance was to run the steamer aground, and the Liban was headed full speed for the shore; but within 17 minutes after the collision and while still in deep water, the forepart of the steamer plunged beneath the waves and a few minutes later it had disappeared.

In the meantime the Biechamp, the steamer Balkan, also belonging to the Fraissenet Co., and other vessels had drawn near the sinking ship and were making desperate efforts to rescue those on board. The Biechamp picked up 40 persons, many of whom were at the point of exhaustion. The Balkan rescued 37 passengers and up to the present it is known that in addition to the passengers, 17 of the crew were also saved.

Officers of the steamer Balkan describe the scene just before the Liban disappeared as a terrible one. As the vessel was sinking it was inclined to such an angle that her masts struck the water causing an eddy which made the work of rescue most difficult. A mass of human beings was clinging to the foundering vessel and uttering despairing cries as it went down. At the same time the boilers exploded, intensifying the horrors. For a few moments the victims were seen struggling in the sea, then the waves closed over them and all was silent. Of about 200 passengers who were aboard the Liban, it is feared that half were drowned.

The Balkan launched three boats and the other vessels did all possible to save the victims in the short time that elapsed between the time of the collision and the sinking of the Liban. Up to 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon 30 bodies had been recovered.

A SPECK OF POLONIUM.

Marvelous Expression of the Powers of the New Metal.

Berlin, June 8.—At Sunday's session of the chemical congress Prof. W. Markwald, of Berlin, showed to the electro-chemical and physical section a smudge of dark powder on a piece of paper which was the first time that any of those eminent scientists had seen the metal polonium, discovered by Prof. and Madame Curie, of Paris. The latter doubted whether polonium was a primary element or related to bismuth, but Prof. Markwald demonstrated that it was indeed a primary element. He exhibited a bit of metal weighing 15-100 of a grain, which was produced from two tons of uranium at a cost of $75. It is more sparsely distributed in uranium than xenon, the most rarefied gas, is in the atmosphere.

Prof. Markwsld proceeded to give to a marvelous expression of the powers of his speck of polonium.

It intercepted a strong current of electricity passing through the air from the generator to the receiver, the air ceasing to be a conductor for the flashes. The room was then darkened and pieces of barium, platinum and zincblende placed near the polonium, glowed with a bright greenish light. The assemblage of chemists were thrilled with astonishment. It appeared to be a miracle.

OZONE WATER WORKS.

Exhaustive Experiments in Purifying Drinking Water.

Berlin, June 8.—In the section of that organic preparations of the chemical congress, Prof. Proskauor, of Berlin, read a paper on the sterilization of drinking water with ozone and on ozone water works, the German electricians have succeeded in producing at small cost a concentrated solution of ozone. The speaker with Prof. Ohlmueller and Prof. Prail, of the imperial health office, made exhaustive experiments with the solution in purifying water. The experiments included tests with water artificially impregnated with the deadliest disease germs, like typhus, cholera and dysentery. Such water was pumped through the so-called ozonizing tower, and then rigidly analyzed. All the germs were found to be killed whereas the ordinary method of sand filters left the germs living. Moreover, the water was greatly improved in quality through the increase of oxygen from the ozone.

Prof. Proskauor said the ozonizing plant was cheaper than the sand filtering system, usually used in city water works, hence, time had come for the general introduction of ozone plants. The town of Weisbaden, added the professor, already has one of these plants which sterilizes 250 cubic centimeters of water hourly.

THE TEXTILE WORKERS.

A Committee Gives the Reason For the Strike of Over 75,000 Persons.

Philadelphia, June 8.—The working committee of the Central Textile union, composed of one delegate from each union on strike, met at strike headquarters Sunday and considered the situation. After a five hour session the committee, in conjunction with the executive board of the textile workers, issued a statement to the public giving reasons for the strike of over 75,000 men, women and children. The statement says that the strike was ordered for sanitary reasons, that it was necessary because the health of the men, women and children were at stake. The statement called attention to the fact that children were compelled to work ten and three-quarter hours a day in the mills from Monday to Friday and six and one-quarter hours on Saturdays. The statement also declares that the textile industry as shown in statistics produced before the anthracite coal strike commission is deadlier than the mining industry, that the workers in the mills where there is always dust are subject to pulmonary diseases. The statement also asks for the support of the public and reiterates the willingness of the workers to meet their employers for a conference.

FLOODS IN THE SOUTH.

About Eighty Lives Lost and Much Property Damaged.

Cotton Mills at Clifton and Pacolet Sufferad Terribly—Railway Traffic Crippled Owing to the Loss of Trestles and Bridges.

Columbia, S. C., June 8.—Water, not as rain, but in sheets and torrents, fell Saturday evening in the vicinity of Clifton and Pacolet, S. C., swelling the streams until their beds were the confines of the valleys through which they pass.

Though the great flood of water is passing on to the ocean laden with debris of every description and the swollen streams are subsiding in the Piedmont region, the losses of life and property are increasing and a conservative estimate Sunday night places the property loss at not less than $2,500,000. The most conservative estimate of the dead is 80. At Clifton alone 100 operatives are missing from the village and all are believed to have been lost. During the day dead bodies were washed ashore here and there and occasionally a dismembered limb would float to the banks.

B. S. Johnson, reported as drowned, after clinging to a house top from Clifton down to Pacolet, escaped by catching hold of a tree and returned Sunday to find his wife and four children drowned.

At Converse mills, the newest of the Clifton cluster, the walls are washed away and the looms left standing. The engine bricks were carried three miles down stream, demolishing the operatives' houses on the way.

Reports from the Seneca river near the Georgia line were better Sunday night. The Blue Ridge road between Seneca and Anderson is intact and the Newry mill is not badly damaged and will be running Monday.

The railroad situation has given much uneasiness here and throughout the state Sunday.

The Southern railway Sunday annulled trains between Columbia and Spartanburg, 200 feet of the trestle at Shelton, below Union, having been washed away. The Coast Line trestle, two miles west of the city, affords the only exit from Columbia to the Piedmont country and it is apparently a frail structure a mile and a half in length with wooden benches upon an island in midstream. This bridge was firm at midnight and the water is rising more slowly. The breaks on the trestles will be repaired within 48 hours if the coast line trestle holds out until Monday morning.

HIGH WATER AT ST. LOUIS.

A small steamer from St. Charles succeeded in reaching Black Walnut Sunday night and the 200 imperiled people, terrified and in great distress for food and shelter, were taken from the island in safety. All were rescued.

St. Louis, June 8.—Word has been received that a levee near Madison, on which gangs of men were working, gave way and that 15 men, employes of the American Car and Foundry works, were probably killed. CRACKER BAKERS.

The Employes of the National Biscuit Co. to Strike.

Chicago, June 8.—A general strike of the various plants of the National Biscuit Co. all over the country is to be called soon according to a statement made at a meeting of the Chicago Federation of Labor by Delegate McIntosh, representing the Cracker Bakers' union. Mr. McIntosh made the declaration that National Secretary Harzbecker, of the Bakers' and Confectioners' International union, with headquarters in Cleveland, had issued the general strike order in conformity with the action of the recent convention of that union, where, he said, it had been decided to make a fight on that concern because it refused to treat with these unions.

Cities in which the National Biscuit Co. has plants and which will be affected by the general strike order are Chicago, Kansas City, St. Joseph, Mo., Cleveland, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Denver, Indianapolis, Philadelphia and Detroit.

Several thousand workers will be affected.

THE NEW MILITIA LAW.

Opinions Given on Various Disputed Matters of Construction.

Washington, June 6.—Judge Advocate General Davis has sent to the secretary of war an opinion relative to various disputed matters of construction of the new militia law. One point raised was whether section 14 of the militia act relating to expenditure of money for the militia waa not in conflict with the federal constitution, the contention being that it would take the militia from the control of the states. Gen. Davis points out that the new militia law does not differ materially from the present law and that all that will be necessary is a change in the forms for accounting to be made to the treasury department.

A more important point raised concerns section 15, which provides for the participation of the militia of the several states in manouvera and field instructions of the regular army, but with a further proviso that the command of a military post or camp and of the officers and troops of the United States stationed where such maneuvers occur shall remain with the regular commander of the post without regard to the rank of the commanding or other officers of the militia temporarily encamped there. Gen. Davis holds that such portions of the national guard as participate in the maneuvers of operations do so for the purpose of improving their discipline and efficiency and that in such participation they act under the orders of their respective governors. While so engaged the several organizations of the national guard he says remain under the control of their several commander-in-chiefs and not having been "called forth" in the manner prescribed in the constitution do not pass under the command and control of the president as commander-in-chief of the land and naval forces of the United States.

He holds that the enlisted men of the national guard are not entitled to increased pay in virtue of previous service in the militia but says that officers who have served five years in the militia are entitled under the law to the same ten per cent. increase in pay that is provided for officers of the army.

The judge advocate general says that in applying section 18 the drills and encampments which took place in any state or territory during the year ended December 31, 1902, should be considered in determining the right of the state or territory to participate in the benefits conferred by previous and present laws.

THE PRESIDENT AT HOME.

He Ended His Trip of Over Two Months in the West.

Washington, June 6. — President Roosevelt returned to Washington Friday night from his trip of over two months throughout the west. He was given a hearty reception by the people of the capital. He looked the picture of health.

Many government officers met the president at the station. Secretary of Posta Payne threw his arms about Roosevelt and whispered to him.

When the president reached home, he reviewed the high school cadets, who had formed his escort from the railway station to the white house. The Marine band was playing in the back yard, and there many were assembled to welcome the traveler home.

The cause of his death is a deep mystery, and in the absence of any definite clews bearing on the case, the police presume that he waa awakened by burglars during the night and when he went out in his yard to investigate received the fatal shot. Weeds and rain are plentiful about now.

It is said that the dirt roads in some places are worse than they were during the early spring.

Several neighborhoods have been visited by rains in the last ten days that did great damage to land, crops and fencing.

Wheat harvest will be on hand in two weeks, which will make the farmers very busy people with it and weedy corn fields.

Onnie Rouse's grist mill was quite busy last Monday. The crop of young chickens has increased the quantity of corn that finds its way to the mill.

Aquilla Jackson, who killed Claud McGuire in Grant county several months ago by cutting his throat, was tried in the circuit court at Williamstown, last week, and acquitted.

NOTICE.—Every member of Viola Lodge, I. O. O. F. is requested to be present at the meeting next Saturday afternoon, as business of vital importance to the lodge will be considered.

W. L. RADDELL, Secty.

Judge Lassing's court at Williamstown did considerable work in the criminal division, last week. One man was cleared of the charge of murder, while three others were given two years each in pen—two for burglary and one a negro, for killing another.

The Bellevue and Burlington second nines played a game of ball here last Saturday afternoon, the score being 10 to 3 in favor of the latter. The visitors were minus several of their best players, hence the one-sided score. The two teams meet at Bellevue next Saturday afternoon.

Lightning got in its work at several places near town, last Saturday. It struck two locust trees in G. T. Gaines' yard out on the Petersburg pike. Moses Tanner died of heart disease at his residence on Gunpowder below Limaburg, last Friday, aged, 71 years, 8 months and 29 days. The funeral was preached at Hopeful last Sunday afternoon by Rev. S. M. Adams in the presence of large assemblage of friends and relatives. The remains were interred in the cemetery at that place. Mr. Tanner had been suffering from heart disease for quite a while, and was thought to be considerably better last Friday morning, and was sitting on his porch talking to James Barlow when the summons came. Mr. Barlow's eyesight is very poor and he could not see Mr. Tanner when he fell out of his chair and off of the porch. Hearing, however, the noise caused by the fall he suspected something was wrong and spoke to Mr. Tanner, and receiving no answer he called Mrs. Wm. Star who, with her husband, kept the house. After she arrived the expiring man opened his eyes once but never spoke. Rev. Taylor, of Erlanger, was passing on his way to Gunpowder church and was called, and he carried the body into the house.

In the death of Moses Tanner the county loses one of its good citizens. He was a quiet, unassuming gentleman who attended strictly to his own affairs, and wished everybody well. He had passed man's allotted time a few years, and his entire life was well spent. He was born and raised in this county, and never lived to exceed five miles from his birth place.

Rice Bros., of Idlewild neighborhood, have lost four suckling calves in the last week from a disease Dr. Crisler has pronounced anthrax. When the first one died it seemed to be badly bruised and they thought it had been struck by lightning. A second one died and appeared to be badly bruised, and they then concluded that some of the large cattle had injured it, but when the third one died without an opportunity of being injured either by lightning or other cattle, the boys were at a loss for any cause to assign for its death, and when, last Sunday morning they discovered the fourth calf was sick they telephoned for the veterinary, but the calf was dead before he got there. Dr. Crisler examined the dead calf and pronounced the disease anthrax which is contagious and nearly always fatal. It is a disease of the blood it refusing to circulate through the heart properly, settling at various points in the body. It is not known how the disease got started among the herd of eight very handsome calves, and the veterinary is fearful that the remaining four calves may die of the disease, and that its ravages may not be confined to the calves only. Dr. Crisler will try to prevent the further spead of the disease by inoculating all the other cattle on the farm.

D. E. Castleman wears a very light "straw" hat—one of the kind that is so light that he has to hold it on his head when talking to you to prevent it being carried off by your breath, and it was only last Thursday afternoon that this light weight hat caused a very great commotion among the passengers in a Q. & C. coach in the Central depot, Cincinnati, by causing its owner to do a stunt that was not down on the bill. When Mr. C. entered the train to come to Erlanger, he took a seat by the side of a friend and removed his hat and laid it in front of them. About the time the train was getting a good move on a current of air caught the hat and didn't do a thing but carry it out of the coach through a window, and its owner followed in close pursuit like a hawk after a sparrow. This daring feat caused the passengers to hold their breath, and just as they imagined the train was slowing up to stop and return to the dead and mutilated body of Boone's County Attorney, he appeared at the forward end of the coach, hat in hand. As soon as the passengers recovered from their surprise they cheered him heartily. Mr. C. says when his hat went out through the window, being seated near the center of the coach, he saw it was impossible to recover it unless he left the coach by the same route, which he traveled very successfully. Having recovered the hat he had to make derby-winning time to overtake the coach from which his departure was so abrupt, but he was equal to the emergency.

Man born of woman is little persimmons and generally green. His life might be divided into four parts. As he starts his stomach is full of pains, blackberry balsam and paregoric, and he winds up the first period by stealing green apples and fishing on Sunday. The second term, commencing at fifteen, rapidly passes into the smart Aleck fever and he learns to wear standing collars, smoke cigarettes, call his father old man and go with the girls. At twenty-one he has bankrupted his father, and blown in every cent of his own, he finds a women who is fool enough to marry him, and she takes in washing until she is called away. The last period, he lives around with his children, tells the big things he did when he was a boy, and finally goes under, making a momentary bubble on the sea of humanity, then is forgotten.

If proprietors of newspapers when buying goods did as much haggling as the ordinary man when he wants a job of printing done, they would incur the enmity of the entire mercantile world, and justly, too. Every business man ought to know just what he ought to receive for an article, and ordinarily asks no more than he ought to have; yet the printer is supposed to cut in his advertising space and nearly all jobs he does. He, like the other fellow, knows what he can do and ought not to be asked to do more. Every man in business gets more free advertising through the newspapers than from any other source and people ought not to expect him to blow their business and then donate advertising space and throw in the jobs for a mere song.—Butler Herald.

Solomon was a wise man, but he foolishly neglected to take advantage of his opportunities.

The practice of selecting seed corn from the crib, which is followed by many corn raisers, will never prove satisfactory. When that method is pursued there is no opportunity to improve the quality of the seed. When an car of corn may present a good appearance in the heap we should know more of its antecedents and the circumstances under which it was produced before putting it in the seed bin.

ELEVEN LIVES LOST.

Almost Two-Thirds of East St. Louis Under Water.

Business Portion and the District Containing Better Residences Is Still Intact, But For How Long It Is Not Known.

St. Louis, June 11.—Almost two-thirds of the territory embraced by East St. Louis, Ill., is under from two to fifteen feet of water. Between twilight Tuesday night and dawn Wednesday 11 lives were sacrificed to the angry waters, and damage which no man Wednesday attempted to estimate has been done to property. Not a wheel of industry is turning in East St. Louis, but the flood waters whirl and suck at the foundations of many great buildings that have been deserted.

The vast railroad yards are made apparent by hundreds of half-submerged cars and locomotives.

Huge grain elevators stand surrounded by running water. To the south, beyond the railway yards, are thousands of cottages owned by laborers and containing their all, submerged to the eaves.

The business portion of the city and the district containing the better residences is still intact but for how long is not known. Broadway, running from Eads bridge east to the city limits a wide street built of sand and walled with stone, 15 feet high, divides the city in halves. Over ten feet of water is pressing against Broadway from the south and in many places is seeping through in streams as thick as a man's body. Traffic over certain portions of the thoroughfare has been prohibited and even pedestrians are not allowed to traverse these threatened portions. If Broadway breaks, the water will rush over much of the city until Missouri avenue, running parallel one block north, is encountered.

Along the river front to the west a levee of sand bags from two to six feet high and two miles long keeps the river out.

Tuesday evening word was received that the Illinois Central embankment skirting the river along the southern boundary of the city was threatening to give way.

Couriers were sent on horseback to shout warnings to the inhabitants of the southern half of the city and hundreds of laborers and citizens hastened to the embankment. Locomotives rushed car loads of sand bags to the place and work was hurriedly began. Accustomed by this time to warnings of impending danger the inhabitants did not leave their homes. Higher and higher crept the water until a thin stream began to pour over the embankment and suddenly it broke.

The break occurred at 11:40 o'clock. The water cut a section of the embankment out and a stream 25 feet wide rushed through. Another section of the embankment went out a few minutes later and then that portion standing between the two streams went down and the river poured through. It is believed that many men, especially Negroes, were drowned.

The alarm spread like wildfire and whistles were blown, bells rung, shots fired and cries of warning were sounded, but even with all this pandemonium many of the inhabitants failed to leave their homes. Within an hour the house stood in water that reached to the roofs of the one-story cottages. Many fled to large brick buildings. Rescue boats Wednesday found many people in second stories and on housetops but there is grave fear too that when all living have been transferred to land, the boats will bear bodies of dead from the flooded cottages and the desolated quarter.

St. Louis, June 12.—That the crisis of the flood situation in East St. Louis has passed so far as that city is concerned was generally accepted as a fact by the citizens of East St. Louis Thursday night. Boat crews which Wednesday strained their energies to the point of exhaustion in rescuing the prisoners of flood, Thursday occupied themselves in saving property and in bringing to higher ground belated refugees who previously had not believed themselves in immediate danger. The river has fallen two inches since 6 o'clock, the gauge at midnight reading 37.7 feet.

TAKING TESTIMONY.

Ewen Swore That He Saw Jett Kill Marcum.

Provost Marshal Is Now in Charge of Jackson, Ky., Under the Order of Col. Williams in Command of the Troops.

Jackson, Ky., June 11.—The trial of Curtis Jett and Tom White for the murder of Attorney Marcum began Wednesday morning. Capt. B. F. Ewen was the first witness called. He said:

"Marcum and I were in conversation. I was looking toward him, with my back to the west door-jamb of the courthouse. When the shot was fired I saw dimly in the smoke the form of a man approaching. I ran when Marcum fell, but I looked back and saw Curtis Jett approach him with his revolver in both hands. He came up to within six feet, I thought, of the man lying on the floor and deliberately shot him in the head. I feared he would also try to shoot me and I ran further away. After he fired the second shot he stood a second as if to make certain of the deed and then turned. While running away I kept looking in his direction to be certain of his movements, as in the event he had tried to shoot me I would have drawn my revolver."

It was 3 o'clock when the cross-examination of Ewen was concluded and he was excused with the understanding that he might be recalled by the defense. His testimony in response to Attorney Golden's rapid-fire of questions was quite as strong and damaging to the defendants as on direct examination. The defense failed in effort to lay grounds for impeaching his testimony by questions as to his memory, his uninterrupted sanity, etc.

Five minutes before Marcum was assassinated, Attorney John Patrick, who followed Bach, said that he saw Jett and White conversing in front of the courthouse. He saw Jett go into the courthouse several minutes before the shooting. A minute or so after Marcum fell, he saw Jett leave the courthouse by a side door. Later he saw Jett and White walk to the bridge and there saw them talking with Mrs. Marcus Johnson, Marcum's sister.

Wednesday night Mrs. Mary Johnson, sister of the murdered attorney, made a statement which is even more startling than Ewen's admission. In his statement Wednesday morning Commonwealth's Attorney Byrd said that it would be proved that Jett admitted to Mrs. Johnson that he killed Marcum. In the evidence Wednesday afternoon it was stated that Jett and White were seen talking to Mrs. Johnson at the bridge.

A provost marshal Wednesday night was in charge of Jackson. Under the order of Commander Williams, who is in command of the troops, provost guards are to patrol the streets day and night and make arrests for any infractions of the law, including drunkenness, firing pistols, or disorderly conduct of any character.

Jackson, Ky., June 12.—The statement of B. J. Ewen that in the presence of two witnesses five one thousand dollar bills were tendered him on condition that he would repudiate what he had testified to regarding the assassination of James B. Marcum, that death was the alternative threatened and the testimony of Mrs. Johnson, sister of the murdered man, were the features of special interest Thursday affecting the trial of Curtis Jett and Tom White on the charge of murdering J. B. Marcum. Mrs. Johnson reiterated on the stand what she had related Wednesday night, in substance that Jett has admitted to her that he killed her brother, using the language: "Hargis' money did it; I fired the shot."

Jackson, Ky., June 13.—The feature of the Jett-White trial Friday was the drift of evidence towards a conspiracy implicating county officials and others and tending to show that Jett and White had no such motives as the conspirators, but were simply hired to kill J. B. Marcum, who was the attorney for parties contesting the election of county officials. The defense during the forenoon attempted to have the case continued on account of the absence of witnesses and again in the afternoon on account of the illness of one of the attorneys for the defense. In both instances Judge Redwine ordered the trial to proceed.

The prosecution rested its case Saturday. A squad of soldiers have been commissioned to secure the presence of several reluctant witnesses whose testimony will be heard when court reconvenes. The parties wanted are said to be hiding in the woods and some attribute their attitude to fear or intimidation. The defense will attempt to establish an alibi for Jett and prove that White had no connection with the killing. Over 70 witnesses have been summoned. The testimony of Judge Hargis and several other witnesses called by the defense is awaited with much interest in Jackson.

MILITARY REVOLUTION.

Servian King and Queen and Others Put to Death by a Band of Officers.

A NEW GOVERNMENT PROCLAIMED

Changed Condition of Things Welcomed by the Masses and Better Future For Servia Forecasted.

Graphic Account of the Revolt of the Army Officers and the Putting to Death of the King and Queen and the Ministers.

Belgrade, Servia, June 12.—A military revolution broke out here early Thursday morning. The troops, who revolted under the leadership of Maj. Angikovcs, surrounded the palace and assassinated or wounded all within sight. Prince Karageorgevitch was proclaimed king and the new government was formed.

The newspapers forecast a better future for Servia and the new state of things is heartily welcomed by the masses.

Belgrade, June 13.—The assassination of King Alexander and Queen Draga, the queen's two brothers, the Servian premier, the minister of war and the former minister of war, perpetrated in the dark hours of Thursday morning by a band of officers, and the proclamation by the army of Prince Peter Kara-Georgevitch, the pretender to the throne, as king of Servia, has apparently, it may be said now that 36 hours has passed, been accepted by the capital and the Servian people without a murmur. The meeting of the skupschtina on Monday next is now looked forward to confirm the proclamation as king of Prince Kara-Georgevitch and to regularize the new situation.

The only new element in the situation is a feeling among the intelligent classes in favor of the abolition of a Servian monarchy altogether and the creation of a republic, and this sentiment is shared by at least one member of the provisional government.

Differences of opinion on this point developed Friday at a meeting of the cabinet when the new foreign minister, Ljuhonir Kalievich, expressed himself for the establishment of a republican form of government. The majority of the ministers, however, declared themselves in favor of a new king in Prince Peter Kara-Georgevitch. They strengthened their declaration by the strong argument that it was certain that Austria and Russia would not countenance the creation of a republic. This is the view generally shared by politicians.

The remains of the ill-fated king and queen were buried stealthily Thursday night in the chapel of St. Mark, where the members of the Obrenovitch family are interred.

The government has laid claim to the possessions of the late monarch. It is not known whether he left a fortune, but it is supposed that he had considerable savings, having lived economically during the last decade. It is reported that the greater part of his money was deposited in England, but it is questionable whether the money would be delivered to the Servian government. The opinion here is that all belongs to the state, even including the king's foreign investments. It is possible that former Queen Natalie may also appear as an heiress. Queen Draga was in receipt of 30,000 gulden ($14,550) monthly and also had great savings, which will be handed over to her three sisters.

The following is a narrative of the revolution given by men who took an active part in it:

Army officers to the number of 90 having formed a project of a revolt, among them being delegates from almost every garrison in Servia and most of the officers of the six regiments, Lieut. Col. Mitschitsch invited his comrades on Wednesday evening at 11 o'clock to meet in the Kalimagden garden and there the immediate carrying out of the intended dead was organized. At 1:40 a. m. the officers, in eight groups, went to the Konak, the royal palace. Each had a cue and especial directions regarding his part in the revolution.

In the konak (palace) itself the revolutionaries had two important partisans in the king's bodyguard. Col. Alexander Maschin, Queen Draga's cousin, and the king's personal adjutant, Lieut. Naumovics. Two officers of the high military academy appeared at the appointed hour, 2 a. m., at the gate of the konak, where the king's adjutant, Panajotovic, who was in the conspiracy, handed them the keys to the garden gate, which is always kept locked. First, stepping before the guard at the konak, one of the two officers called, "Throw down your arms." A fight ensued, with shots from both sides, in which several persons were wounded.

The revolutionists then entered the front garden without hindrance, and reached the court yard of the old konak, where Lieut. Naumovics was waiting. He opened the lock of the iron door leading to the front room on the first floor. By this it was seen that the konak was carefully closed and that danger was suspected. Hurrying upstairs to the first floor, the revolting officers attracted the attention of the palace attendants and the royal family by the noise of the shooting. Lieut. Lavar Petorovitch alarmed by the unwonted hubbub, hurried forward with a drawn revolver in one hand and a sword.

"What do you want?" he cried.

"Show us where the king and queen are," came the reply.

"Back," cried Petrovitch, and at the same moment a bullet stretched him on the ground.

The revolutionists pressed forward when suddenly the electric light gave out. All stood in darkness. In the greatest excitement, and feeling their way, the revolutionists climbed the stairs and entered the dark ante room to the king's apartment. Here they found candles and lit them. This seemingly slight circumstance was decisive to the whole action. Without light they could not have found the victims, who fled from their sleeping apartment through corridors and numerous rooms and might have escaped but part of the officers with burning candles and others with pistols commenced to search for the king and queen. In breathless haste the conspirators ran through the rooms, opened wardrobes and looked behind curtains in vain. In the ante room connecting with the corridor between the old and new konak, the sergeant of the gendarmes was sleeping. Awakening, he stepped before the revolutionists, who felled him.

At last Queen Draga's servant was found. He wounded Capt. Dimitrevic severely but was spared until he showed the officers where King Alexander and Queen Draga had secreted themselves. When he had told this he was shot. Col. Maschin now joined the revolutionists and led them back to the sleeping apartment, where the king's adjutant tried to hinder the search. He shot Lieut. Naumovics dead. The others killed the adjutant. After a search a small door leading into an alcove was discovered, but it was locked. It was broken in with an ax and here the royal couple were found in undress. The older officers first intended to forcing the king to abdicate, but the young officers were in no mood to be held back and shot at the royal couple.

Nobody knows in the excitement who shot first, but it is generally said that Lieut. Kistic fired first.

After the murder, King Alexander's body was found covered with blood. An autopsy proved that the late king received 30 shot wounds, many of them deadly. Queen Draga suffered numerous shot and saber wounds and it is alleged that her body was torn in barbaric fashion. The appearance of the royal apartments is indescribable. The doors and floor are shattered and the ruins drenched with blood.

All the servants of the royal couple fled when the first shots were heard with the exception of Queen Draga's servant, who was found dead. Shortly after 2 o'clock all was over. Col. Maschin issued from the gate of the konak, around which great crowds had collected, and made a speech, saying:

"We have now destroyed the dynasty of the Obrenovics and have got rid of the dishonorable woman who was the king's evil spirit. Long live Servia."

The people responded: "Long live the army."

Almost simultaneously with the butchery in the palace the troops endeavored to arrest all the relatives of the queen and those ministers whom the conspirators disliked. Two brothers of the queen, Lieut. Col. Nikola and Nikodem Lunjevics, were seized and escorted to the guard room of the divisional commander. They evidently did not expect their doom and were lighting cigarettes when they were shot dead by eight soldiers.

Gen. Zinzar Markovics, premier, Gen. Pavlovics, minister of war, and Mr. Toderovics, minister of the interior, were shot by the troops as they attempted to defend themselves from arrest. The premier and the minister of war were killed, while Minister Todorovics was just alive late Firday night.

Shortly after midnight the bodies of the dead king and queen were carried to their last resting place. All day long the victims lay in rough coffins exposed to the gaze of those who had killed them and to the privileged curious.

There have been unpleasant evidences of the public sentiment against the late royal pair. Some persons even spat on the remains. Outside the palace a vast crowd awaited the removal, not only of the corpses of the king and queen, but of the bodies of all the other victims, which were simultaneously buried, being conveyed in hearses to the Belgrade cemetery.

Twenty-Five of the Hostleries in Chicago Are Badly Crippled.

Chicago, June 13.—The strike in the hotels of Chicago, impending for the last three weeks, materialized Friday and 25 of the leading hotels of Chicago were Friday night badly crippled in all departments. All of the hotels are running, however, and the proprietors declare that the establishments will remain open for business at any cost.

The Lexington hotel signed the scale presented by the union five minutes after the help had been called out.

The proprietors have agreed to submit nearly every point at issue to arbitration, but to this the unions will not consent. They insist that their demands for higher wages and shorter hours be granted before they will arbitrate anything, and insist also upon the absolute recognition of the union. To this latter demand the proprietors say they will never agree so long as the strikers maintain their present attitude.

The members of the Restaurant Keepers' association met Friday night and took action that is practically certain to shut up a number of their establishments Saturday morning.

EWEN'S GREAT LOSS.

His Hotel at Jackson, Ky., Burned and He is Penniless.

Insurance on the Property Had Been Cancelled Last Week, Lawlessness Making Insurance Companies Unwilling to Carry It.

Lexington, Ky., June 15.—The City hotel at Jackson, Ky., a three-story building owned by Capt. B. J. Ewen, the main witness against Jett and White, now on trial for the assassination of Lawyer J. B. Marcum, was burned to the ground early Sunday morning. There were 15 guests in the hotel, but all escaped without injury.

The hotel, together with its furnishings and the effects of the guests, is a total loss. The origin of the fire is unknown, but the belief is generally that the fire was of incendiary origin.

The insurance on Ewen's property had been cancelled last week, the state of lawlessness making insurance companies unwilling to longer hold the risk. The building had recently been completed and his loss of $10,000 represents his all.

He and his wife and nine children are left homeless and almost penniless. The disaster struck terror to his heart and he has feared to leave the protection of the court, believing that his assassination will be attempted if opportunity is offered. His family are with neighbors.

Capt. Ewen had recently put up an addition to the hotel. This was just completed and was yet unoccupied. It was in this part of the hotel that the fire was discovered. The town of Jackson has no fire department and when its citizens were aroused by the firing of pistols and guns, much excitement prevailed. A detachment of militia came on the double quick from their camp across the river and rendered valuable aid in assisting the guests to escape and preventing the flames from spreading.

Smoke was discovered issuing from the unfurnished portion of Ewen's hotel at 6 o'clock. It originated in an unfinished room on the third floor. No fire has been in it and it was too remote from the kitchen chimney for a flying spark to have caused the fire. Guests at the hotel and members of Capt. Ewen's family were asleep when the alarm was sounded and had to escape in haste, half dressed and leaving clothing and belongings to be consumed. Clothing had to be furnished by neighbors and only a few pieces of furniture were saved. Despite efforts to extinguish the flames, they did not surrender until there was nothing left to burn, only the tall chimney and a heap of ashes marking the site of the building. What soldiers could be spared went to the fire and worked heroically to save the hotel and when this became a hopeless undertaking devoted themselves to adjoining property. It was feared to send any of the men on regular duty, as it was suspected that a rush on the jail or camp might have been planned and that the fire was expected to draw the soldiers from the jail and locality.

It was found that rain barrels around the hotel, which afforded its chief fire protection, were overturned by the incendiaries before the torch was applied. At one time the whole south section of the town seemed to be threatened and only hard work prevented a spread.

Two cloth balls dipped in tar and kerosene were found near the ruins of the hotel.

Jackson, Ky., June 15.—Gray Haddix, a near neighbor to Ewen, said he saw two men leave the hotel a moment before the fire, but said he did not know them. He is a defense witness in the trials now in progress and it was decided by the soldiers to retain him in the belief that he may know more than he has told. Thorp and Crawford, the men under arrest, are teamsters who work for Judge Hargis.

Maj. Allen was informed that they were seen crossing the bridge near Ewen's home just about the time the fire was discovered. They were arrested at noon. On close questioning they made conflicting statements but denied having crossed the bridge until after the fire was in progress. Oneal and Golden, counsel for Jett and White, demanded the immediate release of the men. They were held for preliminary trial under $3,000 bond each.

A New Constitution Was Adopted at the Annual Convention.

Denver, Col., June 15.—It was announced Sunday the new constitution of the American Labor union, which was adopted just before the adjournment of the annual convention on Friday last, will be submitted to referendum vote in December.

Under this provision the power of declaring strikes is taken from the local unions and given to the board, and when a strike is called all affiliated unions called out must respond and immediately. An assessment of five cents per month per member for a permanent strike fund is one of the other important changes. This will give a fund of $60,000 annually.

He is now building new fences around some of his barns. He employes none but the best mechanics, and uses the best material. Misses Jennie Blyth, Susan Roberts and Stella Ryle, James Allphin Wilber Scott, Will Rogers and wife, and Mrs. O. N. Graut, were Sunday guests of Mrs. Scott and daughter, Maud. By the samples I was remembered with, I judge the dinner to have been a most excellent one. Many thanks, such acts of kindness are appreciated more as a token of friendship than satisfaction to the loner man.

Karl Rouse brought out the mail on Wednesday of last week, and sent it to T. J. Walton's. Mr. Walton knew the regular carrier was not at home, and delivered the mail to patrons of this end of the route, for which we thank him. The people here are honest, and not afraid to trust eachother with their mail without giving bond for faithful and honest discharge of duty. We hope the officers of the Petersburg and Burlington pike will consider the matter and be kind and generous enough to give free toll, so we can have Rural delivery, which we believe we would soon have, if they would give free toll.

Lightning struck one of J. J. Lillard's barns during the thunder storm, Tuesday evening, but did not do much damage. His hay fork was hanging in one end of the barn, which is supposed to have attracted the lightning. It splintered one rafter and tore off and loosened a few shingles. Xen Scott and Tom Foster were in the barn at the time. Xen was standing directly under the fork, and was almost knocked down. He had his watch in his pocket, and it was stopped by the shock. For further details inquire of Tom Foster.

June 15.—The supper given, last Saturday night, at the I. O. O. F. Hall in Bellevue, by the pupils of the Christian church Sunday school, was a success beyond all expectation. All the members of the "button contest," 256 in number, were present, except three or four. The Blues being the winners in the contest, were the first served; then the Reds; next, all the Odd Fellows present, and the spectators as long as the icecream and lemonade held out. Spectators were charged 10 cents a dish for icecream and 5 cents a glass for lemonade. After the Blues, Reds and Odd Fellows were served once free, if they desired more, they had to pay the same as spectators. Twenty-six and a half gallons of icecream and 8 gallons of lemonade were consumed, and 5 or 6 gallons more of each could have been disposed of. The attendance was between 500 and 600. The crowd was orderly and as quiet as could be expected, considering the crowded condition of the hall. Receipts, 331 50, and would have been more, had someone not passed beer checks for quarters, thereby getting their icecream free and 15 cents in change. Much credit and praise is due the soliciting committee of ladies, and to the people for their liberal donations.

It is stated on good authority that up to the 5th of June not to exceed one quarter on the usual area of the corn crop was planted in Iowa, one of the greatest corn States. Last Saturday the Erlanger base ball organization invaded Boone county for the first time this season, and were vanquished in a nicely played game that was witnessed by several hundred people. The two clubs displayed about the same strength at all points, but luck in every instance favored the Burlington team, which, with the want of control or because of bad judgment on the part of Powers, the Erlanger pitcher, in giving batsmen first base on balls, gave Burlington an easy victory. The same teams play at Erlanger next Saturday afternoon, with Brady in the box for Erlanger and Houston or Hughes doing the twirling for Burlington. It will be a good game. Following is the score by innings of last Saturdays game:

Burlington	1 1 1 0 0 0 4 0 *—7
Erlanger	0 0 2 0 0 0 1 0 1—4

Struck out—by Powers, 9; by Houston, 6.

Base on balls—by Powers, 8; by Houston, 2.

Base hits—Houston, Hogan, Luck, Kirk, Geiger, Shearer 2, Guerney, Powers.

Two base hits—Clutterbuck, Shearer, W. Bentler 2

Umpires—Victor and Crisler.

The Erlanger team is composed of well behaved young men, who understand that it is as easy and as essential to be gentlemen on the diamond as off.

The Bellevue and Burlington second nines played at Bellevue, last Saturday, the score being 23 to 24 in favor of Burlington. A large crowd witnessed the game. Kirkpatrick had speed to let and disabled two catchers.

His Last Hope Realized.

In the first opening of Oklahoma to settlers in 1889, the editor of this paper was among the many seekers after fortune who made the big race one fine day in April. During his travelling about and afterwards his campaign upon his claim, he encountered much bad water, which, together with the severe heat, gave him a very severe diarrhoea which it seemed almost impossible to check, and along in June the case became so bad he expected to die. One day one of his neighbors bought him one small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic Cholera, and Diarrhoea Remedy as a last hope. A big dose was given him while he was rolling about on the ground in great agony, and in a few minutes the dose was repeated. The good effect of the medicine was soon noticed and within an hour the patient was taking his first sound sleep for a fortnight. That one little bottle worked a complete cure, and he cannot help but feel grateful. The season for bowel disorders being at hand suggests this item. For sale by all Druggists.

CONSTANCE.

Our community was terrible shocked Friday morning, June 12, by the news that Charlie Kottmyer had been found dead, for he had been out in town with his companions the night before until bed time, when he left them to retire, apparently, in perfect health. But in the morning when his younger brother went to call him, Death had claimed him and had passed to that unknown world while peacefully sleeping, and could answer that call no more. While he was the picture of health it was weakness of the heart that killed him. He was the oldest son of Capt. Henry Kottmyer and wife, being 18 years, 7 months and 23 days of age. Though young in years, he will be sadly missed by all his friends and companions, among whom he was a great favorite, being ever ready to participate in all enjoyments. But none will miss him as his father and mother, who had built great hopes on their boy, for though young, his prospects were unusually bright, as he had almost completed his trade and in another year he would have been able to assist his father in business. Besides his parents he leaves two sisters, three brothers, aged grandparents, and a large circle of relatives, besides a host of friends, to mourn his loss. He was a kind, obedient son, a loving brother and a true and loving friend. The funeral was held Sunday at Hebron church, conducted by Rev. Slater in the presence of a large assemblage of sorrowing relatives and friends, after which the remains were placed in the vault to wait interment. Mr. and Mrs. Kottmyer have the sympathy of the entire community in their sad bereavement.

A precious one from us has gone—
A voice we loved is stilled;
A place is vacant in our home,
Which never can be filled.

'Tis hard to break the tender cord,
When love has bound the heart;
'Tis hard, so hard to speak the words,
Must we forever part?

Dearest loved one, we have laid thee,
In the peaceful grave's embrace,
But thy memory will be cherished,
Till we see thy heavenly face.

Mr. and Mrs. Kottmyer express their heartfelt thanks to their relatives, friends and kind neighbors, for their expressions of sympathy in their recent bereavement, and for the beautiful floral offerings. S. M. Z.

THE STORY OF A LITTLE LAD

He Gave His All to Jesus and Multitudes Were Blessed.

Sermon by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher.

(Copyright, 1903, by J. M. Edson.)

Chicago, Sunday, June 14, 1903.

Text:—"One of His disciples, Andrew, Simon Peter's brother, saith unto Him: There is a lad here, which hath five barley loaves, and two small fishes."—John 6:8-9.

HILDREN are always interested, and deeply influenced, by the stories of child life. This is the reason that the Bible is such a fascinating book to them, where the parents or teacher understand how to bring out and unfold the stories of children and child life contained therein. The presence of the gentle babes lends its charm to the sacred pages. The sound of children's feet is heard, and their voices make sweet music. The story of the baby Isaac, who came to gladden the home of that aged couple; of Moses, resting in his little ark of bulrushes amidst the reeds fringing the banks of the Nile, and being found and adopted by the daughter of the powerful king; of Samuel, the gentle child who served in the temple and heard God speak; of David, the brave shepherd lad; of the Shunamite's son, a gift from God in answer to the prayer of the prophet; of the little Hebrew slave at the court of Naaman the leper, pointing the way to the true God and cleansing; of Jesus at Bethlehem, with the angels singing over His cradle, and wise men from the east coming to worship and offer their rich gifts; of Jesus in the temple, when He first went up with His parents to Jerusalem, at the passover feast; of all the beautiful incidents in which the Lord during His ministry recognized children, blessed them, healed them, and paid the exalted tribute to them of declaring that those who entered the kingdom which He came to establish must become as a little child. And speaking of that time which is yet to come, when the "wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; and the calf and the young lion, and the fatling together," Scripture goes on to declare that "a little child shall lead them." Let us anticipate that day which seems so far in the future, and let a little child lead us to-day, yes, and teach us, too.

TO-DAY is being celebrated in the Sunday schools all over this land as Children's Day. The tread of children's feet is heard, and their story is told in song and verse. Songbirds and flowers lend their music and fragrance to the day. Everything speaks of that charming freshness and beauty which is inseparable from childhood. And because it is Children's Day it is but fitting that we should speak for the children and of the children. We want to tell the story of a little lad whose pathway crossed that which Jesus was traveling, and whose simple deed has lived in the sacred pages of God's word to this day. Only one little verse is devoted to his biography. We do not know his name. Scripture does not tell us anything about his home or his parents. We have only thirteen little words, most of them of one syllable, to tell us about this lad, and they simply state that he was near Jesus, and had in his bag, or pouch, five little round cakes and two small dried fishes. And yet by reading between the lines we may know much concerning him, and learn many lessons.

FIRST of all, we want to learn all we can about the incidents and circumstances connected with the lad as he is introduced to us by our text. Jesus has been performing many miracles at Capernaum, and in the region round about. Ah, how many homes He brightened, soba were turned to songs of joy, tears were wiped away, and smiles brought to faces that were distorted with pain and trouble. Into every home where Jesus went there a change was wrought. And it is so even to-day. The homes where Jesus is invited in as guest, and where He rules in the hearts of those dwelling there, discord, and unhappiness, and trouble have to flee away. And because Jesus did so much good, as He traveled through Galilee and Capernaum great crowds followed Him. But it pained Jesus to know that it was curiosity, and not faith, which brought most of the people to Him, and so He withdrew with His disciples into a moutnain on the other side of the lake across from Capernaum. But the eager, expectant crowds sought Him out, traveling the long, weary way around the shore of the lake. And when Jesus saw them He began to question the disciples as to how they were to be fed in that wilderness place, "for He Himself knew what He would do." It is at this point that Andrew speaks up and directs attention to this lad, who has the five barley loaves and two small fishes.

SCRIPTURE does not give us the name of the boy. It may have been known to the disciples. It certainly was to Jesus. It is known and recorded in Heaven. But when the Holy Spirit guided the pen of John the name was left out and we only know the lad by the part which he had in this wonderful miracle which Jesus performed. The important thing was the character, the life and deeds, and not the name. These are what God always looks at. He weighs what a boy or girl is, and not what he or she may be called. Family names go a long way toward gaining favor and place for one among men, but the eye of God can look right through that name you bear and discover just what kind of a boy or girl there is behind it. I wonder if your name by chance should be lost if there is any deed in your life which would hold you in memory, as there was in the case of this little boy. Probably there were hundreds of boys in Palestine who bore the same name as this boy, and let the name be called and all would respond and come forward, but call for the boy with the loaves and fishes and just one boy appears, the lad of our text. No boy or girl can claim exclusive right to the name they bear and forbid any other person being similarly named, but every boy and girl may so live and do that some deed will mark them as different and distinct from every other boy and girl. You may become known to God, if not to your companions and friends, as the lad or lassie who spoke the kindly word or did the helpful deed, who had something that Jesus could use and freely gave it to Him that it might bless all those about.

I REMEMBER reading the story a good many years ago of the little girl whose waking thought in the morning was what she might do that would really count towards helping others. Instead of waiting for some great and noble thing to do, and idly dreaming the morning away, she thought of something which every girl, and boy, too, can do, wear a bright smile and speak the cheery word. You see she was a very practical miss and began with the thing nearest at hand, and that which she could do. So she thought of all the good pure things she could, she caught the beam of the sunlight in her eyes, she wreathed her face in smiles, she pitched her voice to the tune of the birds singing without her window, and then went tripping downstairs, her light heart giving wings to her little feet. The first one she met was Bridget in the kitchen. She had a cloud on her face that betokened a storm. The dishes rattled and hanged an impatient discord. It was enough to make our little girl forget her good resolution and run off and leave Bridget to her unhappy mood. It was a hard place to begin. But Jesus likes to have us begin in the hard places. And you will see before our story is done that it was just where this little girl needed to begin. When our little girl came dancing in she did not give the ill-nature of Bridget a chance to chill her hearts She did not say: "Well, if Bridget is going to be so cross and mean, I will be cross and mean, too, to pay her back." No, she just let that smile shine out. Her bright eyes put to shame the downcast eyes and frowning brow of Bridget. Her cheery voice called out a happy: "Good morning," and away she flitted with her sunshine and her merry laugh, without waiting to hear the surly grunt of Bridget which she meant for a "Good morning."

BUT that smile and that cheery word braved the frown and growl of unhappy Bridget and somehow, as they always will, got away down into her heart, bringing light and a new warmth there. It set her to thinking. The little girl had preached her a better and stronger sermon than the parson could have done. She felt sorry and concluded she would be bright and happy, too. So, instead of letting the meat get as dry and brown as the frown had been upon her face, and instead of swimming it in grease, she cooked it just to a turn. The muffins in the oven felt the change of atmosphere and came out of the oven light and just tinged with that appetizing brown, instead of the usual deep brown and burnt bottoms. As she brought in the well-prepared meal, the master heard her coming and ill-naturedly muttered to himself that he supposed the meat was as tough as leather and swimming in the black gravy as usual. But Bridget came in with a cheery air, she forgot to set the dishes down with a bang, and everything looked so unusually good that the ill-humor of the master of the house was driven away. The other members of the family caught the brightness and cheer, and the little girl found she was not alone with her smile and merry voice. And the day so well begun ran all the cheery that little girl's smile and cheery "Good morning." The ripples went circling out until they touched the office and store and business world of the merchant, the social sphere of the mother, the schoolroom and playground of the children. Sister, who was generally so unobliging because so full of her own plans, had time to help brother with the hard parts of his lesson, and sent him off to the knot of playmates with new impulses at work in his heart which made it easy for him to be unselfish in his play and more thoughtful towards others. How that smile was multiplied! How that cheery "Good morning," went ringing down all through the day like the words spoken in the grand canyons of the west go bounding from rock to rock as the echoes increase and multiply, seemingly indefinitely, in the distance! That little girl's name may have been Mary, or Jane, or Clara, or any one of the thousand and one names borne by girls, but it's what that little girl did and not her name, that lives for us and interests us. So it is with the lad with the loaves and fishes. So it may be with you, my boy, and you, my girl. You may be one of the boys or girls to carry the loaves and fishes which Jesus will use to bless the ever-widening circle of those about.

BUT there is something else about this lad which attracts our attention. Andrew says to Jesus: "There is a lad HERE." He was a lad who could be found. He was near Jesus. I wonder what his playmates were doing at this time! I wonder if it didn't take a good deal of moral courage for him to leave his play and follow Jesus! I wonder if they didn't try to poke fun at him for wanting to go to the Sunday school and preaching service and prayer meeting where Jesus was! They do to-day, don't they? He might have stayed behind and divided up his cakes and fish with his companions and they would have said he was a good generous fellow. Perhaps when he started off they taunted him with being stingy because he would rather take his possessions and give them to Jesus than selfishly use them for himself. Oh, if we could only go back and know all that it cost that lad to bravely follow Jesus, and be where Jesus could find him and use his little offering, we would be ashamed of our cowardice and selfishness, when we stay away from Jesus because of the ridicule of our associates, and because we selfishly want for ourselves what Jesus would be so glad to bless and use for others. We need boys to-day, and girls, too, who can be found. Boys and girls whose actions and words are right and clean, even though mother and father, and teacher or employer are not around to see and hear. One of the greatest things that can be said of any boy or girl is that it is known where he or she may be found. The boy is HERE! The girl is HERE!

BY reading between the lines we may know what kind of a boy this lad was. He was a thoughtful boy, or else he would never have been the only one in all that vast company of people who had been provident enough to bring something to eat. He was a generous boy, else he would not have been so willing to give what he might perhaps with good reason have said he needed and must have for his own use. He was a modest lad, for he stood in the background until called out by Andrew's words. He was an obedient boy, for it is certain he was prompt to respond to the call and to yield to the request made of him. And, as we have already suggested, he was a brave, dare-to-be-a-Daniel boy. He dared to do right, he dared to stand alone. We know what kind of a boy he was at home, on the playground, on the street, in the schoolroom, everywhere. He was a dependable boy. He was not playing hookey that day. He was not idly roaming in disobedience to parents and to the neglect of his duties: I have no doubt that he had been up very early in the morning that he might get his chores out of the way and have a clear conscience when he started on this trip to the mountains where Jesus was. He was a boy mother and father were proud of. Sisters and brothers looked up to him. He held the good will and opinion of his associates, even though they sometimes poked fun at him and tried to make him believe that he was tied to mother's apron strings.

AND this lad of our text grew to be a man, no doubt. And it is not hard to tell what kind of a man he made. Did you ever see a sturdy young oak tree turn out to be a gnarled briar bush when grown? Did you ever see a wheat field turn to useless tares, as it developed into maturity? Did you ever see a brave-hearted, clean-lived boy, who lived near Jesus, grow up to be a wicked, bad man? It's the boy that makes the man. It is the rule that the good boy makes the good man, and the bad boy the bad man. There are exceptions, of course, in both directions. But it is almost inevitably the case that what the boy is to-day the man will be to-morrow. So it is safe to conclude that our lad became a good and useful citizen. He did not become a Peter or a Paul, occupying a prominent place in the service of God. Scripture never refers to him again that we know of. But we know he was not idle in the service of his Master, Whom he helped on the mountain side that day to confer such a blessing upon that vast multitude of people. During the year following the incident of our text, tidings came to the Galilean home of our little lad from Jerusalem of the tragic events there; of the arrest, trial and crucifixion of Jesus. And years later, when the deadly persecution settled about the disciples at Jerusalem, and they were driven out into Samaria and Galilee, he learned the full meaning of Jesus' death, and His glorious resurrection. A lively hope was kindled within his breast as he came to know that Jesus was not dead, but living, and working mightily through His disciples. A new purpose stirred within his heart. He began to understand the spiritual meaning of the feeding of the multitude and the declaration of Jesus that He was the Bread of Life, and he went out to help spread the glad Gospel story. Thus did the service of his youth strengthen and equip him for fuller and better service in his manturer years, and so will it ever be. The faithfulness, and kindly, generous service of childhood will as surely become the medium of better, truer, fuller living when youth has given place to manhood. Here is the lesson of hopefulness for every boy and girl. How surely the years which are ahead will bear the impress of the thought and deed of to-day. Let our little lad come close to us on this, our Children's Day, and teach us his lessons.

PROBABLY GETTING EVEN.

The Work of Malice as It Was Carried Into Effect Through the Telephone.

The young man with the malicious gleam in his eye, who had dropped a dime in the slot of the public telephone and obtained the desired connection, relates the Chicago Tribune, inquired in a falsetto voice:

"Hello! Is this Miss Snubbem?"

"Yes," said the voice at the other end of the wire. "Who is this?"

"Beg pardon. I can't quite understand you."

"This is Miss Snubbem. What do you—"

"Beg pardon. Speak a little more plainly, please. Is this Miss Snubbem?"

"It is. Who are—"

"Beg pardon again. I can't quite catch your answer."

"I say this is Miss Snubbem. Who—"

"I am very sorry, but I never can understand anybody that is chewing gum and using a telephone. You are chewing gum, are you not?"

"Y-yes."

"Please take it out of your mouth. . . Have you taken it out?"

"Yes."

"Well, that's all."

Whereat he hung the receiver on the hook again and went out with a satisfied grin on his face.

A Maryland Wonder.

Upper Cross Roads, Md., June 15th.—Never in the history of medicine in this state has anything created such a sensation by its marvelous cures of the most extreme cases as Dodd's Kidney Pills.

This wonderful medicine seems to know no limit in its wonder working power. Long-standing cases that have defied the most expert medical treatment seem to yield easily to this new conqueror of disease.

Hundreds have testified to the virtue of Dodd's Kidney Pills. They tell of severe cases of Rheumatism, Lumbago, Backache, Female Trouble, Nervous Diseases and even Dropsy, Diabetes and Bright's Disease cured by this medicine.

Among those who have been benefited may be mentioned Mrs. John Cooney of this place.

Mrs. Cooney says:

"I believe Dodd's Kidney Pills the best remedy ever known for Kidney Trouble and weak back.

"They are without exception the best medicine I have ever used.

"I will always praise them highly, for I know that they are good."

Mrs. Cooney is only one of many who say of Dodd's Kidney Pills:

"The most wonderful remedy we ever heard of."

AGRICULTURAL HINTS.

EXPERT'S BERRY SHED.

After a Trial of Five Years Its Designer Expresses Himself Highly Satisfied with It.

Harvesting should be preceded by ample preparations for the work. In order to facilitate the work and that it may be properly done, a convenient packing house is absolutely indispensable to one engaged to a considerable extent in the berry growing business. My packing house was built in the fall of '98, the outgrowth of a demand, and in plan and construction dictated by an experience of 15 years in the berry growing business. Its dimensions are 24x28 feet, with a 16-foot post. It is located with ends southeast and northwest on a southwest slope, about three feet to 24.

STRAWBERRY PACKING SHED.

A driveway eight feet wide, lengthways through the middle, cutting that much from the end sills, thus leaving two at either end eight feet long. It has four side sills, two inside and two outside, eight feet apart. Both inside sills and end sills also are supported the whole length by cemented walls. The whole space, inside the inner and end sills and under them, on the southwest side, is left open for free circulation of air. On this side eight feet of the ground floor, southeast end, is given over to an office, with door opening from the driveway and window in end side.

The remainder of the floor space is laid with 2x3, edgeways, one-half-inch apart. This is called the cooling or drying floor, and will hold 1,000 quart baskets, one tier deep. The same floor on the other side, the southeast half, is given to an ice room, and the other to a cool room. There is an 18-inch space between the outer and inner walls of the ice room, which is filled with sawdust. These walls extend to the second floor, and all open above to the attic floor. The ice is admitted from a door at the end just above the double wall. The cool room has a double wall all around with eight inches of air space between, except on the ice room side. The same overhead. It has a cemented floor, over two feet of rocks and gravel. Double doors open into and from the driveway. A lower section of the wall on the ice room side is removable, so as to allow the cool air, when desirable, to pass into the cool room. The driveways is closed when desired by slide doors running on an iron track overhead. There is no partition between the cooling floor and the driveway.

The chamber floor covers over all the space except that over the ice room and rests upon 11 beams, 2x8, supported in the middle by two girts, 6x8, held up by posts resting upon the inside sills. The attic floor is eight feet above chamber floor. The roof has a ventilator. There are two windows in either end of the chamber and one in the southeast end of attic. In the center of both floors is a 3x3-foot scuttle, with a tackle directly above. The attic floor rests on 2x6 beams, supported by 4x4 girts and 2x4 posts.

The driveway and cooling floors are used for the packing space. When berries are hot or wet they are first brought in by the pickers and placed upon the cooling floor, where they remain till dry or cooled off, when they are packed away in crates, deposited in the cool room or sent away. Berries are never picked when wet except when obliged to do so, and then boxes only half full at first. The chamber floor is used for a crate depository and repair shop, and the attic for the basket depository. There is a stairway in the northwest corner that can be reached either from the outside or inside, and the attic stairway is over that.—E. W. Wooster, in Farm and Home.

Rape as a Secondary Crop.

When rape is grown as a secondary or catch crop, it will not often be possible to pay much attention to the preparation of the soil, and the time and method of seeding, and the quantity of seed used may be varied to suit the circumstances. Often the rape may be grown on land that has already produced a crop of some of the early maturing cereals, such as rye, oats or barley. As soon as the crop of grain is removed the land is plowed or disked and at once seeded to rape. Field peas and other early maturing forage crops or rye or winter oats that have been pastured off in spring may also be followed by rape with profitable result. Each year finds the area in which rape is grown extended until now it includes much of the spring wheat region of the northwest, where it is grown chiefly as a catch crop after spring grain.—Cincinnati Tribune.

The man who is too mean to provide a comfortable coop for the hen and brood doesn't deserve success.

DUCKS NEED WATCHING.

Must Be Taught Early Where They Belong or Serious Loss Is Sure to Result.

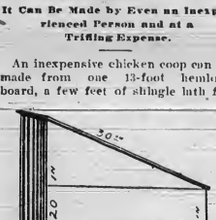
The young ducks must be trained to know where home is by regular feeding and looking after. The unprincipled fowls enjoy eating corn with your neighbor's hogs, but the neighbor does not care about feeding a flock of growing ducks that do not belong to him.

Besides, it is dangerous for the ducks to be fooling around where hogs are. An old mother hog soon develops quite a fondness for duck meat after once getting a taste. The ducks are not active enough to get away from the porkers, and they will soon consume every duck within reach. We have known them to run down grown ducks.

It is much easier to manage ducks than chickens when a rain is coming up. The ducks may be driven and the chicks must be coaxed. The chicks will scatter in all directions when one attempts to drive them, while the ducks seem to have a leader and the gang stays together.

It will soon be time to begin picking the old ducks if you have decided you want feathers instead of eggs. They won't produce both. They won't lay very many eggs anyway when very warm weather comes, so that likely it will pay better to save the feathers. If one has no use for them at home, there is always a ready sale for them, often right in one's own locality. There are so many people who cling to feather beds, even if they are out of date; and there are many who would rather buy feathers than to bother with a flock of ducks or geese. The strong smell that new feathers have will leave them if they are thoroughly aired for a few days before using them for beds or pillows.—Farm Journal.

OATS FOR CHICKENS.



One of the Most Valuable Feeds for Farm Poultry of All Kinds, Ages and Conditions.

I consider oats one of the best feeds we have for poultry of all kinds and ages. I buy oat screenings of the oat meal mills and moisten it with milk for my small chicks and nothing could make them grow faster or develop into better fowls. If farmers would only try this feed in place of the corn meal that they use they would soon learn that it is not only cheaper, but that it is much better for the chicks. When they get a little older I pour boiling water on whole oats and when cold feed this to the chicks. I always feed oats mixed with corn and wheat to my adult fowls and could not do without them. For this purpose the heavy white oats are the best. When feeding whole oats to either fowls or chicks one must keep plenty of grit before them in order to avoid crop troubles. If farmers would get away from the corn they feed their fowls and give more of a variety, including oats and wheat, they would increase their egg yield and have healthier and better chickens. Simply because they do not raise anything but corn is no excuse for feeding it, for they could sell some of the corn they feed and invest in a few bushels of wheat with profit to themselves.—O. P. Bennett, in Farmers' Review.

INEXPENSIVE COOP.

It Can Be Made by Even an Inexperienced Person and at a Trifling Expense.

An inexpensive chicken coop can be made from one 13-foot hemlock board, a few feet of shingle lath for frame and two or three wall lath for slats, as I will briefly describe. Cut board into three 24-inch lengths for sides, two 30-inch lengths for roof, and one 18-inch length for back. Cut one of the 24-inch lengths from top of left of bottom of right to form the sloping sides, as shown in the illustration. Use lath to cover joints in roof. The rest is self-explanatory.—Farm Journal.

POULTRY PARAGRAPHS.

Light, nutritious and easily digested food is what fowls in confinement need.

Feed little chicks on a clean board, which should be often cleansed and dried in the sun or by artificial heat.

If eggs become rotten it is absolute proof that they were fertilized, that the germ of life started and then died.

Brooder chicks never have gapes, which proves that filth gathered from the yards is the cause of the trouble.

The breeding of poultry for market is increasing every year as the commercial value of the products become known.

The more nearly the roosting house comes to being actually clean, the less will be the liability to disease among the chickens.

Geese are natural grass eaters and will do very well in a good pasture, providing they are well supplied with drinking water.—Commercial Poultry

AS TO TARIFF REFORM.

Only One Way for Republicans Who Really Desire It to Bring It About.

The republicans are getting together on the tariff, and the reformers in Iowa and elsewhere have succumbed to the threats of the protectionists that they will find themselves outside the republican ramparts, if they persist in their efforts to change even one schedule of the Dingley law. The deluded voters of Iowa, Wisconsin, and elsewhere, who last fall elected the republican candidates for congress on their promise, and that of Mr. Babcock, the chairman of the republican congressional committee, that "the incoming congress was charged with the duty of revising the tariff," was left in the lurch. There are those who believe that Mr. Babcock was never sincere in his promises to reform those tariff schedules that shelter the trusts, but there are other republican congressmen who made similar promises, who are credited with a desire to redeem them. How can they do so? The majority of the republican members of the next congress, that will soon meet, are determined stand patters, and are pledged to not change a letter of the sacred law.

There is only one way open to those republican members of congress who really desire tariff reform, and that is to join the democrats in demanding it. To be successful in this there must be 14 republicans willing to join such a coalition, for the trust party has 27 majority in congress. It is hardly likely that 14 independent republicans can be found who will so vote. Judging by the past Mr. Babcock certainly will not do so. A bill to place trust productions on the free list will be introduced in the incoming congress and an opportunity will be thus given the supposed reformers to curb the exorbitant trust prices.

The rules that the republican majority in congress will again adopt are intended to prevent any vote being taken on a bill that the leaders do not approve. The power given the speaker is so autocratic that he can refuse to recognize any member, to call up a bill or offer an amendment to one, that does not suit the republican leaders. But 14 republicans can change the rules, if they vote with the democrats.

Nearly every western state is represented by one or more congressmen who promised the voters of their district to vote for tariff reform, but they will need a good deal of spurring by the voters to make them keep their word. There are two or three Massachusetts congressmen who are ready to vote for free raw materials, and one of them, Mr. Lovering, will urge the passage of his drawback bill, which is in fact a modification of the tariff. If a tariff bill of any kind can be brought up for consideration, the democrats can propose an amendment to place trust productions on the free list and every member of the house will have to go on record by a yea and nay vote. That proposition will be defeated in all probability and the democrats can then present the matter to the jury of all the voters of the United States at the presidential election.

DRIFT OF OPINION.

—Porto Rico has a new customs scandal, but the post office "irregularities" sort of backtrack all lesser iniquities.—Albany Argus.

—Mr. Hanna does not say President Roosevelt asked for the Ohio indorsement. He "indicated" his desire for it. "Indicated" is a broad word.—Buffalo News (Rep.).

—The tribute that Senator Hanna paid the president at the county convention held at Cleveland was not the kind to make a man feel very chesty after all.—Indianapolis News (Ind.).

—Hanna says Foraker is trying to "smoke him out," and declares that the Ohio convention will not indorse Roosevelt if he can help it. Then he is already smoked out. This section reveals his hand and shows the insincerity of his professions for Roosevelt. So Hanna is a candidate, after all, if there is a chance—and he intends to reserve the chance? Well, we suspected as much.—Waterbury American (ind.).

POLITICAL ETHICS.

President Roosevelt Sets Precedent at Defiance and Tries to Coerce Ohio.

Boss Hanna, chairman of the republican national committee, is quite as audacious in his political moves as President Roosevelt and seems to be perfectly satisfied with the opportunity that the appeal of the president afforded him. Hanna has issued a statement which in effect says that the president, having sent him a telegram indicating a desire to have the indorsement of the Ohio republican convention of his administration and candidacy, he (Hanna) will not oppose such indorsement, and has telegraphed the president to this effect. Hitherto no president has made such an appeal for votes, but precedent has no charm for President Roosevelt. He is evidently his own campaign manager, and in that capacity he employs the most modern methods. A citizen of New York, although he happens to be the president, dictating to the leaders of another state on their political action, is a new move in politics, and the implied threat that he would consider as enemies those who do not forward his ambition is much below the high plane that the president of the United States should stand upon. His anxiety to secure delegates so long in advance of the national convention would indicate that he is aware of an opposition that must be formidable. Public opinion may indorse this open fight that Mr. Roosevelt is making, but heretofore it has stamped its disapproval of official interference with the free will of the voters. All the federal officers are virtually invited, if not ordered, to take an active interest in securing delegates for their chief or be considered outside the pale of his esteem. If Senator Hanna had called upon the thousands of federal officers who are under obligations to him, what a howl would have gone up of his attempt to coerce the republican party to do his bidding. No wonder Hanna is in a satisfied state of mind; he has forced the president to throw the ethics of civil service reform to the winds. But perhaps President Roosevelt can successfully do what other presidents would not have dared to do.

Lady Bug, Lady Bug, fly away home;
Your house is on fire, your children are alone.

Rank Heresy.

The Quay machine pulled off its state republican convention without a hitch and of course was insistent in the platform adopted that the sacred tariff must not be touched. Indeed this political combine that Quay manipulates, odorous as it is of boodle and trust domination, went to the extreme in defense of protection by declaring that: "We believe it to be the dictum of wisdom to let well enough alone and not to imperil business interests by any suggestion of present interference with revenue legislation." This means, probably, that it is rank heresy to even talk of tariff reform, let alone to attempt it. But Quay and his machine politicians will find that in Pennsylvania, as elsewhere, there is a canker worm eating at the heart of protection that will soon destroy it. The high prices that the trust beneficiaries are demanding are forcing people of limited means to inquire what causes the greatly increased cost of living, and many of them have already discovered that the tariff is protecting the trusts in their exactions. The republican masses are awakening to the fact that the increase in wages is not keeping pace with the advance in the cost of living and are demanding a share of the trust prosperity that the republican party is boasting so glibly about. Look out for political squalls.

—The inference is clear that Mr. Hanna looks coldly upon the proposal of running Mr. Roosevelt for a second term, contrasting sharply with his attitude toward a McKinley renomination. Yet if the president is in favor with his party or the Hanna wing of it, his case peculiarly calls for such an indorsement in advance as Mr. Hanna opposes, since no other vice president succeeding to the presidency by the accident of death has ever been nominated by his party for a full presidential term. Mr. Hanna himself may or may not be open to an offer of the republican nomination next year. It now looks very much as if he were. But at any rate we here have evidence of the existence of strong opposition to Roosevelt, which is beginning to find responsible expression.—Springfield Republican (ind.).

GRATEFUL, HAPPY WOMEN

Miss Muriel Armitage.

Thank Peruna for Their Recovery After Years of Suffering.

Miss Muriel Armitage, 90 Greenwood Ave., Detroit, Mich., District Organizer of the Royal Templars of Temperance, in a recent letter, says:

"I think that a woman naturally shrinks from making her troubles public, but restored health has meant so much to me that I feel for the sake of other suffering women it is my duty to tell what Peruna has done for me.

"I suffered for five years with uterine irregularities, which brought on hysteria and made me a physical wreck. I tried doctors from the different schools of medicine, but without any perceptible change in my condition. In my despair I called on an old nurse, who advised me to try Peruna, and promised good results if I would persist and take it regularly. I thought this was the least I could do and procured a bottle. I knew as soon as I began taking it that it was affecting me differently from anything I had used before, and so I kept on taking it. I kept this up for six months, and steadily gained strength and health, and when I had used fifteen bottles I considered myself entirely cured. I am a grateful, happy woman to-day."—Miss Muriel Armitage.

Female Weakness is Pelvic Catarrh.

Always Half Sick are the Women Who Have Pelvic Catarrh.

Catarrh of any organ, if allowed to progress, will affect the whole body. Catarrh without nervousness is very rare, but pelvic catarrh and nervousness go hand in hand.

What is so distressing a sight as a poor half-sick, nervous woman, suffering from the many almost unbearable symptoms of pelvic catarrh? She does not consider herself ill enough to go to bed, but she is far from being able to do her work without the greatest exhaustion. This is a very common sight and is almost always due to pelvic catarrh.

It is worse than foolish for so many women to suffer year after year with a disease that can be permanently cured.

Peruna cures catarrh permanently. It cures old chronic cases as well as a slight attack, the only difference being in the length of time that it should be taken to effect a cure.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

I have had occasion to use your Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine and am pleased to say that I never used anything for stock that gave half as good satisfaction. I heartily recommend it to all owners of stock.

J. B. BELSHER, St. Louis, Mo.

Sick stock or poultry should not eat cheap stock food any more than sick persons should expect to be cared by food. When your stock and poultry are sick give them medicine. Don't stuff them with worthless stock foods. Unload the bowels and stir up the torpid liver and the animal will be cured, if it be possible to cure it. Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine unloads the bowels and stirs up the torpid liver. It cures every malady of stock if taken in time. Secure a 25-cent can of Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine and it will pay for itself ten times over. Horses work better. Cows give more milk. Hogs gain flesh. And hens lay more eggs. It solves the problem of making as much blood, flesh and energy as possible out of the smallest amount of food consumed. Buy a can from your dealer.

PETERSBURG.

I desire to make a statement. Last Sunday my family and I and about 70 others made a trip on a U. S. Mail Line steamer, and some goodtie-goodties, said we had headed straight for Ladies. I detest newspaper notoriety, but in this case it is not unlike the great river—it is impossible to locate the first drop of water that made it a river. If I could locate the first word, I would speak privately to its originator. On the boat I saw nothing improper—no dancing no rowdyism. At Warsaw a number of us got off to wait for the up boat, and spent two hours there, and I never felt nearer heaven in my life than in these few moments spent at the bedside of the widow of Mr. Noah Sebree, a kind, sweet, christian woman, whose eyes have been closed from the beauties of this world. It did her kind old heart good to be with those with whom she associated while living here. Me nor my family nor any of the others have done wrong, and I present my side that all may judge honestly and without prejudice. I hold no malice, but if some of the people of Petersburg will first cast the beam out of their own eye before they pull the mote out of others, they will be enabled to see the speck of dust that time has left behind their doors.

DOUBLE TRAGEDY.

Pair of Young Lovers Sought to Seek Relief in Death.

Scranton, Pa., June 22.—A pair of young lovers, Ernest Schmic and Miss Jennie Brennan, both of Greenwood, were the participants in a double tragedy early Sunday evening which has resulted in the former's death and which will probably also prove fatal in the case of the girl. The two had loved each other devotedly for several months, but another woman from Schmic's old home intervened a week ago and sought to hold him to an alleged engagement there. This led the pair to seek relief in death and they apparently planned Sunday night's affair with much deliberation. Miss Brennan purchased a bottle of carbolic acid Sunday morning and shortly afterward both started out for a walk. They strayed to a secluded spot in the midst of a forest and spent the entire afternoon sitting side by side on a rock.

They were seen by several other ramblers in the woods and this led to the search by the girl's cousin, Thomas Cavanaugh, and several of his friends. When the party came in sight of the place Miss Brennan put the bottle of acid to her lips and drained it. As she did so Schmic started to run with several of the party close on his heels. He drew a revolver and fired upon them three times and then stopping, turned the weapon to his heart and shot himself, twice. He fell dead instantly. The girl suffered great agony and her physicians hold out scant hope for recovery.

NO VERDICT REACHED.

The Jett-White Jury Discharged by Judge Redwine.

The Next Trial Will Be Held at Cynthiana, Ky.—The Prisoners Were Removed to Lexington and Placed in Jail.

Jackson, Ky., June 20.—But for one juror Curtis Jett would have become convicted here Friday for the murder of Marcum and a majority of the jury favored the conviction of Thomas White also. Both are now almost 100 miles from here in the jail at Lexington and their next trial will be at Cynthiana, over 100 miles from Jackson, away from the mountains and in the blue grass region under very different conditions from those existing in Breathitt county.

With such general confidence in the surroundings of the next trial, there is a general belief here that "everything is for the best after all." If the verdict had been one of conviction the residents here are sure that violence would have followed and that it would have extended to others than witnesses, jurors and those who had taken part in the prosecution. It is thought now that after the trials of Jett and White in Harrison county, that the cases of other assassins who are known here and who have never been arrested, will be taken up with some assurances of justice on a change of venue.

The next case on the docket here was that of Curtis Jett for killing Town Marshal James Cockrill, but it will be postponed until after the trials at Cynthiana.

Lexington, Ky., June 20.—When Jett and White arrived in Lexington on an L. & E. train at 6:18 Friday night there were fully 500 people gathered at the station and along the route to the jail. The crowd was orderly, silent and serious. There was no demonstration of violence. The prisoners were taken immediately to steel cages on the third floor of the jail.

The two men were placed in separate cells despite their requests to he placed together. Jett was drunk. He had been exceedingly unruly and insulting all afternoon, evidently being under the influence of liquor. When he was being taken from his cell to be put on the train at Jackson, he shook his fist in Maj. Allen's face and cursed him, called him every vile name he could think of and said: "I'd like to smash you between those glasses." Maj. Allen responded: "You are a prisoner, Jett, and I can not afford to resent your insults." On the train Jett endeavored to pursue the same tactics and would not be quieted until Maj. Allen told him he would have him gagged if he did not behave himself.

At the jail he said he wanted something to eat and drink and had the money to pay for it. When asked what he wanted he said: "Beefsteak, eggs and coffee." He pulled out a five dollar bill to pay for his supper. While he was exceedingly surly. He paced the narrow limits of his cell like a caged lion. He was as nervous as could be and was evidently much worried that he and Jett were separated.

He resented the imputation of one of those present that he was afraid and nervous, saying that he did not know the meaning of fear and had no nerves.

County Judge James Hargis, of Breathitt, came down on the same train with Jett and White, as did their attorneys, Oneal and French. Hargis refused to be interviewed Friday night. He sent for Jailor Wallace to come to his hotel and there said to him: "Mr. Wallace, I want you to take good care of those men. Anything they want in the way of food and drinks, let them have and send me the bill and I will pay for it. I want you to treat them right."

Jailor Wallace replied: "Judge Hargis, the people of Fayette county have elected me jailor and I am responsible to them and to them alone. As long as they behave themselves, all the people in my jail will be treated right and all will be treated alike. I am amply able to take care of them and of attending to my duties without suggestions from you or any other individual. If the prisoners want extras and have the money to pay for them, they can get them just as could any other prisoners."

Jackson, Ky., June 20.—There is still much apprehension in this community for the future, and many here share in the movement in different parts of Kentucky to have Breathitt county parcelled out for annexation to other counties, although it would depreciate valuations after Jackson lost its prestige as a county seat.

Frankfort, Ky., June 20.—After a lengthy conference Friday afternoon between Gov. Beckham, State Inspector Hines and Col. Williams, the commanding officer at Jackson, Col. Williams left to return there. He was not given orders to relieve the troops of further duty, and it has not yet been determined just when they will be ordered home.

COMMITTED SUICIDE.

Sanford Northrop, Cousin of George Gould, Shot Himself.

St. Louis, June 22.—Sanford Northrop, until recently secretary and general manager of the American Refrigerator Transit Co., committed suicide Sunday at the home of Claude Kennerly, vice president of the Republic Railway Appliance Co., where he was staying. The decedent, who was about 35 years of age, leaves a widow and one child. He was a cousin of George Gould and stood high in local social and financial circles. About six weeks ago he resigned his position with the American Refrigerator Transit Co. No cause for the deed is known.

Northrop shot himself in the back of the head with a revolver, and death was almost instantaneous.

Claude Kennerly said that ten minutes before the shooting he had been talking with Northrop, who appeared to be in the depths of melancholy. He heard the shot from the floor below and when he reached the chamber where it occurred, Northrop lay on the floor dead. Mr. Kennerly said he knew of no reason why Northrop should have committed suicide for his business prospects seemed good, and his marital relations happy.

The body will he taken to Philadelphia Monday, the home of his wife's parents.

It is said that when the Goulds merged the American Refrigerator Transit Co. with the Missouri Pacific and Wabash railroads, Reid Northrop was allowed to resign the presidency, but Sanford was let out without that privilege.

A Resolution Adopted Excluding All Whites From Their Meetings.

Hobart, Okla., June 22.—The Indian Baptist convention, which was composed entirely of Kiowa Indians, has adopted a resolution excluding all whites from their meetings. Missionaries working among the Indians announce this as a result of the timidity of the Indians in participating in religious exercises in the presence of the whites. Lone Wolf, who recently brought suit against the United States government to prevent the opening of the Kiowa reservation to settlement, is their chief minister, and presides during the convention now in session. He is a Carlisle graduate.

LOWELL STRIKE OFF.

About 17,000 Operatives Involved and $1,000,000 in Wages Lost.

The Agents Will Take Back All the Old Help They Have Room For and Will Make No Discrimination.

Lowell, Mass., June 22.—The textile council Sunday afternoon declared the great strike in the Lowell mills at an end. Every union affiliated with the council was represented and the vote was unanimous. Mule spinners and loom fixers were included in this vote, despite statements that they would oppose a return to work.

When asked for a statement, President Conroy said:

"We now worship at the altar of defeat, but later we shall rise again and conquer."

Agent William S. Southworth, secretary of the agents, said:

"It will be impossible to start the remainder of the machinery so as to employ at once all who would return. Running with an incomplete force for three weeks has disturbed the balance that usually exists between stock and prices in the various departments. A mill may have depleted stock in certain kinds of yarn, and for that reason be unable to start all of its looms even if the full complement of help is available. It is for the selling agents and the treasurers to decide, in view of the market, whether we shall attempt to run in full."

The strike began on March 30, and involved about 17,000 operatives. The mills were shut down until June 1, when the agents opened the gates and the majority of the operatives went back to work. The strike has cost in wages about $1,300,000. It is understood that the agents will take back all the old help they have room for, and will make no discrimination against the leaders of the strike movement.

The high price of cotton precluded any hope of the success of the strikers' campaign, for a ten per cent. increase.

OPERATORS' GRIEVANCES.

They Will Air Them Before the Conciliation Board.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., June 22.—When the conciliation board meets in this city on Thursday the operators will have grievances to be adjusted as well as the miners and this will be a surprise to many of the latter who believed that the coal companies had nothing to complain of. The operators will take exceptions to the many petty strikes, which are the cause of much inconvenience and annoyance; also that the non-union men are being interfered with and that the coal output is lessened by the practice of employes remaining at home on certain days without permission.

The miners will offset this with the charge of discrimination that some of the men active in the strike have not been given work since; that the award of the commission has been violated by a change in the condition of mining at many places which does not permit the miners to make as much now as before the strike and that the operators have broken old customs in the Schuylkill region by having the men work an hour longer on Saturday. Among other important questions which the miners want settled will be the reduction of yardage, chock weighmen, hours of labor for drivers and company hands.

ESTIMATING EACH OTHER.

Showing Opinions as They May Be Formed from Different Points of View.

"My word, Fitznoodle," said a war office clerk, according to the London Express, to a colleague who sat at the next desk, "just look at that workman on the roof of that building over the way!"

"What's the matter with him?" inquired Fitz, glancing through the window at the individual indicated.

"Matter," retorted the other; "why, I've been watching the lazy beggar for the last 25 minutes, and he hasn't done a stroke of work all the time."

At the precise moment at which the above conversation occurred a British workingman was addressing his "mate."

"Sy, Bill," he remarked, in a tone of deep disgust, "d'ye see that 'ere loafin' war office chap in that room darn there? S'elp me, if Hi ain't bin watchin' 'im fur nigh on arf an hower, an' the bloomer's done nothin' but stare houot o' th' winder the ole blessed tyme. That's the sort of chap as we pye taxes ter keep!"

A Cure for Dropsy.

Sedgwick, Ark., June 22d.—Mr. W. S. Taylor of this place says:

"My little boy had Dropsy. Two doctors—the best in this part of the country—told me he would never get better, and to have seen him anyone else would have said they were right. His feet and limbs were swollen so that he could not walk nor put on his shoes.

"When the doctors told me he would surely die, I stopped giving him their medicine and began giving him Dodd's Kidney Pills. I gave him three pills a day and at the end of eight days the swelling was all gone, but as I wanted to be sure, I kept on with the pills for some time, gradually reducing the quantity, till finally I stopped altogether.

"Dodd's Kidney Pills certainly saved my child's life. Before using them he was a helpless invalid in his mother's arms from morning till night. Now he is a healthy, happy child, running and dancing and singing. I can never express our gratitude.

"Dodd's Kidney Pills entirely cured our boy after everybody, doctors and all, had given him up to die."

A Wide-Spread Vanity.

In these days there seem to be as many writers as there are readers. The spread of authorship and its egregious pride is hit off in this dialogue from the Fliegende Blaetter:

A guest at a hotel table, reading the bill of fare, says: "Your bill of fare is great!"

"I am glad to hear it," replies the head waiter. "I am its author."

IN EVERY WALK OF LIFE.

People in every walk of life have bad backs — Kidneys go wrong and life back begins to ache. Cure sick kidneys and backache quickly disappears. Read this testimony and learn how it can be done.

A. A. Boyce, a farmer living three and a half miles from Trenton, Mo., says: "A severe cold settled in my kidneys and developed so quickly that I was obliged to lay off work on account of the aching in my back and sides. For a time I was unable to walk at all, and every makeshift I tried and all the medicine I took had not the slightest effect. My back continued to grow weaker until I was unfit for anything. Mrs. Boyde noticed Doan's Kidney Pills advertised as a sure cure for just such conditions and one day when in Trenton she brought a box home from Chas. A. Foster's drug store. I followed the directions carefully when taking them and I must say I was more than surprised and much more gratified to notice the backache disappearing gradually until it finally stopped."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mr. Boyce will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists, price 50 cents per box.

METCALF DISMISSED.

Superintendent Money Order System Charged With Indiscretion.

Postmaster General Says There Is No Charge That Mr. Metcalf Had Done Anything That Was Amenable to Law.

Washington, June 18.—As a result of alleged indiscretion in matters pertaining to the award of contracts for printing the money order forms of the government, James T. Metcalf, for many years superintendent of the money order system of the post office department, Wednesday was removed from office by the postmaster general. A full investigation of the cause will be made later. The dismissal is the result of acts of Mr. Metcalf in opposition to the bid of Paul Herman, of Rutherford, N. J., the lowest bidder by $45,000, and in favor of the next highest bidder, the Wynkoop, Hallenbeck, Crawford Co., of New York, of which Mr. Metcalf's son is an employe.

The Wynkoop, Hallenbeck, Crawford Co. has been the contractor for the money order blanks for 16 years. Paul Herman, the lowest bidder for the next contract, formerly were in the employ of that company, as also is Norman Metcalf, the 27-year-old son of the deposed superintendent, who now draws a salary of $2,250 from the company.

Postmaster General Payne in discussing his action said that there was no charge that Mr. Metcalf had done anything that was amenable to the law, but said his conduct was serious indiscretion that could not be overlooked. Mr. Metcalf, he said, always had been considered a faithful, efficient, painstaking and honest employe.

Mr. Payne's voice trembled with emotion as he announced the dismissal to the newspaper men late Wednesday afternoon. He said it had become his duty to make the removal and was a step which he could not avoid in the proper discharge of his duties. In reply to questions he said that no consideration had been given as yet to the appointment of a successor, but that the duties of superintendent for the present would devolve on Mr. Metcalf's assistant. He is Edward F. Kimball, of Massachusetts, who has been in the service 17 years.

Mr. Metcalf originally was appointed from Iowa and has been in the postal service since 1882. During his administration of the office the money order service has been widely extended by mutual arrangements with a large number of foreign governments throughout the world and Mr. Metcalf has had cordial personal relations with many foreign postal officials. His salary was $3,000 a year.

Mr. Metcalf, when seen Wednesday night, said that he had done nothing wrong and had nothing to conceal; that his son's employment in the bidding firm could have no effect on the award; that he suggested Herman's return to his old company to handle the government work there because he (Mr. Metcalf) knew that Herman's means were limited and that a stoppage of supplies in the midst of a contract term would have proved serious. He says that on Herman's consent he wrote to Mr. Hallenbeck advising that Herman be restored to his old place, and that he told Herman he had little doubt that the government would allow Herman to withdraw his forfeit check of $5,000.

ON A FORGERY CHARGE.

Former Superintendent of the Free Delivery Service May Be Indicted.

Washington, June 18.—August W. Machen, former superintendent of the free delivery mail service, may be indicted for forgery.

The forgery with which Mr. Machen is charged is alleged to have occurred in 1894 when Henry L. Lorenz, as a commissioner of the court of claims, was engaged in adjusting the claims of letter carriers. The check on which Machen is accused of endorsing Lorenz's name was issued on a voucher drawn on the postmaster at New York. As Mr. Lorenz was going on a confidential mission a request was made that the cash should be sent to Mr. Machen to be delivered to Lorenz. On account of irregularities in the voucher the check was sent instead and this check, bearing Lorenz's endorsement, was cashed at a bank in this city. The check was presented by Frank K. Raymond at the request of Machen and he says he turned the money over to Mr. Machen. These facts were brought out at a congressional investigation, but Mr. Machen said at the time that the signature was that of Lorenz.

THE PURE FOOD ACT.

The New Law Will Go Into Effect July 1 Next.

Washington, June 20.—Assistant Secretary Armstrong, of the treasury department, Friday issued a circular letter carrying into effect, beginning on July 1, the pure food act approved on March 3, 1903.

Under this act the secretary of the treasury has been authority, on request from the secretary of agriculture, to direct drawing by officers of the customs of samples at any customs house from original packages of imported food products, drugs and liquors, and to refuse to deliver to the consignees any such commodities as the secretary of agriculture may report to him as found on analysis to be dangerous to health, or which are forbidden to be sold, or which are restricted in sale, in the countries in which they are made, or from which they are exported, or which shall be falsely labeled in any respect in regard to the place of manufacture or as to the contents of the package. The circular says that on the receipt of requests from the department of agriculture, through the treasury department, for samples of such imported commodities, samples of solid food products not less than one quart each, and samples of drugs in quantities to be designated at the time, will be drawn and forwarded by express or mail to the department of agriculture, Washington, D. C., marked "Chief of Bureau of Chemistry."

The cost of the samples will be reimbursed to the importer and the express charges will be paid to the forwarding companies by the department of agriculture on presentation of proper vouchers.

The samples will be accompanied by a statement giving the name of commodity, the names of the importers and consignee, name of importing vessel, dates, etc.

The liquidation of all entries of goods sampled will be suspended until sampling, which will be done under the direction of the department of agriculture with all possible expedition. Commodities, which are declared adulterated, will be exported under customs supervision, under bond, conditioned for due landing abroad and in default of exportation, destruction under customs supervision must follow. Two days are given owners, importers or consignees of articles sampled within which they may present written testimony as to the harmless nature of articles imported. Provision is made for the legible labeling and branding in English of importations coming within the act and also for appeals to the secretary of the treasury.

OUR RACING YACHTS.

The Reliance Beat Both the Constitution and the Columbia.

New York, June 20.—If the Constitution did not defeat the Reliance on time allowance in a 25 mile race, over the course of the Indian Harbor Yacht club in Long Island sound Friday, it gave the admirers of the new boat a scare. In more than four hours' of sailing Reliance outsailed Constitution by only one minute and fifty seconds, elapsed time. Columbia was again outclassed from the start. Its gain of about 12 minutes on the second leg of the race was time wasted by the other boats in a luffing match.

Between the leaders the race was hotly contested, first one and then the other getting the better of it by sudden shifts of wind, which when it began to blow steadily left the Reliance about one minute ahead.

FORMER POSTMASTER ARRESTED

Dora Campbell Charged With Embezzling Postal Funds.

Baltimore, June 20.—Dora Campbell, 26 years old, former postmaster of Maysville, Ga., was arrested Friday on a charge of embezzling postal funds. She resigned her position in Maysville, it is said, last May, and came to Baltimore for treatment at a hospital, where she registered as Dorothy Herndon. Miss Campbell is held at police headquarters for the action of the United States officers.

Gen. Young Chief of Staff.

Washington, June 20. — Secretary Root Friday issued an order assigning Maj. Gen. S. B. M. Young as chief of staff, with Maj. Gen. Henry C. Corbin and Brig. Gen. William H. Carter as the other general staff officers. Brig. Gen. Tasker H. Bliss is to become president of the war college. The order will take effect August 15.

The Saengerfest Ended.

Armour's Generous Gift.

Chicago, June 20.—The announcement of a gift of $150,000 from J. Ogden Armour was made at the convocation exercises of the Armour institute of technology Friday night. Leslie M. Shaw, secretary of the treasury, made an address.

Another Strike at Chicago.

Chicago, June 20.—A general strike of the freight handlers and warehousemen employed on two lines of railroads is predicted by President Curran of the International Union of Freight Handlers.

COLLAPSE OF PROSPERITY.

The Merchants Overstocked, Buying Stopped and Industrial Outlook Discouraging.

The hollowness and fickleness of our present so-called prosperity are becoming apparent. Its delicacy and unsoundness are now being admitted by the many textile manufacturers in Philadelphia. Nearly 100,000 of their employes are on strike for shorter hours and some of them also for higher wages. The textile workers think it only fair that they should get a small share of the great prosperity which they have been hearing and reading about for so many years. They are now being told that it is too late and that not only are the manufacturers not making the profits they made a few years ago, but that the outlook for the future is bad. The following is from an editorial on the Philadelphia strike in the Wool and Cotton Reporter of June 4:

"The margin of profit per unit is smaller in about every line of industry than it was a couple of years ago—it is not nearly as easy as it was to secure an adequate return on capital devoted to productive purposes. The manufacturers are also confronted by the fact that the general financial and industrial outlook is at present far from reassuring. There is increasing evidence that retailers throughout the country are overstocked, and the fear naturally exists that this means lessened opportunities for disposing of the products of the mills. For instance, it was reported this week that Marshall Field had instructed his purchasing agents to buy no more dry goods of any sort, until his present stock was considerably reduced, and he is said to have told a business associate that he did not care to stock ahead until the future was clearer. The Philadelphia textile operatives are probably not conversant enough with the general financial and industrial situation of the country to appreciate the manufacturers' point of view. The manufacturers cannot be governed entirely by the factors of the immediate present. If the signs of the times point to a probable lessening of their profits in the not very remote future, through falling prices for their products and lessened demand, they could hardly be expected to advance wages at this time, even if their monetary profits were as large as the operatives seem to believe."

We have had six years of fine crops which have sold at high prices; our tariff has not been touched and probably will not be touched for years to come; the crop prospects this year are good and the outlook for high prices is excellent. Why then are there clouds in the industrial sky? If our prosperity were real prosperity for all and not simply prosperity for the trusts and monopolies and high cost of living for the masses, it would not go all to pieces, as it now appears to be doing. At the slightest suspicion of anything but excellent crops. We should be able to weather one year of poor crops after five or six excellent ones. We are not, because the projected trusts have sapped the earnings of the masses and exhausted their buying power.

Thus it is evident that there are more reasons than one why we should take Hanna's advice: "Let well enough alone and keep on letting it alone; hands off." Our thin-shelled, unsubstantial and unsound prosperity will not stand handling, not even "with care." "Workingmen, beware; touch it at your peril," is the advice both of the republican politicians and protected manufacturers. "Stand pat," don't budge or look sidewise or the whole protection prosperity structure will collapse.

——Former Postmaster General Smith believes there is no great demand for tariff revision amongst the republicans, but adds: "I believe, however, that the platform of the party will declare for revision, but in such a way that business interests will not suffer." If there is no great demand for tariff revision why should the republicans attempt to fool the people by declaring for it in their national platform? To declare against the trusts and for revision of the tariff, and not intend to carry out either declaration, is rather a stiff dose of medicine to get even the republican voters to swallow.

TO FOOL THE PEOPLE.

Republican Leaders Take Different Views of Controlling the Trusts.

The republican leaders should get together and agree on information they impart to the voters. President Roosevelt, in what was doubtless a carefully considered speech on the tariff and trust issue, told us that the Sherman law was inadequate and a constitutional amendment was essential to control the trusts. The Ohio republican platform says: "Combinations for the monopoly of trade and kindred unlawful purposes are directly amenable to penalties provided by republican legislation," meaning, of course, that the Sherman law is ample to control the trusts. Which of these statements are we to believe, that of the president or Senator Hanna? Neither do the same authorities agree on the tariff as affecting the trusts, for the president said that the tariff had no connection with the trusts, while the Ohio platform after declaring as above quoted on the control of monopolies, further says: "No worthy interest is imperiled, but whatever will work public harm is restrained and that without resort to the democratic plan of destroying all American industries through tariff revision, or otherwise."

"Or otherwise" is good. It allows the republican brethren a hole to crawl into when the democratic plan of tariff revision has relieved the people from trust extortion, which is now permitted by the protection the tariff gives them.

It would also seem that Senator Hanna has changed his mind about trusts, for it is not long ago that he was vociferously declaring from every stump he mounted that there were no trusts and now he admits that there are "combinations for the monopoly of trade." This being all things to all men and each leader putting his own construction on the important issues may fool some of the people all the time, but it surely cannot fool all the people all the time.

BARKING UP THE WRONG TREE.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

——President Roosevelt does not like the tariff for an issue; it touches rather a sore spot not only in his own anatomy but in that of his party, so he has given the republicans a new battery—the full baby carriage.

——The trusts have been giving the screw another twist during the past month and squeezed up prices of necessities another notch according to Dun's index figures. On May 1 the numbers were 68.561, on June 1, 98.956.

——Senator Hanna and Senator Foraker with arms entwined posing on the stage as the great harmony tableau of the Ohio state convention must have been an interesting picture to the delegates who were all ready to poignard their neighbors if the occasion required and their political pie depended on it.

——Perry Heath, who is mixed up in the post office scandals, has sailed for Japan and the investigators will have to get along without the information that he could give them. He did not answer the most important charges that "one Tulloch" made against him before he departed. Nor has he resigned as secretary of the republican national committee.

——This administration will be noted for its junketing propensities, the president, cabinet and higher officials are away from Washington more than half the time and all travel on special trains or passes by favor of the railroad combinations. It hardly looks reasonable that recipients of these favors can be seriously fighting the railroad mergers, but we shall see all in good time. So far the average citizen who pays his fare has received no reduction in rates.

——From all appearances the constitution will have to be withdrawn from Porto Rico, for it is giving the administration endless trouble there, through that old fogey nonsense that trial by jury is a necessary accompaniment. The Porto Ricans have got into their silly heads that a grand jury has a right to indict government officials who have committed a crime, but orders from Washington soon convinced them that reasons of "high moment" could not allow such proceedings

FROM ALL OVER THE STATE.

ANNUAL REUNION.

Elks From All Parts of Kentucky Took Possession of Lexington.

Lexington, Ky., June 17.—Tuesday was resplendent with glory for the Elks' reunion, which opened here. Visiting Elks have taken complete possession of the city, with their ladies, sponsors and maids of honor. Three thousand delegates are attending the reunion, which is interspersed with music, oratory and varied pleasures.

Col. W. C. P. Breckinridge was the orator of the day. He was assisted by Emmet Dixon, of Paris, and Dean Baker P. Lee, of this city. At noon the visitors were treated to an old-fashioned barbecue at the fair grounds, after which the day was spent in witnessing the matinee racing.

Tuesday night there was a general reception by the local lodge at their club rooms.

Wednesday the festivities will close with two grand balls.

Lexington, Ky., June 18.—At its closing session here Wednesday the Kentucky Elks' Reunion association, representing over 4,000 Elks, passed resolutions which pertain to conditions in Breathitt county. The resolutions conclude as follows:

"As Elks and Kentuckians we condemn crime, disorder and violence of every kind. We demand that crime shall be punished and that all officers and citizens alike shall obey the law in spirit and in truth to the end that its supremacy shall be established and maintained in every section of our beloved commonwealth and that the proud title of "Kentuckian" shall not become a term of reproach.

"We believe that the constitution and the law as existing in Kentucky are sufficient if properly administered to protect life and property, to restore order and to punish crime, but if on trial it is ascertained that they are inadequate, then we demand that such defects in our law be promptly remedied by legislation."

Hon. S. P. Tarvin, judge of the Covington district, in a speech accepting the presidency of the Kentucky Elks' association, made the following allusions to Breathitt county:

"Our hearts go out in loving sympathy to the wife and children of the murdered Marcum, and we demand the speedy punishment of all assassins, resident and non-resident. Breathitt county needs for the next 30 days an iron-handed czar who would clear it of vile assassins and lawbreakers. If the awful conditions prevail much longer there and spread throughout the state Kentucky will become as lawless as Ohio. The government at Washington is talking of remonstrating with Servia for assassination of its king and queen. In Breathitt they killed a man who was worth all the kings and queens in Christendom and it would be in poor taste for our government to say anything to a foreign power about assassination so long as it is so prevalent in our own country."

POUCH CAUSED A WRECK.

Sleeper and Ladies' Coach Went Over a 15-Foot Embankment.

Lexington, Ky., June 20.—No. 21 passenger train, west-bound, met with a dangerous wreck this side of Ashland. The sleeper and ladies' coach were turned over an embankment 15 feet and the passengers escaped death in a remarkable manner. A Virginia woman, whose name Superintendent Mitchell could not learn, was dangerously hurt and returned to Ashland. Deputy Internal Revenue Collector C. H. Berryman, of this city, was badly bruised, as were five other passengers. Pullman Conductor Robinson, whose home is in Louisville, had his shoulder broken. The mail pouch when thrown from the moving train struck the depot platform and bounded back under the train, throwing the smoker off, and it pulled the other cars off and they were turned over.

Must Pay the Taxes.

Frankfort, Ky., June 20.—In the case of Henderson county vs. Henderson Bridge Co. the court of appeals practically decided that the bridge company must pay taxes for the years 1893 to 1895, and that the injunction granted several years ago to the company against the sheriff of Henderson county, prohibiting him from collecting taxes for the years named, was no bar to the present action, because the sheriff was not the representative of the county.

Cause and Affect.

Frankfort, Ky., June 20.—In the case of Maysville Gas Co. vs. Isaac Thomas, administrator, a judgment for $5,000 damages for the killing of Isaac Thomas by a live electric wire was affirmed. The gas company furnished the steam to run the engine that fed the motor that operated the street car system. A live wire dangled into the street.

Gilmore Held For Murder.

Lexington, Ky., June 19.—Clarence Gilmore, the exercise boy who shot and fatally wounded Edward Clark, a companion, at the local track Monday last, was formally arraigned Thursday on a charge of murder, Clark having died of his wounds.

After a Franchise.

Versailles, Ky., June 20.—G. W. Hall, of Louisville, representing the Cumberland Telephone and Telegraph Co., has made application to the city council for a franchise to establish a local telephone exchange in Versailles.

THE NEGROES CONVICTED.

A Heavy Expense Incurred in Saving Them From Lynching.

Maysville, Ky., June 20.—The state troops left here at 4:30 Friday afternoon by special train over the L. & N. for Frankfort, Sheriff Robertson, with the three Negro burglars and would-be murderers, Mann, Morris and Sanders, accompanying the soldiers. Mann and Morris were given 15 years each on the two charges—five for shooting and wounding and ten for burglary. They were tried Friday on the latter charge, the jury giving them the limit after being out ten minutes.

Sanders was not tried on the charge of burglary, as he was used as a witness against the others. The Negroes have cost the state a pretty penny, as over 100 guards have been on duty here since Tuesday morning. It is the general opinion, however, that an attempt to lynch them would have been made had the troops not been ordered here.

LEE TURNER IN JAIL.

Two Indictments Against Him as An Accessory to Murders.

Pineville, Ky., June 19.—Lee Turner, of Quarter House fame, was landed in jail at this place Thursday evening by officers of Jacksboro, Tenn., where he was arrested several days ago and held for requisition papers.

There are two indictments against him in this county as an accessory before the fact of the murder of Deputy Sheriff Charles Cecil and of Deputy John Doyle, in the battle during which Turner's famous saloon was burned and a number of his partisans killed. His half-brother, General Turner, who was reported to have been killed by Lee, was landed in jail here several days ago to answer the indictment against him for the murder of Doyle and Cecil.

ARMED MEN GATHERED.

Believed That the Intention Was to Lynch Perry Bright.

Lebanon, Ky., June 18.—Considerable excitement was caused here Wednesday morning by the appearance of a large number of armed men in town who, it is believed, came with the intention of lynching Perry Bright. Bright and his son Will are in jail charged with stabbing James Stayton, a brother-in-law of the elder Bright, to death last Friday. There is a very bitter feeling against the Brights in the neighborhood where the tragedy occurred, the general belief being that the murder was a most cowardly one. It is alleged that young Bright held Stayton while his father stabbed him to death.

ACTS OF VANDALISM.

Unknown Miscreans Amuse Themselves By Wounding Animals.

Henderson, Ky., June 20.—For several nights quite a number of acts of vandalism were committed at Audobon, a suburb of this city. A mule belonging to George Keach was cut several times across the shoulder, the slashes being from ten to twenty inches in length. An attempt was made to kill Dr. G. W. Drayne's fine horse. Some one entered the stable and inflicted several cuts in the animal's neck, narrowly missing the jugular vein.

A cow of Rev. W. O. Connell was also badly cut with a knife. Other animals were maimed.

LETTER CARRIER MURDERED.

His Body Was Thrown on the Railway Tracks at Louisville.

Louisville, Ky., June 19.—Joseph Ricks, a letter carrier, was murdered by highwaymen Thursday night and his body thrown on the railroad tracks at Fourteenth and Portland avenue, after the pockets had been rifled of $80 in money and a gold watch. Many trains passed over the body, cutting it up, but when found the head was unscathed save for the wound inflicted by the robbers. No arrests have been made.

Midnight Wedding.

Campton, Ky., June 18.—Wash Faulkner, a young farmer of Vortex, this county, and Lula Tyler, the daughter of H. B. Tyler, a prominent politician of the same place, eloped to this place and were married at 12:15 o'clock, Wednesday morning. J. H. Stumper, of the M. E. church, officiated.

BOONE CO., RECORDER

Wednesday, - - June 24, 1903.

W. L. RIDDELL, - - Publisher.

THE normal conditions in Breathitt county might be improved were some of the principal county officials compelled to act leading roles in a gallows matnee.

THE Democratic party in Kentucky is having entirely too much business in the courts. What happens to individuals who like to appeal to courts for every slight provocation?

EACH of the Louisville daily papers claims to have the largest circulation, besides being the most reliable and up-to-date in political matters. They are wonderful papers, to be sure—on claiming.

An Illustrated Edition.

THE RECORDER will, in the very near future, issue a special illustrated edition, setting forth in substantial and attractive form the resources and advantages, summarizing the history and reflecting the individuality of the good people of Boone county. Every class of people and business from the farmer and stock breeder to the banker and statesman will be called upon and invited to be represented in this work, and several thousand extra copies beyond the regular circulation of the RECORDER will be issued. The edition will be handsomely illustrated with halftone engravings, and we hope to make it not only a work of immense value in the advertising of Boone county wherever a copy may chance to be, but the pride of every Boone countian, whether he resides within its borders at the present time or abroad. For the field work of this edition the services of Messrs. C. L. Howell and J. G. Forrister, both of whom are trained specialists and thoroughly conversant with this class of work, have been secured—which guarantees in advance the success of the enterprise. We trust that our people will receive them with that courtesy and consideration due such a worthy and large undertaking.

The lesson of the great Kansas City flood. It is a sermon on the brotherhood of man, a picture of the good that lies in human hearts.

In a great city thousands of people were divided into classes. Some lived in palaces, some in modest homes, some in huts. In the fight for business cruel things were often done. The pace was so swift that those who were up thought little of those who were down. Men worshiped money and power. Women struggled for high positions in society. The avenue forgot that the alley existed. The people could not have been more surely divided had some lived in China and others in Cuba. It is the way of the social system.

Then came the calamity—the flood that drowned human beings like rats; that took husbands from wives and parents from children; that swept millions of dollars in property into the river's mighty maw, and left thousands of people homeless, stripped of every material thing—made paupers.

What happened then?

True manhood awoke. True kindness came to life. Every one of the temporary rules of the social system was swept away in the muddy torrent. Heroes were uncovered by emergency, and humanity broadened and widened.

The bank president risked his life to save the laborer's child. The lawyer swam a raging torrent to rescue a washerwoman. A jail inmate joined hands with a Congressman and snatched five precious lives from the flood. The President of the Kansas City Stockyards, C. F. Morse; E. E. Richardson, of the same concern, and two companions thought so little of themselves that they entered the very jaws of death and carried 13 persons to safety. The humblest and the highest were on an even footing. They risked all and dared all, because of real humanity and the brotherhood that knows naught of conventions or social distinctions.

Homes were thrown open and thousands of women became ministering angels. They gave kind words with food and clothing, and friendship wherever needed.

"Put me down for $500," said a man to the relief committee. At that moment the walls of his great factory were crumbling into the flood, and years of effort and attention to business were wiped out. It was nothing. Others had lost all.

There is more of it. To tell the splendid story of the virtues shown by this great calamity would require pages.

It is the story of Kansas City. It is the story of any city in this broad land in time of trouble.

The people are all right. Business and social desires may callous them, but away down in their breast they are what God meant them to be—brave, unselfish and kind.—Ex.

Touching upon the subject of his own experiences in feeding sheep, W. A. Moulton of New York, says he began with 100 acres of land about twelve years ago, at 18 years of age, and about seven years ago added 70 acres more, and in 1901 added 420 acres, in all has now 590 acres. He says: "I started my flock of sheep ten years ago and have been reasonably successful. I began with 25 and now have about 600 head, of which between 60 and 70 are registered. I raise from ten to fifteen acres of cabbage every year, feeding the refuse and unsalable product to my fat sheep and lambs, together with what roots they will eat up clean. I also raise and feed large quantities of mangels and yellow Swede turnips. My stock is kept in pasture and fed in rape fields one hour each day, so that they go into winter quarters in good condition. I do not overstock my pastures. This always insures me a good stand of grass. In winter they get clover hay, alfafa, corn stalks and one half pound of roots per head each day. They have good, fresh clean water at all times, and lots of exercise. They are sorted according to size, and fed accordingly. One month before lambing I give them a small grain ration of oats, bran, barley and meal, feeding one pint per head once a day. After lambing this is as well as the root ration is doubled."

A recent publication by Prince Krapotkin, the Russian economist, recites some of the effects of intensive culture in the possible yields. Thus in Belgium they grow enough agricultural products to feed their own population of 400 inhabitants to the square mile, and have enough left to send $5,000,000 worth each year to Great Britain. If we could do as well in our fields, the State of New York might furnish food for 23,000,000 people, and Texas could feed twice the present population of the United States. The price tells of instances where eighteen tons of hay a year have been gathered from a single acre, and an acre has produced 1,500 to 2,000 bushels of potatoes. But this is as nothing compared to the crops under glass in Belgium and the isle of Jersey, where the land is kept under cultivation all the year one crop being ready to succeed another without any interval. By this method he claims that thirteen acres under glass in Jersey have produced better money returns than 1,300 acres under ordinary methods of farm cultivation. This must be a satisfaction to those who are worrying from a fear that the world will not produce enough to feed the grandchildren of the present generation. —Exchange.

Mrs. Belle Brady reported to the RECORDER, last Saturday morning, that the English Sparrows have damaged the chimneys on her residence to such an extent that it is necessary to have them rebuilt. The little pests have not only scratched the mortar from between, but have dug great holes in, the bricks. Every once in a while these little pests develop a new field for the exercise of their destructive proclivities.

Base Ball.

The Burlington and Erlanger fans witnessed a very interesting game, last Saturday afternoon at the Erlanger ball park, between the Erlanger team and the Boones. Neither side had secured any advantage at the close of the ninth inning, the score standing four to four, while the friends of each team, who had become financially interested in the result were being very much inconvenienced by nervous chills. The Boones went to the bat for the tenth time, and by good stick work got three men on bases, when Houston hit for three bases, driving in three runs, but was called out for cutting a base. Huston's work paralyzed the Erlanger rooters and brought the Boone rootres out of thier attack of nervous prostration. Before the bombardment that was making the tenth inning famous could be silenced, a double bagger and a single shoved another run across the home plate, making the Boones and their friends feel pretty comfortable. In their half of the tenth, with but one man out, Erlanger had three men on bases, and the Burlington rooters began to experience the return of the trouble of which they were so suddenly relieved but a few minutes before, but sharp fielding and effective pitching let Erlanger down without increasing her number of runs. The batteries were Ficke and Brady for Erlanger; Hogan and Hughes for the Boones. Each battery did nice work. Following is the score by innings:

Boones	2	0	0	0	1	0	0	1	0	4—8

Struck out—Brady, 6; Hughes, 12.

Hit with pitched ball—Hughes, 2.

Bases on balls—off of Hughes, 1.

Hits—Erlanger, 6 singles, 1 double; 2 tripples; Boones, 11 singles, 4 doubles, 1 tripple.

Umpires—Victor and Crisler.

The Burlington ball team and the Bullittsville team played here last Saturday. The score was pretty much one sided, being 24 to 6 in favor of Burlington. The principal features of the game were two or three home runs on strike-outs.

Following is the line-up for the game here next Saturday: Boones—Hogan, c; Souther, 2 b; Clutterbuck, 3 b; Slayback, c f; Hughes, s s; Bullock, 1 b; Houston, p; Luck l f; Aylor, r f. Picked nine—Mauer, 1 b; Bohn, 2d; Arnold, 3b; Vesenmire, s s; Maxwell, l f; W. Flick, c f; E. Flick, r f; Shears, c; Brady, p.

Sunshine and air do more to frighten away the demon of colds, in whatever form, than do any number of doctors or medicines. People who sleep with their windows open are far wiser than those who hermetically seal themselves against any fresh air until they arise. And don't accustom yourself to never be in a draft a minute, for it is sure to be unavoidable at times, and then if you are not used to it you will catch cold.

Last Thursday Rev. Elder Stephens of Erlanger, visited his old friend, Mrs. Sallie Goodridge, who resides with her daughter, Mrs. G. T. Gaines, near town. They are of the same religious faith and there is only seven days difference in their ages, two facts that make these two venerable people feel very dear to each other. The day was spent very pleasantly in recalling the happenings of their young days, when this county was sparsely inhabited and neighbors were scarce and far between. These old people are each up in the nineties and have witnessed the great change in the face of the county, as well as the passing of nearly all their associates in childhood. They are each enjoying good health, and their many friends hope they will live to pass the century mark.

Many farmers know that cut hay or even straw, wet and sprinkled with meal, is a better food for working horses than whole grain and hay. In this shape the nutriment in the feed is easily eaten and digested. Horses do not need water when eating, except as it is put on the chopped hay to make the meal stick to it. The meal being fine, digests perfectly, while much of the nutriment in whole grain is lost. Again, the wasted effect made in digesting the latter is much detracted from the strength which should go to the work.

Leslie McMullen, who was working at the saw mill here last Thursday, met with quite a serious accident. He went down into the saw pit to remove a piece of bark or sliver that was causing some trouble, and when he attempted to take hold of it the saw caught the index finger on his right hand and mutilated it so badly that amputation was necessary. Dr. Duncan happened to be at the mill at the time the accident occurred, and he took the young man to his office where the finger was amputated and the wound dressed. Mr. McMullen made a second reach for the obstruction he was trying to remove before he discovered he had been injured, and even then it was causing him no pain.

The Test of Genuine Repentance

John Baptist and His Plain, Blunt Message.

Sermon by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher.

(Copyright, 1903, by J. M. Edson.)

Chicago, Sunday, June 21, 1903.

Text:—"Bring forth therefore fruits meet for repentance."—Matt. 3:8.

MAN out in the wilderness of Judea, clothed in plain, coarse raiment of camel's hair, girded in with a leathern girdle—a Nazarite living his life of separation and feeding on the products of the desert regions—locusts and wild honey. This man, a Voice from God, coming with his message of, "Repent ye, for the Kingdom of Heaven is at hand." The cry stirs the expectant Jews of all classes, and they flock to the wilderness to see and hear the strange prophet who has arisen to prepare the way of the Lord. Among those who come from Jerusalem, and all Judea and all the region round about Jordan," are many of the Pharisees and Sadducees, the two principal sects of the Jews who controlled and directed the religious thought and worship of the Jewish people at that time. And when John sees them, with Elijah-like bluntness, he says: "O generation of vipers, who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come? Bring forth therefore fruits meet for repentance." These are the circumstances connected with the words of our text. And in answer to their inward protest if not outwardly expressed exception to John's arraignment, the prophet goes on to declare: "Think not to say within yourselves, we have Abraham to our father: for I say unto you, that God is able of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham."

LUKE gives us the additional information that the people, following the lead of the Pharisees and Sadducees, also came asking: "What shall we do then?" To which John replied: "He that hath two coats, let him impart to him that hath none; and he that hath meat, let him do likewise." Thus reaching the selfish, avaricious spirit which prevailed at that time, and which in this, our day, is again taking hold of the people of the world in their relations one with another. And the publicans—that large class of tax gatherers which had grown up under the Roman system of government—came, asking what they should do. "Exact no more than that which is appointed you," was John's reply. And then came that other great class of people, the soldiers, by aid of whom Rome had brought into subjection the known world and maintained her rule, and desired also to know what they should do. And with them John began likewise with those matters which most vitally concerned their own selves and their relations to others, for he replied: "Do violence to no man, neither accuse any falsely; and be contented with your wages."

THE burden of John's message was the cry: "Repent ye." And lest they might make the mistake which is so often made that repentance was merely a lip confession with no outward change of heart or life, he went on to demand that they "bring forth therefore fruits meet for repentance." The religionists of his day, the people, the publicans, the soldiers, were brought face to face with the practical side of life. The way of the coming Lord was not to be prepared by a more intense formalism and devotion to ceremonial traditions, but the pathway over which He was to pass was to be paved with the changed hearts and altered lives of the penitents. Religion was to be cast into a new mold and all life was to feel its vitalizing influence. Is there less need to-day for John's message of "repent ye: bring forth therefore fruits meet for repentance" than there was when that message first broke on the wilderness air? Has the element of genuine repentance been lost in greater or less degree from the Christian life and the Christian religion? Is it not true that the great majority of the Christians of to-day have their periods of emotional repentance, and, in response to a troubled conscience because of waywardness and faithlessness, express contrition in the public meeting or in the private audience of the heart, and then resolve to do better, but who never get beyond the point of lip repentance and good resolves? How is it in your own case? Repentance is not sorrow or contrition. It is infinitely more.

THAT little girl in a certain Sunday school, who was asked what repentance meant, got it pretty nearly correct when she replied that "repentance was being sorry enough to quit." That is the thought which Paul expresses in his second letter to the Corinthian church where he says: "Now I rejoice, not that ye were made sorry, but that ye sorrowed to repentance, for ye were made sorry after a Godly manner; for Godly sorrow worketh repentance to salvation not to be repented of; but the sorrow of the world worketh death." Words lose force and meaning, because carelessly used. Repentance is not a synonym for sorrow. Sorrow may be a result of repentance, but it is not repentance. Sorrow may be the thing that makes one desire to get out of the miry clay of sin, but repentance is the ladder by which the soul may climb. The test of genuineness of repentance like that of the silver coin is not in the ring, for the counterfeit often gives out a sound equal to that of the genuine coin, but the test is found in its ability to stand the application of the acid. The spurious coin will be eaten into by the biting fluid, and the bogus repentance will be revealed when the biting circumstances of desire and temptation again are felt. Repent ye, but the fruits of that repentance must prove whether it really is repentance or only a momentary troubling of conscience, which feeling will evaporate before the heat of trial.

SAUL was sorry for his act of disobedience which cost him the sharp rebuke of the prophet and the kingdom, but repentance never moved within his heart and he went headlong to a miserable death. David not only felt sorry for his great sin, but he repented in sack cloth and ashes, and later wrote: "The sacrifices of God are a broken spirit; a broken and a contrite heart, O God, Thou wilt not despise." The sorrow of his heart was manifested in the outward life of his changed conduct. The rich young ruler left Jesus sorrowful, but repentance did not come to make him willing to give his all to the Lord and help him to lead a new life in humble service. All who came to John and were baptized in the Jordan made a profession of repentance, but it was only as Pharisees and Sadducees gave expression in their outward lives of "pure religion and undefiled," it was only as the people gave that others might have raiment and meat, it was only as the publicans in their tax gathering only exacted that which they were entitled to, it was only as the soldiers violated no man's person or rights, did not bear false witness, and did not plot mutiny and rebellion, that the genuineness of the repentance which they professed was made evident. See how strikingly this is exemplified in the experience of Zaccheus. He quit extortion, he restored the goods he had taken wrongfully, and Jesus declared: "This day is salvation come to this house." And all throughout Jericho and the surrounding country it was soon known that Zaccheus had repented and become a changed man, for the widow, the struggling tradesman and farmer whom he had robbed in his tax gathering were made to rejoice with a fourfold return of their goods, and the poor of the city were warmed and fed and clothed by the generous gifts which the converted publican gave even to the half of his great possessions.

BUT the test of genuine repentance is found not only in the changed life, but in the patience manifested in that life when the accumulated consequences of past mistakes and misdeeds press upon the soul. God forgives, but He does not always remove the consequences of sin. The boy who drove a nail into the post every time he told a lie, and who, after he had filled the post full, began to draw them out, one by one, whenever temptation was overcome and he told the truth, was pained by the fact that the nail holes were still there with their disfiguring marks. It is so with the sin marks and failures in the life. The scars remain. Careless neglect of duty, the seeking of the gratification of selfish desires and aims may plunge one into difficulties which are exceedingly trying and painful, and the genuineness of the repentance for the wrong and evil that have crept into the life is measured by the patience with which those difficulties and trials are faced. The bringing forth of fruits meet for repentance here has its realization. That is not repentance which is sorrow because the consequences of sin and wrong doing must be endured. Repentance that arises simply from a desire to escape the penalties of sin is not genuine repentance.

The prisoner in the dock is sorry because of the punishment which is about to be inflicted upon him for his wrong doing. He makes profession of repentance in the hope, perhaps, that he may escape the penalty of his sin wholly or in part. While he feels the penalties of sin pressing hard upon him he is repentant, but once escaped from the consequences of sin, he forgets the professed repentance and is soon back into the old ways and the old life. But real repentance would find expression in patiently enduring the consequences of the wrong doing and the turning from ways which would make a repetition of the sin and wrong doing possible

THE message of John was the same to all. People from all classes and conditions in life sought him out in his wilderness retreat. There were the religious teachers and great numbers of common people, there were the rich and the poor, the public officials and the soldiers. And to one and all, the message of John the Baptist was "repent ye," "bring forth therefore fruits meet for repentance." And to all the world to-day the same message sounds forth, "Repent ye." "Bring forth therefore fruits meet for repentance." Repentance and the evidences of that repentance were the necessary preparations for the coming of the Lord. Jesus entering Jerusalem as the King rode over a pathway strewn with palm branches and garments of the enthusiasts who hailed Him as King. But the pathway over which Jesus rides to the soul of man is one which is paved with repentance and the fruits which are meet for that repentance. God is no respecter of persons, and His Son travels but one road on His way to the soul. All alike are called to repentance, and no pathway of good resolutions, or good works, or high moral living, or high ideals or aims, be that pathway paved ever so smoothly, will tempt the Lord to pass over it. But repentance draws the Saviour quickly. His coming is not delayed. Prepare ye the way of the Lord by repentance.

THERE are two aspects to this message of John. One its bearing upon the unregenerate soul, and the other having to do with the soul that has been born again. Both are called to an attitude of repentance. One to the saving of the soul, the other to the putting off, more and more, of the flesh and the putting on more and more of Christ. Repent, O Soul! that has not felt the cleansing and saving power of Jesus' blood, because "the Kingdom of Heaven is at hand." Repent, O Christian! because upon the failures of to-day you are to mount by the help of Jesus to a newer and better self to-morrow. There is to be practical evidence in your life of that repentance. It is not the cry of the soul when in peril and face to face with death, and then utter forgetfulness of that cry when the peril is passed and death's grim hand has been withdrawn without claiming his victim. Ah, how often is wrung from the lips the agonized cry of seeming repentance, and as the storm passes and the bark of life once more apparently sails on a quiet sea, the soul forgets the cry and the peril. And again on it goes in its indifference to its desperate need, while just ahead are the rapids and the brink of eternity. That cry in the hour of peril was not the cry of repentance. Had it been so, the fruits of that repentance would have wrought the altered life.

HERE is the soul conscious of sin and manifesting repentance, and yet longing and desiring to take with it all the old life with its indulgences. The soul is alarmed over the thought of what it must give up. It clings to former associates, habits and manner of life. Where this is the case, measure the degree of repentance. Such repentance is either infinitesimally small, or else altogether a negative quantity. Repent! but bring forth fruits meet for repentance. In this matter of repentance there are just two who are involved—God and the soul. God the righteous One and man the sinner. When the sinner takes his eyes off God and focuses them upon the things about him these temporalities are magnified and the sense of God is lost. With this comes a lessened degree of repentance, and so little of the fruits of repentance in the life as to be hardly perceptible. This is one of the sad conditions in the churches to-day. Lowered standards, and the bringing of the world into the activities of the churches and the lives of the Christians, are reducing the consciousness of the need of repentance. John the Baptist and his message are needed to-day. The cry must be raised on every hand: Repent ye! Repent ye! Repent, unreserved soul, because your peril is great, the time is short, and Jesus stands patiently waiting to enter over the roadway of your sincere repentance. Repent, O Christian! of that love for the world and the things of the world which is so filling your heart and life. Repent of that indifference towards the lost souls all about you. Repent of your selfish love of ease which permits you to stay away from God's house when you as a member there have a regular appointment to meet your Lord there and help sustain His worship. Repent of your shallowness and hypocrisy which encourage and allow you to get up and testify in meeting to repentance for past shortcomings and aspirations for a better life, and which, like the vapor which vanishes before the scorching rays of the sun, disappears utterly before the light, glib, gossipy conversation which fills God's house after meeting. Repent because you go away from the devotional meeting or the preaching service thinking not of God and His service, speaking not to the honor and praise of the Lord, but in sharp criticism of the preacher, of the service, and of pretty much every one who came under your notice. Repent, O Christian! because your life at home and in the office belies most awfully your profession.

THUS prepare the way of the Lord. There is a double way in which genuine repentance prepares the coming of the Lord. Spiritually—the tears of true repentance always catch the light of the shining presence of Jesus, who never fails to come, and each tear flashes its brilliancy and beauty over the whole life, and upon those about. Materially—true repentance on the part of the unregenerate and the Christian hastens the coming of the Lord in the clouds of glory to take to Himself His bride, the church. Think of how the indifference, neglect and worldly-mindedness of the Christian is delaying the spread of the Gospel, the upbuilding of the Kingdom, and the fulfillment of the promise of Jesus and the angels that He would come again, even as He was taken up from His disciples into Heaven. Is there not need for the cry—Repent ye? Is there not absolute and desperate need to heed God's command? "Bring forth therefore fruits meet for repentance." Upon you lies this responsibility. What answer will you give to your King when you meet Him face to face and He asks of you an accounting? The night cometh! Let us then be up and doing while it is yet day.

Mrs. Hughson, of Chicago, whose letter follows, is another woman in high position who owes her health to the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I suffered for several years with general weakness and bearing-down pains, caused by womb trouble. My appetite was fitful, and I would lie awake for hours, and could not sleep, until I seemed more weary in the morning than when I retired. After reading one of your advertisements I decided to try the merits of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I am so glad I did. No one can describe the good it did me. I took three bottles faithfully, and besides building up my general health, it drove all disease and poison out of my body, and made me feel as spry and active as a young girl. Mrs. Pinkham's medicines are certainly all they are claimed to be."—MRS. M. E. HUGHSON, 347 East Ohio St., Chicago, Ill.

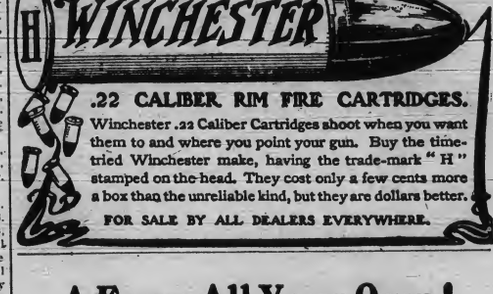
Mrs. Pinkham Tells How Ordinary Tasks Produce Displacements.

Apparently trifling incidents in woman's daily life frequently produce displacements of the womb. A slip on the stairs, lifting during menstruation, standing at a counter, running a sewing machine, or attending to the most ordinary tasks may result in displacement, and a train of serious evils is started.

The first indication of such trouble should be the signal for quick action. Don't let the condition become chronic through neglect or a mistaken idea that you can overcome it by exercise or leaving it alone.

More than a million women have regained health by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If the slightest trouble appears which you do not understand write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., for her advice, and a few timely words from her will show you the right thing to do. This advice costs you nothing, but it may mean life or happiness or both.



Mrs. Leiah Stowell, 177 Wellington St., Kingston, Ont., writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—You are indeed a godsend to women, and if they all knew what you could do for them, there would be no need of their dragging out miserable lives in agony.

"I suffered for years with bearing-down pains, womb trouble, nervousness, and excruciating headache, but a few bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made life look new and promising to me. I am light and happy, and I do not know what sickness is, and I now enjoy the best of health."

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound can always be relied upon to restore health to women who thus suffer. It is a sovereign cure for the worst forms of female complaints, — that bearing-down feeling, weak back, failing and displacement of the womb, inflammation of the ovaries, and all troubles of the uterus or womb. It dissolves and expels tumors from the uterus in the early stage of development, and checks any tendency to cancerous humors. It subdues excitability, nervous prostration, and tones up the entire female system. Its record of cures is the greatest in the world, and should be relied upon with confidence.

BITTER-ROT OF APPLES.

A Destructive Orchard Disease Which Has Caused Considerable Loss of Late Years.

This is the most destructive disease to apples in southern Illinois and Missouri, and it occurs over a wide extent of country. It was most destructive in 1900. It is most abundant in warm, moist weather, when its ravages become most evident.

This is a disease which is especially injurious to apples in the autumn, and may attack them before or after being picked. Its characteristic appearance is one or more brown specks anywhere upon the unbroken skin of the apple. Each of these finally enlarges so as to become very distinct and of dark color, circular and somewhat sunken. Beneath these the tissues are dry and tough, never soft and watery. Great numbers of very small pustules cover all but the outer border of the discolored spot, and give its surface a roughened appearance. The final result of this disease may be the running together of these various spots so as to form an irregular, depressed patch. The whole fruit at length becomes shriveled into an irregular hard body, and does not further decay.

CANKER ROT OF APPLES.
(A Cankered Limb with Diseased Apple Beneath It.)

The pinkish or red material which comes from the spots in the fruit is composed of spores. These are only, distributed by rain-water or by insects, never by the wind. The fungus lives over winter in the dried fruit and in the wound-like infected spots, called bitter-rot cankers, on the limbs of the trees. In May a fresh crop of spores may be produced from the mummies, and from the canker on the branches. It seems probable the first infection of the season comes from the cankers, and it can be traced where it has spread to the young apples lying below them on the trees, where the spores have been carried by the rain.

Where diseased apples are found on the trees early in the season it will probably be found that just above them is a mummy or a canker-spot. It is important to remove the canker and the infected fruits, as a very small cankered spot may prove a source of infection for a large area.

The best treatment for this disease is probably to spray the trees, including especially the mummies and cankers, with a strong copper-sulphate solution. The disease can be kept in check during the summer by repeated applications of Bordeaux mixture.—From Bulletin No. 77 of the Illinois Experiment Station.

GOOD SPRAYING PAYS.

Everything Depends on the Thorough and Equal Distribution of the Poisonous Mixture.

Prof. F. M. Webster says: "We have somehow got the idea that anybody can spray, and we send the hired men out to do this work and flatter ourselves that we have done all that can be done. We have sprayed. It is simply amazing to see the inefficient spraying that is done every year, not always by the hired men, but often by those who have not only the best of intentions, but are thoroughly honest and earnest, and I may add, fully believe that they have done the best that can be done. Now, do not do your spraying yourself, and do not send inexperienced men to do it, but go yourself and take your men with you. Do not take two men to hold the nozzles, and you do the pumping, or you hold a nozzle and let one of them pump. Have a man to drive and pump, and a man for each line of hose, and you yourself get right down among the men at the nozzles. Watch every movement, and see that not a limb or twig fails to be reached by the spray. No man can do this as you can, and you cannot if you are to handle a line of hose. You must see and direct the work, which is all that one ought to do, and if done right this will prove the most important and profitable part. You can save material by looking to it that the spray is evenly and thoroughly distributed, and not a part of the tree drenched and the other part untouched. Trees should never drip, or the mixture run down the trunk and collect in puddles about the base. The result will depend less on the amount of material used than on the thorough and equal distribution of it.—Farmers' Review.

An Excellent Whitewash.

Put into a clean wooden tub one bushel of lime, cover it with a couple of buckets of boiling water, stirring all the time. When the lime has been slaked, dissolve in the water four pounds of sulphate of zinc and two pounds of coarse salt. These are to prevent the wash cracking off. If required, the above may be made a cream color by adding two pounds of yellow ochre. From two and half to three buckets of wash will be required for an ordinary room.

SPEAKS FOR GOOD ROADS.

Col. William Jennings Bryan Demands Just Treatment for the Country's Farmers.

One after another the prominent men of the nation fall into line with the good roads movement. One of the notable features of the recent convention at St. Louis was the bringing together of President Roosevelt and Col. Bryan as speakers from the same platform. Widely as the two may differ on other questions, both are enthusiastic advocates of better highways. The colonel has been studying the good roads question recently and has taken a favorable view of the national aid plan. In a recent speech reported in the Commoner he gave utterance to the following sentiments:

"I have become exceedingly interested in this subject, as I have studied it. In fact, I have been thinking how many questions there are that enlist the thought and arouse the interest of those who seek to do something for their fellowmen. Nothing I have turned my attention to in the last few years has seemed to me to come nearer to the people than this question of good country roads. I find that there is a new field there, and I have already advanced so far that I have made up my mind to build a little road out near my farm, but to do what I can to get my county and my state to do something in the matter of roads.

"The expenditure of money for the permanent improvement of the common roads can be defended, first, as a matter of justice to the people who live in the country; second, as a matter of advantage to the people who do not live in the country, and, third, on the ground that the welfare of the nation demands that the comforts of country life shall, as far as possible, keep pace with the comforts of city life.

"It is a well-known fact, or a fact easily ascertained, that the people in the country, while paying their full share of county, state and federal taxes, receive as a rule only the general benefits of government, while the people in the cities have, in addition to the protection afforded by the government, the advantages arising from the expenditure of public moneys in their midst. The farmer not only pays his share of the taxes, but more than his share, yet very little of what he pays gets back to the farmer. People in the city pay not only less than their share, as a rule, but get back practically all of the benefits that come from the expenditure of the people's money. Let me show you what I mean when I say that the farmer pays more than his share: The farmer has visible property, and in every form of direct taxation visible property pays more than its share. Why? Because the man with visible property always pays. If he has an acre of land the assessor can find it; if he has horses, they can be counted; his cattle can be enumerated. If he has pigs, they begin to squeal when the assessor approaches; he cannot hide them. The farmer has nothing that escapes taxation.

"The improvement of the country roads can be justified also on the ground that the farmer, the first and most important of the producers of wealth, ought to be in position to hold his crop and market it at the most favorable opportunity, whereas at present he is virtually under compulsion to sell it as soon as it is matured, because the roads may become impassable at any time during the fall, winter or spring.

"The farmer has a right to insist upon roads that will enable him to go to town, to church, to the school house, and to the homes of his neighbors, as occasion may require, and with the extension of rural delivery he has an additional need for good roads in order that he may be kept in communication with the outside world.

"Just to what extent action should be taken by the federal government, the state government, the county and the precinct, or in what proportion the burden should be borne is a question for discussion, but that country roads should be constructed with a view to permanent and continuous use is scarcely open to debate.

"I have such confidence in the patriotism and intelligence of the American people that I believe that in the clash of ideas and conflict of views, the best will always be triumphant, the people having the benefit of the combined wisdom of all the people."

HOW TO PULL POSTS.

Here Is a Way That Has Been Used for Years with Most Gratifying Success.

To pull a post, back the farm wagon up near it, fasten a chain to hinge or body, and the other end, which should have a slipknot, drop over the post. Then stand a plank about 2½ feet long under the chain, the upper end near the post, the end on the ground farther from post than the upper end. By starting the team the post will be drawn out. Throw post in the wagon and hitch to next post, proceeding in this way until a load is made.—C. Beaty, in Farm and Home.

AN HONEST STREAK.

Which Led a Man Charged with Theft to Take Himself to the Calaboose.

Humor makes its appearance in queer places, but one would hardly expect to find it at the door of a house of correction, says the Milwaukee Sentinel. An unfortunate fellow was recently taken before a justice of the peace in Milwaukee, charged with stealing a quantity of wood. There was not much of a defense to offer, but an attorney who knew him volunteered to say a few words to the court in his behalf.

The attorney began his talk, and, warming up to his subject as he proceeded, finally succeeded in making a good plea for leniency. The justice, of course, found the prisoner guilty, but let him off with a sentence of 30 days in the house of correction. When the commitment had been made out it was discovered that there was no constable present, so the lawyer said to the prisoner:

"John, you know where the house of correction is, don't you?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, here's five cents and this paper. You take a car and go out there and give them this paper and they'll let you in. Will you do it?"

"Sure!"

And the funny part of this story is that John kept his word.

A PROMINENT COLLEGE MAN.

One of Indiana's Useful Educators Says: "I Feel Like a New Man."

MR. JOHN W. MENG.

Mr. John W. Meng, 54 Jefferson Ave., Indianapolis, Ind., State Representative of Indianapolis Business College, writes:

"I firmly believe that I owe my fine health to Peruna. Constant travel and change of food and water wrought havoc with my stomach, and for months I suffered with indigestion and catarrh of the stomach. I felt that the only thing to do was to give up my occupation which I felt very reluctant to do. Seeing an ad. of Peruna as a specific for catarrh I decided to give it a trial, and used it faithfully for six weeks, when I found that my troubles had all disappeared and I seemed like a new man. I have a bottle of Peruna in my grip all the time, and occasionally take a few doses which keeps me in excellent health."—John W. Meng.

THE most common phases of summer catarrh are catarrh of the stomach and bowels. Peruna is a specific for summer catarrh.

Hon. Willis Brewer, Representative in Congress from Alabama, writes the following letter to Dr. Hartman:

His Last Hope Realized.

In the first opening of Oklahoma to settlers in 1889, the editor of this paper was among the many seekers after fortune who made the big race one fine day in April. During his traveling about and afterwards his campaign upon his claim, he encountered much bad water, which, together with the severe heat, gave him a very severe diarrhoea which it seemed almost impossible to check, and along in June the case became so bad he expected to die. One day one of his neighbors bought him one small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic Cholera, and Diarrhoea Remedy as a last hope. A big dose was given him while he was rolling about on the ground in great agony, and in a few minutes the dose was repeated. The good effect of the medicine was soon noticed and within an hour the patient was taking his first sound sleep for a fortnight. That one little bottle worked a complete cure, and he cannot help but feel grateful. The season for bowel disorders being at hand suggests this item. For sale by all Druggists.

Chicago's largest music house, Lyon & Healy, announces a Clearing Sale of Pianos. This is owing to the fact that their warerooms are being entirely remodeled. Several hundred splendid instruments are offered without reserve until all are sold. In this stock are a number of Steinway and Knabe pianos, and new and second-hand pianos including instruments of the following well-known makes: Miller, Mason & Hamlin, Hazelton, McPhail, Sterling, Huntington, Yose, Fischer, Chickering, Weber, etc., etc. In square pianos there are fine-toned instruments at $25 $40, $60; and upwards. In Upright Pianos neat instruments at $100, $120 $140, $150, $165, $180, $200 and upwards. In Baby Grands some nice specimens at $350 and upwards. Nearly all these pianos were intended to sell for much more than these clearing sale prices. Lyon & Healy will send a list and full particulars upon application. Any piano not proving entirely satisfactory may be returned at their expense. Address Lyon & Healy, 1 Adams Street, Chicago. Distance is no obstacle in taking advantage of this remarkable chance to obtain a piano, for in proportion to the saying to be made the freight charges are insignificant. If you do not already know Lyon & Healy by reputation any banker will assure you of their entire responsibility and record of forty years for honorable dealing. Write at your early convenience so as to avoid disappointment.

Although four months away, plans are already well matured for Kentucky's Second Annual State Fair, to be held this year on the splendid Fair Grounds at Owensboro, September 21 to 26.

A contract has already been signed for Kurkemy's Band of forty pieces to play during the entire week. Popular concerts are to be given each day, the band being of such a character as to make these concerts among the most attractive features of the week. During the next week or two, the management of the Fair will be enabled to announce the series of high class and novel amusements which will be furnished while the Fair lasts. The attractions will be different from those ever before offered the patrons of a big State Fair in this part of the United States.

So important is the fair considered by the Railroads that they have already announced a half fare rate from all points in Kentucky, as well as special rates from Tennessee and Southern Indiana.

The Fair is expected to be bigger and better this year than ever before. Premiums aggregating $20,000 will be awarded, and in some cases the premiums will be larger than those offered by any other State Fair in the country. This is notably so in the Jersey rings, where $300 will be awarded the winners. The Association has also set aside $2,000 for the Shorthorn classes, more money than is awarded at any other State Fair except Minnesota. Of this purse $500 will be awarded to Kentucky cattle alone.

The handsome catalogue just issued, 15,000 of them show the important premiums to be as follows:

Beef Cattle—Shorthorns, $2,000, of which $1,000 is given by the Shorthorn Association; Herefords, $1,200 of which $500 is given by the Hereford Association; Aberdeen Angus, $900, of which $300 is given by the Aberdeen Angus Association; Polled Durhams, $650, of which $200 is given by the Polled Durham Association; Galloways, $300; Red Polls, $150.

Dairy Cattle—Jerseys, $800; Holstein Friesians, $250; Ayrshires, $250; Guernseys, $250.

Swine—Berkshires, $300; Poland Chinas, $300; Duroc Jerseys, $250, Chester Whites, $200; Tomworths, $150.

Sheep—Shropshires, $150; Southdowns, $150; Oxford Downs. $150; Hampshire-downs, $150; Cotswolds, $150; Dorsets, 100; American, Marinos, $100; Rambouillets, $100; Cheviots, $100.

For the following classes of horses premiums of $4,000, nearly 25 per cent of the total premium fund are offered:

Light Horses—Light harness horses, roadsters, carriage horses gaited saddle horses, high steppers and ponies.

Heavy Horses—French draft, Percheron, French and German coach, Cleveland bays, Hackney and American coach.

Premiums of $800 are offered for mules and jacks. At the State Fair which was held in Louisville last fall, the breeders of mules and jacks organized a State Association and the Association will look to the success of the exhibit this year. Mules and jacks have not been properly recognized in the State Fairs heretofore, and it is the intention to give them their proper places in the coming exhibitions.

Unusually handsome premiums are offered for garden and farm products and the work of the women in the kitchen and sewing room. Catalogues can be had by addressing, L. B Shropshire, Sec., Room 25 Board of Trade, Louisville, Ky.

The proposition to call the legislature in extra session to provide ways for the suppression of crime in Breathitt county is not worthy of serious consideration. The law and other agencies at the command of the peace officers are sufficient to meet all demands in the case if handled in good faith, but so long as the county judge and sheriff of Breathitt county, are so closely connected with, and interested in the acquittal of those guilty of assassination, so long will it be impossible to punish the assassins. Circumstances connected with the trial of Jett convict County judge Hargis and sheriff Callahan, of Breathitt county, of being deserving of the same punishment as the man who fired the shots that took Marcum's life, and there is no doubt but what Jett was the man.

Judge Walter Evans of the U. S. District Court for Kentucky has decided that Postmasters and their bondsmen are liable for postal money stolen from them. The case arose at Bowling Green, where, in 1900, the postoffice was robbed of $4,500. Judge Evans held in effect that no matter what means postmasters have used to safely secure the funds in their hands, if thesame become lost, they are liable for the full amount. The decision is important to every Postmaster in the United States.

One trouble with the average reformer is that he has no other occupation.

The sixth annual session of the Ohio Valley Masonic Association was held here on the 24th inst., under the most auspicious conditions. The weather was delightful, and the people of Walton handled the affair in the most admirable manner. The crowds of people from an extensive local territory behaved in the most exemplary manner, and remarkable good order prevailed throughout the day. The exercises were interesting, and the addresses of President J. R. Craven, Rev. E. S. Davies, Rev. L. Johnson, Rev. R. Irvin Watkins and John M. Smith, of Carrollton, were enjoyed by the delighted assemblage. Too much credit can not be given the brethren of Walton and Union lodges for the able manner in which the reunion was conducted. Not an angry voice was heard all day. Everybody was in a good humor. The dinner more than met all requirements, there being more than enongh to have fed trebble the crowd. The fraternity can well be proud of the order never before maintained by any other assemblage of half its size in Walton. Not an oath nor a dranken yell disturbed the happy composeure of the meeting. All went merry as a marriage bell, and the sweet strains of the First Regiment O. N. S. Band, at frequent intervals swelled the gale. The musicians seemed carried away with the melody themselves had made. In free converse with the musicians while they waited for the train, they all professed that it was the most re cherche affair in which they ever performed. Nothing occurred to mar the pleasure of the day, except the sudden illness of Mrs. Joseph Ball, of Vera Cruz, who had an attack of heart trouble. It was thought for a while that she would die. Aurora, Indiana, was selected for the 1904 meeting, it being the unanimous choice of the members of the Association.

The bride is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Sansler. She graduated some years ago from Walton Academy, then from Hamilton College, at Lexington, and quite recently from the Kentucky University. The idol of her parents, the peer of her sex, she launches her barque on the matrimonial sea, on which we wish her a pleasant voyage, and hope that her life may be long, happy and useful.

The Heavenly Calling and the Earthly Walk

They Combine to Create the Best Christian Citizenship

FOURTH OF JULY SERMON BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY" PREACHER

(Copyright, 1903, by J. M. Edson.)

Chicago, Sunday, June 28, 1903. Text—"Be ye therefore followers of God. Walk as children of light."—Eph. 5:1 and 8.

DID you ever watch a farmer plow a furrow? With his eye fixed steadily upon a point at the other end of the field he patiently walked behind the plow, guiding its blade with steady hand to turn a straight furrow. He must keep his eye on the fixed point ahead, and he must walk faithfully in the direction to which that point led. The sturdy farmer furnishes us with an illustration which illuminates the meaning of our text. The world as an unplowed field lies before us. If we would turn a straight furrow, we must fix our eye upon God, and walk in the direction which the light which proceeds from Him would indicate. "Followers of God!" Walkers in the light! A Heavenly vision to guide! An earthly experience to test! The Heavenly calling must not so enrapture the soul as to make it forget the earthly walk. The earthly walk must not so occupy the time and attention as to obscure the "high calling of God in Christ Jesus." There is danger in both directions. Scripture which unfolds and emphasizes one aspect of life is too often sought out and dwelt upon to the exclusion of those portions of God's Word which develop and enforce the equally important relation of life in the other direction. The Christian should never sit in "Heavenly places in Christ Jesus," while his feet are withdrawn from contact with the world. Neither should he be a worldly-minded Christian, loving the world and the things of the world, with never a vision of his high calling and destiny.

BOTH these types of Christians are stumbling blocks to the unregenerate soul. The world points its finger of contempt and reproach at the Christian who is all immersed in the earthly walk, whose life belies his profession. It turns with disgust and impatience from the Christian who has grown so pious and Heavenly as to be out of all practical touch with the world and the world's needs, and who has lost all sense of personal responsibility towards the state and nation. It says of one: "A pretty Christian, surely! He is no better than or different from the people who make no profession." It says of the other: "When a person gets so much religion as to be too good for the world, he ought to get out. This religion which sets one in a little I-am-holier-than-thou sphere and severs all obligations of citizenship and responsibility towards the government of state and nation is too exclusive and sanctimonious to be sensible or practical." And these two Christian extremists become stumbling blocks and hindrances to the progress of the Gospel in the world.

WE have been led to select this topic and text for our Independence day sermon, because the tendency on every hand seems to be a distinct separation in thought and practice of Christianity from public affairs and politics in its broadest sense. The world in its progress, and civilization and political evolutions, is moving at a tremendous pace. Life is indeed strenuous. These are conditions which the citizen must face. He cannot frown or argue them down. He must accept the situation and adjust himself to the swift movements of the onrushing world. It will not do to take the governor off the engine. If you do the engine will race to its ruin. It will not do to check it down and lock the steam in the boiler, for the increased pressure which finds no vent will burst the boiler and tear the engine to pieces. It is so in regard to the affairs of men. If the governing hand of God is removed the engine of political, commercial and industrial life will go racing on to certain ruin. If it were possible to check the present tremendous developments in the world the pent-up power would work its own destruction. Both extremes must be avoided if the nations and peoples of the world are to steer a safe course. The greatest peril which this nation has to fear is the indifference or willful neglect of its Christian citizens. We believe there is a tendency in this direction. The nation as a whole is losing its sense of God as a governing and controlling factor in the national life. This modern day materialism is having its narrowing and blighting influence upon the Christian and bringing him to believe that outside of the pale of religion man is able to walk, and think, and plan alone.

BUT neither nations nor individuals can get away from God. Any attempt to do so, any failure to recognize His leading and guiding hand, is attended with disaster. Not only does the eternal word of God declare that, "blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord," and that "righteousness exalteth a nation," but its plain command is that prayers should be offered for kings and all who are in authority, because "there is no power but of God; the powers that be are ordained of God." Our fundamental proposition then is the inseparable connection which God always has with the affairs of nations, and the medium through which He operates is that of human instrumentalities. This being true, the worship and service of God cannot be confined to the meeting-house or the closet, but must extend to political affiliation, the administration of public affairs, and every relation which the citizen is called upon to sustain to the community, city, state or nation. The Christian must be and ought to be the most loyal, faithful and obedient citizen. His religion must not weaken his hand in its grasp of public affairs. It should not lessen his sense of responsibility to help carry the burdens of state. It is a false note in religion which makes a man feel out of tune and out of place at the political gathering and at the polls. The Christian, if he follows God and walks as a disciple of the light, is not led away from active and earnest participation in public affairs and the solving of political questions, but is inevitably placed in close contact with them and filled with God-given zeal and enthusiasm in the working out of the problems which confront him. That preacher in Indiana who recently gave up his pulpit in order that he might fill the position of town policeman and maintain the order of the community, a thing which no one else seemed willing or able to do, was actuated by a Divine impulse, and had a clear conception of the relation which the Christian sustains to the state. The Christian who is willing to enjoy the security, and prosperity, and liberty which his nation affords him, and yet escape the duties and responsibilities of citizenship, is dishonoring God, putting reproach upon the religion which he professes and living a narrow and mean existence.

INDEPENDENCE Day or Fourth of July which this nation celebrates every year in memory of the signing of the declaration of independence and the proclaiming of liberty to the people of the thirteen colonies, is not a religious anniversary day, and has not, therefore, on that grounds any claim upon the Christian for its observation. But upon the Christian citizen it imposes its solemn obligations which in their place and relationship to practical daily life are as important as Christmas or Easter. To think of the Fourth of July in a careless and light vein, to deplore its celebration because it brings with it so much of noise and merry making, is to selfishly disregard the responsibilities and opportunities of the day and to overlook or forget the real purpose of the day and the reason for its appointment. Young America wants to make a noise, of course, and he should be afforded ample and safe opportunity for so doing. But it should not be noise just for the bare sake of noise. It should not be merry making just because you delight in a jolly time. Firecracker and torpedo, cannon and shot-gun, skyrocket, Roman candle and pin-wheel ought to be made to sound forth their message of liberty, and the God-fearing patriotism which moved in the hearts of the revolutionary fathers and steeled them to act for God and home and native land. It is unfortunate that so little of the true patriotic spirit which marked the celebration of the day years ago prevails to-day; yea, it is even alarming. It should be, it must be revived. Here is where the Christian citizen has his obligation and his opportunity. He should become a missionary for that truer, better patriotism which is essential to the perpetuation and strength of the nation. If every Christian who recognizes the command of our text would give thoughtful and prayerful consideration to all that is implied in the following of God and walking as children of light we believe they would come to see that their pathway led through a better celebration of the Fourth of July and not around or over it. And they would know that the day need not and ought not to pass away without the impress of their lives being placed upon it. Here then is the patriotic aspect of the Heavenly calling and the earthly walk.

THE truest patriot which the Jewish nation ever had was Daniel serving faithfully and loyally in the court of the Babylonian king. Following God and walking as a child of light did not lead him to develop such a religious bias as to put him out of touch with the world about him. Rather did it make him a deep student of the political situation which surrounded him. And his masterful grasp of the affairs of state in time gave him the opportunity to preach the true God and true religion not only to the king, but the nation as well. One man following God was able to put the impress of his personality upon the kingdom and rise from slave boy in the heathen court to be prime minister over all that vast realm. Daniel is a most striking type of exalted citizenship. His life is a practical illustration of our text in its reasonable application to the everyday affairs of the community, the state and the nation. I cannot imagine a more difficult place for a young man to have been placed in than that into which Daniel found himself drawn when carried away into captivity. I cannot imagine circumstances which would have afforded better excuse for refusal to recognize the claims of the nation upon him. It would have been most natural and human for Daniel to have reasoned himself into the belief that disloyalty to the heathen king would be loyalty to his God and his own unfortunate nation. But there were three elements in Daniel's character which enabled him to adjust himself most equably and righteously with the conditions surrounding him. As a follower of God he recognized God's absolute sovereignty in both temporal as well as spiritual affairs; he kept his eye steadfastly fixed upon God, and he concentrated his purposes in God. And as a direct result of this threefold relationship to God, his walk among men was marked by a practical contact with them, and consistent and persistent effort in the duties and responsibilities which lay before him.

THE Christian citizen, if he would be a true and loyal patriot, must first of all recognize the sovereignty of God. God's eternal purposes are to be worked out in the world through nations, and individuals in their relations to nations. The religion which leads its followers to withdraw from vital contact with the nation under the misconception that God has abandoned it in its mad rush to ruin might do for angels who move in the higher spiritual realm, but it will not do for man in the world under the present dispensation. It is a mighty uplift to the Christian to realize that the hand of God rests upon the temporal affairs of men and of nations. Daniel might well have reasoned in the face of the continued triumph of the mighty heathen king and the destruction of the Jewish nation that God's hand was not in it all. He might have hung his harp on the weeping willow trees and sat down by the rivers of Babylon and refused to be comforted. But with the recognition of the absolute sovereignty of God he knew that even in the darkest hour of evil's triumph God was moving on, and he determined that he would be one of the channels through which God might work. To-day realization of the sovereignty of God is as necessary as in the days of Daniel.

THIS conception of God and His relations to nations and individuals is the first step in following God. How could one follow God if he were not looking for Him in the places where He is to be found and where He is operating? And the second and third steps naturally follow that of the first. Having gained a true vision of God, the Christian citizen must keep his eye fixed upon Him, and must concentrate his purposes so that he will follow in the direction in which the eyes are turned. In my boyhood days a favorite pastime with us lads was playing follow the leader, and the boy who kept his eye fixed the most steadfastly upon the leader, and keenly followed his every move, was the one who most nearly imitated every action of the leader. When the Christian is commanded to follow God, he must keep his eye upon Him and concentrate his will so as to bring his actions into harmony with that which his heart reveals to him as the right thing to do. I recall that many times some of us boys would fail in following our leader. Sometimes because we took our eyes off him and did not know what he had done, but more often perhaps it was because we did not do that which our eyes told us should be done. We did not concentrate our purposes so as to bring the actions of the body into unison with the vision of the eye. Here is where the majority of Christians fail, I believe, as followers of God. They see clearly but they do not act. The vision is good but concentration of purpose is lacking.

BUT practical contact with the affairs of the world must be marked by consistent and persistent effort. Consistency is declared to be a jewel, and it shines nowhere so bright as in the life of the Christian citizen.

He who walks in the light may not step into the bypaths of questionable conduct to-day and maintain his influence in the pathway of right to-morrow. It is never a question of policy and the least of two evils, but the consistent walking in the pathway which God points out. The vascillating Christian is the one who gets nowhere in this life, and who at the end barely gets into Heaven. But the one who walks as a child of the light travels the pathway of consistency which places his life above reproach. When the enemies of Daniel sought occasion against him and wished to ruin him they were not able to detect the least departure from rectitude or failure to discharge the responsibilities of his important office. Their only hope of entangling him was along the line of his consistent Christian living. And so it ought to be with every Christian.

I remember during the world's fair when those great searchlights sent their intense shafts of bright light skimming over the fair grounds and surrounding country watching with startled interest the sudden revealing of objects and people where there had been nothing but black darkness but an instant before. How sharply everything stood out. The light made conspicuous that which would have been unnoticed before. Think of what our text implies when it tells the Christian to walk as a child of light. In the darkness of the world about him he will shine as a lamp in a dark place. He will be conspicuous, but it will be a conspicuousness which will exalt Christian citizenship and glorify God. "Let us therefore be followers of God, and walk as children of light."

When ignorance keeps peace in the family, it's folly to tell all you know.

The Small Boy's Day

HIS is—
If any one should ask you,
Or even if no one should—
The Day we Celebrate.
That is,
To-morrow is the Day,
But we start in
All or one day previous
So as to be certain
Of good measure.
Don't worry.
Or lose any sleep over it
If no one should ask you—
Never fear.
Every one will find it out.
The man who didn't know
That it was The Fourth
Of July
Would have to be blind
In both eyes,
Deaf in both ears
And lame in his intellect.
To be perfectly safe
It would be well also
For him to be
In darkest Africa
—Xl to have been
Dead ten years.
There is no danger
But people will find it out.
In fact,
Most of them know it now
And those who do not
Are rapidly acquiring
The information.

Along about this time of year
It is one of the
Most obvious facts
Ever brought to the attention
Of a great people,
It is easier than falling
From a bicycle
To know when it is
The Independence day.
All one has to do
Is to remove one's head
From between the pillows,
Take the cotton
Out of one's ears
And listen.
Fourth of July.
Was invented by the Yankees.
The Chinese worked patiently
For many centuries
And invented the firecracker.
Together they make
A great combination,
Also a noise
Which resembles the shot
That was heard round the world,
Only it's louder.

In the olden times
Fourth of July
Was comparatively harmless.
The average boy
Had about five cents
To spend.
That would buy 100 crackers.
After they were touched off
He was through.
Possibly he got up in the morning
And shot off the old musket,
But he was not allowed
To waste ammunition
During the day.
No one was hurt
Unless he ate too much.
Now it is different.
The small boy
Who is not allowed
To have two toy pistols,
One in each hand,
A firecracker between each toe
And a bunch of cannon crackers
To throw into street cars
Thinks he is abused
And that his father
Is not patriotic.

Many years have passed
Since we licked the British
But, say, we did such a job
Of it that we are Obliged to get together
Once every year and Yell!
Our forefathers fought,
Bled and died
That we might shoot fire-crackers
Once a year
Provided we had the money
Or credit
To get them.
They licked the British
So thoroughly
That the latter
Never interfere
With our innocent sports.
And we are at liberty
To shoot off our thumbs,
Ears or toes
To express our feelings.

Then turn the Small Boy loose.
Give him full swing,
And matches,
As well as guns.
Let him enjoy himself
While we
Take to the woods.

DIED ON THE FOURTH.

Three Presidents Have Passed Away on the Birthday of the United States.

Three presidents of the United States died on the Fourth of July, two on its fiftieth anniversary. One was Thomas Jefferson, who 50 years before had signed the Declaration of Independence, and John Adams, who at the same time, had, after a three days' debate, secured the adoption of the Declaration. It might be taken for granted that these two representative men were warm personal friends, even if history were silent upon the subject, which it is not. When Jefferson was dying on that day which he had so signally helped to distinguish, his friend was also breathing his last. Adams did not know of Jefferson's illness, and his last words were: "'Thomas Jefferson still survives;' as if there was consolation in the thought. But his friend had already passed from earth.

President Monroe, whose famous "doctrine" has kept his memory green, also died on the Fourth of July (1831). Of him Jefferson said: "If his soul were turned inside out, not a spot could be found on it." That Monroe, like his distinguished friend and predecessor, should pass away on the anniversary of the independence of the country he served so faithfully, is a touching coincidence.

The first republican vice president of the United States, Hannibal Hamlin, closed his long career on the Fourth of July, 1891.—Detroit Free Press.

Another Impression of America.

"Why is it that Americans are so brave and self-possessed?" asked one European soldier.

"They are accustomed to danger from their earliest infancy," answered the other. "Every year they have an ordeal of fire and explosions, which the youth of the country all attend, something after the manner of certain remote Asiatic tribes. It is better known as the Fourth of July."—Washington Star.

Confirmation.

"I wish to state," said a fresh young lawyer, rising in court, "that the rumor to the effect that John Doe, now under indictment for murder, has attempted to commit suicide has no foundation in fact. I saw him this morning, and he has retained me to defend his life."

"That seems to confirm the rumor," said the judge. "Let the case proceed."—Lippincott's.

Get a "A Book for Women."

FIVE or six years ago, when the rain-making experiments were being conducted, first at Washington, afterward in Texas, my college chum and I became greatly interested in the subject.

We were then sophomores at B. Elementary chemistry was our regular course of study that year, and we spent most of the spring term experimenting on our own account and exploding a vast number of gas balloons.

The spring term closed on June 26, and all the boys went home, except my chum Jarvis and myself, who, in consequence of spending so much time experimenting, had been "conditioned," and had a week's hard work to make up in our Greek.

Rather than have it hanging over us all summer and into the next year, we agreed to do it at once and have done with it. Permission was accorded to us to go on living in our rooms at the hall, and the resident professor in Greek consented to give us an extra examination.

It was dreadfully hot during the last four days of June, but we toiled away with Greek grammar and lexicon, hoping to get home for the Fourth of July; and we should have done so, but our Greek professor ate too much cantaloup on the day set for the examination, and thought for 48 hours he had appendicitis.

It proved to be no such serious trouble, but it hindered our plans. The professor was not able to examine us till the afternoon of the third, so we could not possibly get home for the Fourth.

Jarvis was furious.

"Confound cantaloup!" he grumbled. "And confound a professor that doesn't know better than to eat it! No use to start now. We couldn't get home!" he raged on. "I won't spend the Fourth in a railway car! Let's stay here and shake the old town up! Let's send up a balloon at midnight! We'll make it rain here to-morrow!"

Rather an incendiary sentiment, the reader will say, but we had been shut up with Greek for six long, hot days.

We had access to the laboratory in Chemistry hall, where we had our balloons, and generated the oxygen and hydrogen gas for exploding them.

There was a quantity of cotton cloth, paper and glue, which had not been used; and that evening we made a balloon ten feet in diameter, which we succeeded in charging, outside the window, with oxygen and hydrogen from the laboratory retorts, in the proportion of two to one, that being the formula by which the two gases unite to produce water—and a particular car-splitting explosion.

We finished the balloon, and had the gas generated at a little past 11 o'clock; and then, after charging a large Leyden jar from the static electrical machine, we started out to astonish the quiet little town, and usher in the Fourth of July.

We had a large ball of strong manila twine and a spool of small copper wire, the ends of which were attached for a spark at the base of the balloon.

We led our balloon, like a frisky colt, along the lane at the rear of the chemistry building, and out across the campus to the edge of the pine woods. Then we let it rise.

The night was very dark and still, but clouds had risen in the north and west, and there was a frequent glow of lightning in that quarter.

"There's a shower coming!" Jarvis exclaimed, as the balloon began its ascent. "We shall have to make haste."

But as yet there was not a breath of wind stirring; the balloon had risen and hung directly overhead, and was pulling hard at its restraining string.

We knew from past experience that when the electric spark acted on the two gases the explosion would be something tremendous; but we thought that at a height of 800 or 900 feet, out there by the woods, no damage would follow.

And perhaps none would have followed, if all had gone as we planned, but Jarvis had a great deal of trouble connecting the wires. He was bothering with them for some minutes.

Then suddenly the first gust of the oncoming shower struck us.

What followed came quickly. The balloon swayed over before the wind. Down it bowed until the cord strung out far aslant.

"Good gracious!" I cried, holding hard. "She'll get away from me, Jarvis! Touch her off quick, or she will break away!"

In the darkness we could not see just where the balloon was, or what it was over.

But the next moment we saw! Jarvis had managed at last to connect the wires and touch off the balloon. There came a sudden blaze and a tremendous detonation, as if the whole town had cracked clean down through the center of the earth!

The shock bowled us both over, and we heard a crash of timbers following the report. The thing had exploded about 30 feet over the barn and shed of a worthy inhabitant of B., who lived near the ball grounds, and kept a lazy horse which he hired to the boys at such high prices that they had nicknamed him "Old Gripus."

"We've done it now!" gasped Jarvis, as he scrambled hastily to his feet. "That's Old Gripe's barn!"

But that was not the worst. Shreds of the burning paper and cloth from the balloon must have fallen among hay and straw, for even as we stood staring in that direction a bright flame shot up from the building.

The only thing left us now was to run to the house and shout: "Fire!" That we did with a vengeance, and soon roused the fire department; the new steam engine and two old hand "tubs" responded.

Through their united efforts, aided considerably by the shower which soon began to pour copiously, the old man's house was saved from the fire, but the barn and shed and an old buggy were consumed.

Jarvis and I were greatly worried, and, indeed, were on the verge of honorable confession of our act; but now, I am sorry to say, to our relief, we found that it was the unanimous opinion of every one, including the fire department and the owner himself, that the barn had been struck by lightning! For everybody in town had heard what they believed to be an awful clap of thunder!

Jarvis nudged me in the crowd, and we went home to talk it over. We had very little spare cash, and disliked exceedingly to go home, own up to such a prank, and try to get $250 each from an unsympathetic father.

"Chum," said Jarvis, with a downcast look, "this is a pretty low game, I know, but hadn't we better let well enough alone—for awhile, at least?"

It was a terrible temptation, and I have to confess that, after a great deal of mental agitation, we surrendered to it.

There was $300 insurance on the barn, but the loss was estimated at $500.

We never mentioned the matter to each other during our two remaining years in college, for we were far from rich; yet I knew by the way Jarvis would look at me once in awhile that he was thinking of it, and trying to discern how I felt.

But we said nothing. Directly after our graduation Jarvis went out to Hawaii, and I did not see him for three years; but we wrote every month or two.

I knew that we should have to settle for the damage before we could feel right; still, I did not like to open the subject to Jarvis, for I did not know exactly how he was situated. It transpired that he felt the same way about it as I did; but the sense of dishonor wore him out first.

"I say, Jack," he added, as a postscript to his letter last New Year's day, "Gripe's old barn is pretty heavy on my conscience. Hadn't we better fix that up? In equity it will be a matter of $300, interest and all, which we owe to the Phoenix company, and $260 to Gripus; $325 each. Hadn't we better do it?"

We squared up the long-standing "conscience account" last month; and thus—after six years—ended our effort to make it rain in B. on the night before the Fourth of July.—Youth's Companion.

BEGINS WAR ON MOSQUITOES.

Sheepshead Bay Officials Prepare to Exterminate Insects with Doses of Kerosene.

Mosquitoes hovering near windows of Sheepshead Bay club heard city officials and eminent scientists planning to destroy them with kerosene cocktails and petroleum rickeys. The function at which the officials of the world of science met was called a "mosquito luncheon," and was given under the auspices of William C. Whitney. On account of an engagement in Bronx Mr. Whitney was unable to be present, but was represented by Henry T. MacDonagh, who outlined the work of campaign. By the time the conference was over it was evident there was no valid excuse for the existence of the mosquito and that its days were numbered.

If there remained any doubt in the minds of those present, a walk through the acres of swamps drained by Henry Clay Weeks, an engineer of economics, demonstrated that the insects had no place within a quarter of a mile of Sheepshead Bay in which to bring up their families.

This movement against the culex clan was started by Mr. Whitney, who has a summer home which overlooks the great Futurity track. When the millionaire's acres were freed from the breeding places of the pestiferous tribe, Mr. Whitney contributed several thousand dollars to the general defense fund.

CLAIMS TO RESTORE LIFE.

Dr. Robert Kemp by System of Massage Brings Dead Dogs Back to Life Again.

Raising an interesting question as to when life in animals actually becomes extinct, Dr. Robert C. Kemp, who has been conducting experiments at New York, for two years, has found it possible to restore a dog to life after its heart had stopped beating for 16 minutes. After an examination by surgeons the animal was officially pronounced dead, yet Dr. Kemp, by massaging its heart, so far brought it back to life that it lived 24 hours, and meanwhile it was so far restored to the use of its faculties that it ate and drank and performed its usual functions.

In 11 out of 23 experiments of this character Dr. Kemp has succeeded in "restoring dogs to life," and he is convinced that in the case of human beings under similar conditions the proportion of restorations would be far greater.

In the case of the dogs he ascribes their death, after an interval of from two or three to 24 hours, not to failure of his treatment, for that has apparently been successful, but to the fact that the dogs could not be prevented from tearing away the bandages with which their wounds were bound up.

Only one such experiment has been tried on a human being, and in that case it was not successful.

Kaiser Believes in Love.

"My sons will only marry women they love," Emperor William is reported to have said lately. "They will not marry to please the diplomats nor to satisfy the exigencies of politics. I believe firmly that, like every other individual, they have the right to choose freely their wives, for it is an alliance for life, and their personal happiness is more precious than a momentary phase of statecraft."

Colorado Summer Outings.

The Colorado Flyer, on the Santa Fe, was resumed June 4 for the summer season. This popular train is to run daily between Kansas City and Denver. It will leave Kansas City at 6:55 p. m. and reach Colorado's chief city the next forenoon,—only one night on the way. The equipment of the Colorado Flyer comprises (in addition to standard Pullmans) an observation Pullman, a library-smoking car and chair cars, equalling in many respects that of the California Limited. The Flyer also carries a through Pullman between Galveston and Colorado Springs.

The outlook for summer business to Colorado is very promising. The Santa Fe is extensively advertising its new train, also its regular all-the-year-round Chicago and Denver fast express. Thousands of copies of a profusely illustrated book, entitled "A Colorado Summer," are being distributed by the Santa Fe passenger department; this book tells all about the joys of camping out, hunting, fishing and mountain climbing. You will be surprised to learn for how little money the Colorado tour may be made.

SOUNDS A KEY-NOTE.

President Ford's Speech Before Commercial Convention.

KENTUCKY MUST FORGE TO FRONT.

World's Fair at St. Louis Next Year Offers the State the Opportunity of a Century to Show All the People of the Earth What She Really Is.

During the recent State Commercial convention held in Louisville, one session was devoted exclusively to the work being done by the Kentucky Exhibit Association for adequate representation of the state at the World's Fair in St. Louis. The speech delivered by the President of the Association, Mr. A. Y. Ford, managing editor of the Courier-Journal, was "so full of eloquent facts, so eloquently spoken," as Col. W. C. P. Breckinridge expressed it later in the evening, that we have decided to give it to our readers. In part it is as follows:

The movement for a creditable representation of Kentucky at the great World's Fair, which is to mark the Centenary of the Purchase of the Louisiana Territory, appeals both to business interest and to patriotic sentiment.

It appeals to business interests, because no community more than Kentucky needs to have itself properly advertised to the world, not only for the correction of that false repute into which it has been brought by persistent and long-continued misrepresentation, but because, at this particular juncture in the material development of the country, it finds an unusual opportunity and a pressing necessity to demonstrate to the world of capital and of homeseekers the superior advantages which it offers as an undeveloped State, in which all the essentials of profitable development are to be found.

It appeals to sentiment, because the Kentuckian's characteristic pride in the achievements of the founders of the Commonwealth can find in all the long, illustrious story nothing more fit to inspire it than the part which the men of this State have played in that marvelous national drama of expansion, of which the Louisiana Purchase was a part.

How could Kentucky forego her claim to a share in the glories of a region at whose birth into the Union she stood sponsor, created a part of this homehold of liberty through her instrumentality, peopled largely by her sons, bound to her by the tenderest ties of blood and interest—all in all one of the very richest of the jewels in her crown of Statehood.

A. Y. FORD,
President of the Kentucky Exhibit Association.

But perhaps it is more in keeping with the spirit of an occasion like this to put sentiment to the rear and business considerations to the fore. We hold that Kentucky should be at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition:

Because it has suffered inestimable injury from malicious misrepresentation;

Because it needs to be advertised to the world by something else besides its mountain feuds and its bitter politics;

Because it has been caricatured too long in the general ideal formed of it and deserves to be taken seriously. We like a joke all right, but we don't want it rubbed in too hard;

Because it is an undeveloped State, needing the good-will of investors and homeseekers and having that to offer them that will endure and repay investing;

Because now is the time of times for putting ourselves right and keeping ourselves right before the business world, while this tremendous tide of material development is at its flood and men are seeking on every hand for profitable fields of activity;

Because, through ignorance of our own resources or indifference to them, through lack of enterprise in presenting information about them to those who seek it, we have suffered ourselves to be outstripped as an industrial community by states that could not compare with us in natural advantages.

I know of no State that stands more in need of a protest in the name of truth than Kentucky. I know of no State that has been more persistently and unjustly maligned than Kentucky. I know of no State that has more supinely endured such misrepresentation, recklessly giving fresh occasion for it and careless of its opportunities for displaying its better side.

I am not an apologist for that which is wrong with us, and there is much in present conditions for which we should frankly take shame to ourselves, but the very existence of such things but emphasizes the necessity that we should be up and doing in the cause of our own redemption, to the end that these early glories of the State of which we boast so much may not be dimmed and derided or its future hampered by our duty. No community more than an individual should be oversensitive to just criticism, but unchecked misrepresentation, long enough continued, makes reputation and it has made for us a reputation that has formed a barrier to the proper development of the State. It is a thing to be denied and rebuked with earnestness and dignity at every opportunity, not only as a matter of State pride but as a matter of State welfare.

In all the long roll-call of States not one important State will be missing, not one that can lay any claim to rank as an enterprising Commonwealth. Not one whose growth in wealth and population attests its energy and progressive spirit. There will be aligned the States that stand for progress, for enlightenment, for education, for leadership.

Shall Kentucky eliminate herself from such a company and say to the world that we not only repudiate the work our fathers did in the cause of national expansion, but that we do not care to be ranked among the enterprising States, that we are wedded to our idols and only want the busy world to stand out of our sunlight and let us alone with our mountain feuds, our political quarrels, our undeveloped wealth? That we don't want to be disturbed by the screech of factory whistles, that we don't want locomotives scaring our horses; that we don't want factories spreading soot over the landscape; that we'll keep our coal and our iron and our lead and zinc and fluorspar where they are, for we don't want unsightly holes dug in the ground? What do we care if men with money to invest pass us by for more hospitable States? What do we want with new population; it might complicate the political situation. What need have we for electric traction lines? We've got one or two and the old carry-all will do for a while longer with a new spoke or two and an extra wrap at the start, when the roads are not too bad.

Men of Kentucky, that is the verdict that our indifference to this opportunity would both invite and justify, and it is a verdict that would belie the State and its people. We have a few mosebacks yet, for I doubt not there were even thorn bushes in the Garden of Eden. We have people left who are comfortable only when jogging along in the well-worn ruts.

A reasonable State pride is well enough, but a State pride that does not express itself in emulative deeds is a hybrid thing, more flourish and strut and silly pretense, gaining nothing but ridicule, and I fear that with some of our good people State pride has ossified into mere self-complacency, with the conviction that whatever is is all right and that any suggestion of improvement is a suggestion of disloyalty.

And yet there is work to be done. For Kentucky is an undeveloped State with rich resources, and whatever stands in the way of the development of those resources—whether it be unwise laws, whether it be our own ignorance of these resources, or whether it be indifference at home and ignorance and misconception abroad—must be swept aside.

With the largest known area of coking coal in the world, we produce only fourtenths of one per cent. of all the coke produced in the United States and, though we are now rapidly increasing our product, we yet rank only ninth as a coke producer, being in this respect outranked even by Massachusetts, which has no coking coal at all, but must bring it all from Nova Scotia.

With practically the same coal area as West Virginia, we mine annually only one-fourth as much coal. With twice the coal area of Alabama, we mine annually only about one-half as much coal.

With splendid timber at our very doors, we send it North to be made into furniture and other articles and be shipped back to us.

With a splendid stock raising country about us, the annual product of our butchering and meat packing establishments is little more than one-tenth that of Indiana.

With vast fields of natural oil, we are only just beginning to develop them and have as yet not a single petroleum refinery in the State.

With a large part of our State so thickly populated as to invite the construction of interurban traction lines, we have only three such lines in operation, with a total of less than 40 miles of track, while our neighboring State of Indiana is already a net-work of interurban lines.

With twenty-eight counties wholly untouched by steam railways and others that are barely skirted by them, we built only 132 miles of railway from 1890 to 1900 and in 1901 only 33 miles, though the total new construction in the South in the decade was 1,530 miles, and in the United States 4,453 miles.

With vast deposits of iron ore, we have declined as a producer of pig iron, and in 1901 produced only a pitiful 28,000 tons, against Alabama's more than 1,200,000 tons. Yet twenty-five years ago the pig iron production of the two States was about equal.

In iron and steel manufactures, though our actual output has increased, our rank among the States has declined from seventh in 1870 to eleventh in 1880 and thirteenth in 1900, though we have improved our rank in the past ten years, having stood only sixteenth in 1890. In spite of the natural resources and advantages that should make us a great iron and steel State, we are out-ranked by such States as Maryland, Indiana and New Jersey, which can not compare with us in such advantages.

With vast deposits of the finest clays, whose value is becoming known to the trade and which we are at last, especially in Eastern Kentucky, beginning to appreciate and to develop, we still rank no better than fourteenth as a producer of clay products. Our improvement is shown by the fact that we ranked only twenty-second in 1890.

After having been all this time in ignorance of the fact that we had valuable deposits of lead and zinc and fluorspar, we are just beginning the profitable development of these deposits—material that the commercial world needs and will pay a good price for.

With all the facilities and advantages that invite profitable manufacturing we have only within the past few years begun to make real progress as a manufacturing State. In all the essentials of abundant and accessible raw materials, cheap and inexhaustible fuel, splendid transportation facilities, nearness to great markets, being within a short distance of the center of population, cheap and intelligent labor, and favorable climate, we yet rank only eighteenth as a manufacturing State.

I cite these facts in no spirit of detraction, but in support of my statement that Kentucky is an undeveloped State. I cite them in no spirit of discouragement, but rather to indicate the splendid field in which we have to labor and the possible results that will only upon our will. I cite them in no spirit of disloyalty to the State we love, but rather because I would see it make greater haste toward that goal of material prosperity that is so easily within its reach.

I do not believe that I overestimate either the value of this Exposition as a place for exploiting our State, or the necessity of thus advertising it. In this I am vindicated by the judgment of many Kentucky firms, which will spend thousands of dollars upon exhibits to advertise their own enterprise. I am vindicated also by the fact that every civilized nation on earth is preparing to be represented and that Florida seems likely to be the only one of all our own States and territories that is not alive to the opportunity. You will observe that I am counting Kentucky in the list of progressives, for Kentucky must be there. It is to be the largest World's Fair yet attempted, covering nearly twice the area of the Chicago World's Fair, and backed by nearly $20,000,000 of capital. Conditions—by—upon Kentucky the most urgent injunction to make the most of the opportunity here afforded to put before the world her invitation to those men of brain and brawn and capital who build up the industries of a great State.

It is the purpose of the Kentucky Exhibit Association to extend that invitation in a practical way—to demonstrate by striking displays and by every possible means of information the commercial value of Kentucky's resources and its advantages as a location for commercial and industrial enterprises.

W. T. Kane of Fallsburg is arranging an exhibit of Angora goat fleeces for the Kentucky display. He writes that he can furnish alfalfa grown 1,840 feet above the sea level.

Burlington's third nine of ball tossers went to Bellevue, last Saturday, and were defeated by a score of 9 to 8.

The admirers of base ball are anticipating two good games, here next Saturday between the Boones and the Petersburg team.

It was not quite warm enough, last Saturday for the ice cream and lemonade departments at a picnic to be excessive revenue producers.

The game of base ball played here last Saturday afternoon by the Boones and a picked nine was decidedly close and well played for six innings, after which the Boones got to doing some excellent stick work, and won the game by a score of 12 to 3.

A young man named Highhouse met with quite an accident on his way to the festival at Geo. Youell's, last Saturday night. His horse threw him, one of his arms becoming entangled in the bridle reins while one foot hung in a stirrup. Before he could get loose he was dragged a considerable distance and his face was badly lacerated.

An automobile coming into town last Saturday morning, scared William Houston's horse which was grazing on the side of the pike near the toll-gate, and it came into town at the top of its speed, pursued by the auto, and in attempting to turn a corner to give the machine a clear track it got a hard fall, causing another horse to break its bridle. Fortunately the horse was not hurt.

There is considerable excitement in Plattsburg neighborhood because of the appearance of smallpox there. Mrs. Ethel Waford visited hersister-in-law, Mrs. Hewitt, at Addyston, Ohio, where she contracted the disease which developed after her return home. She had a light case, and it was hoped there would be no more, but last week her brother, Leslie Sebree, took it and the citizens of the neighborhood are very uneasy for fear that members of other families may contract the disease, and several cases be developed before it is stamped out. Dr. W. A. Clore, health officer, of Bullittsville, is attending the patients and will do all in his power to prevent its spread.

The Boone County Teacher's Institute will convene at Burlington Aug. 3, at 9:30 a. m., continuing five days, conducted by Superintendent and teachers. We will use the Syllabus arranged by the State Board, but will discuss any matter apart from Syllabus that is practical and desired by the assembly. The law makes it obligatory upon all who purpose teaching to attend the entire session, or file a lawful excuse for such nonattendance. I trust the teachers will be punctual and faithful to duty from love of the work, rather than because it is mandatory. Trustee's hour, Friday afternoon, will be devoted to the discussion by trustees and teachers of any subjects that will redound to the interest of the cause. Commencement exercises on Thursday evening, program arranged by President of Alumni. After evening exercises "Welcome Address by D. E. Castleman." Friends of education are earnestly solicited to be present, especially, school officials

The colored people who expected to have such a glorious fourth of July in Commissary grove allowed their patriotism to subside several days ago. That is the flickered, and left unpaid some bills they had contracted.

While in Dalton I promised to write something about our country. We are located one mile west of Spring Place, county seat of Murray county. Spring Place deserves its name from the many springs in and around the town.

Murray county is mostly level with the Cohutta mountains running through the eastern part. On one of the peaks is a strong fort built of stone, and we have no history telling who built it. On another peak, six miles east of Spring Place, are the gold mines, which are being operated by people of this place and Dalton, having $1,000,000 interested in them. The Cherokee Indians had possession of this part of the State until 1838, in which year they were moved to the Indian Territory. The Cheak House at the Spring Place, a three story brick has the finest wood work I eversaw, and the oldest settlers here do not know when it was built. It is supposed the wood work came from England.

Spring Place has three churches, Baptist Methodist and Presbyterian; a large, two-story school house; one flour mill with 300 barrel capacity, running three days in each week for the farmers.

We have some very fine marble, and of it some of the finest buildings in the United States are constructed. For instance: State Capitol, Minn.; Capitol Rhode Island; St. Lukes Hospital, N. Y.; U. S. Government building in Boston; the Art Gallery in Washington, D. C.

All kinds of fruit do well here except tropical fruits. I was in a peach orchard of 700 acres not long since. I have the report of the Commissioner of Agriculture for 1902, which reports commercial orchards of more than 7,000,000 peach trees and about 2,000,000 apple trees in Middle and in northern Georgia. I heard an old citizen say not long since that corn will never be cheap again, because of the farmers planting so much land in fruit.

We have all kinds of timber that I ever saw. The soil around the Springs is mostly red lime stone, and is adapted to corn, wheat, cotton and grass.

We have fine hunting. There are rabbits, quail, turkeys, and some deer in the mountains Your Boone boys who like to fish and hunt should come down. We have organized a fishing club, bought a 50 foot sein, and catch in Consoga river all the fish we want and have some to spare.

We had a long wet spell and our farmers are busy in their corn and cotton. Wheat and rye are cut and ready to thresh, Irish potatoes are matured and about ready to dig. We plant a second crop for market and home use.

Several families from different parts of the country have located here recently, and a man from Illinois and one from North Carolina are here prospecting. There is enough land in our county for as many more farmers as we now have.

I will close. I must admit that I am a little homesick to see the good people of Boone county, but do not want to move back. We have a fine climate, pure water, are 800 feet above sea level making this a healthy and most desirable place to live.

JOHN L. ROUSE.

An effort is being made in the Burlington school district to raise $500 with which to supplement the public funds and increase the next term of school to eight months. A Mr. Hughes, who has been teaching at Dry Ridge, Grant county, was here a few days since, and applied for the school. He is recommended to the patrons of the school here by Prof. Newton, of Crittenden, which accounts very largely for the interest that his visit here created in school circles. If the effort to raise the amount necessary to secure an eight months term of school is successful, it will be conclusive proof that interest in education is not entirely wanting at the county seat. The district is able to employ a good teacher for the time specified, and the money spent will be well used, if the services of good teachers are secured.

Mrs. Elizabeth Bruce, widow of the late R. E, Bruce, died of a complication of diseases, June 27th, aged 83 years and 7 days. The funeral and interment took place at Florence, at 11 a. m. last Friday, in the presence of her descendants and friends Mrs. Bruce was married three times, her first husband being the father of John W. Hogan, of Gunpowder neighborhood, and her second husband was Milton Scott, father of Mrs. A. W. Smith, of Walton. A good old lady has gone to her reward.

KENTUCKY FEUD TROUBLES.

Gov. Beckham Scores His Critics in a Statement.

Frankfort, Ky., June 27.—Gov. Beckham, in response to a great many requests, Friday gave out a long statement in regard to the Kentucky feud troubles. In it he caustically scores his critics. He says the constitution limits the executive's acts and he has no powers to oust judges. He suggested that Judge Redwine transfer the Jett and White cases, but could not insist when he refused to do so.

The governor scores the newspapers for telling him what he should do and declares the criticisms have not swerved him. He can not declare martial law and court-martial the prisoners. Republicans who harrassed William Goebel, he says, now howl about the troubles in Breathitt county, and still defend assassins. Democrats, he says, will punish all the criminals and adds:

"I do not speak of the mass of the republicans of Kentucky, who, I believe, do not approve of crime and lawlessness of any kind, but I refer to those whose hitterness and malignancy would place upon me the responsibility of the condition of affairs in Breathitt, where I have endeavored with all the power in my hands to restore peace in that county."

POSTMASTER GENERAL PAYNE.

The President Has Absolute Confidence in Him.

Washington, June 27.—"The president has absolute confidence in Postmaster General Payne and has no thought that he will leave the cabinet," said Senator Hanna Friday after an extended visit to the white house. He added: "The president is satisfied with the work Mr. Payne is doing and appreciates his integrity and executive ability. Mr. Payne has no thought of resigning, but if he did, his resignation would not be accepted by the president."

Senator Hanna said it was unfortunate that Mr. Payne's health was so poor and that he could not go away and recuperate because his presence is needed in Washington at this time.

THE KISHINEFF AFFAIR.

Russia Intimates That She Will Brook No Interference.

In Returning the Petition Officials Will Assure Mr. Riddle That Russia Cherishes No Ill Will Towards the United States.

Washington, June 27.—The Russian government has learned with profound regret of the intention of the Washington authorities to forward to St. Petersburg a petition from American Jews relative to Russia's treatment of her Jewish subjects. It is yet hoped that the United States will appreciate the Russian view of the case and will content itself with the kindly expressions of sympathy which it has already offered for the affair at Kishineff. The Russian position regarding what is considered outside interferences in the internal affairs of Russia has already been stated. That position continues to be held and Mr. Riddle, the American charge, when he presents the petition at the Russian foreign office will be received with the same cordiality always accorded an American envoy. In returning the petition to Mr. Riddle, the officials will assure him that Russia cherishes no ill will towards the United States and that the action it takes with respect to the petition is necessary in view of Russia's unalterable policy of refraining from interference in the internal affairs of other powers and insisting on similar treatment for itself.

The Russian government hopes its firmness in the matter will not be misunderstood, but in view of the announcement of its position weeks ago, is surprised at the developments which will force a reiteration of its views. Mr. Riddle, it can be stated, will be subject to no personal embarrassment in presenting the petition and he will be given to understand that the St. Petersburg authorities appreciate the fact that he is only carrying out his orders. Should the presentation of the petition be deferred until the return to St. Petersburg of Mr. McCormick, the American ambassador to Russia, the same program will obtain unless in the meantime the Russian government is made aware of extenuating circumstances, which puts the matter in a different light. Indeed, it is declared Russia would be glad to do anything possible to relieve the tension in the United States, but feels unable to sacrifice a principle which it has followed hitherto and the American support of which it has warmly endorsed.

The Russian government readily admits the sincerity of the American government's decision and declines to listen to reports that the forwarding of the petition has any ulterior significance or is in any way associated with any other matters.

THE WAGE SCALE.

Settlement Between Alabama Operators and Miners in Sight.

Birmingham, Ala., June 27.—A settlement on a wage scale between operators and miners is now in sight. The operators have made an offer of 2½ per cent. per ton on both the maximum and minimum wage scales of the miners with a corresponding increase in day labor and dead work. The only difference compared to the present scale is that iron at $12 is made the basis instead of $11.

The miners went into executive session after receiving the offer to discuss the same and there are probabilities that it will be accepted with some minor changes.

MURDERED IN CHURCH.

John Hawker Was Stabbed to Death at Moccasin, Ill.

Springfield, Ill., June 27.—John Hawker, of Moccasin, was murdered in church Thursday night and a posse of citizens are on the trail of the murderer. Hawker had been attending services at the Moccasin church, and after the services were concluded and the lights had been extinguished he was heard to remark: "Where was Moses when the light went out?" The next heard was a groan from Hawker as some one stabbed him to the heart with a knife.

THE BURNING OF WHITE.

Thousands Visited the Scene of the Execution at Wilmington.

Wilmington, Del., June 29.—Thousands of persons Sunday visited the place where George F. White, a Negro, was burned at the stake by a mob of 4,000 persons for brutally assaulting and stabbing to death Miss Helen S. Bishop, the 17-year-old daughter of Rev. E. A. Bishop. They came from all the small towns in this vicinity and hundreds journeyed to the execution place from Chester, Pa., and Philadelphia. A trolley line runs to about three-quarters of a mile from the scene and bus drivers and others owning vehicles did a thriving business carrying passengers to the place and explaining to them the events of the last two weeks. The burning took place in a freshly ploughed field, about 50 feet from the roadway, which is hidden by high brushes. The field has been trampled almost as smooth and hard as asphalt by the thousands who have visited the farm.

The only evidence that remains of the work of the mob are three cobblestones, on one of which this inscription has been placed in indelible ink: "Here is all that remains of White."

The bushes, behind which the murder was committed, have been cut down for a distance of several yards and carried away by relic hunters. Many of those who visited the scene Sunday, among them a large number of women, carried away a sprig or branch of the bushes.

Discussion of the events of the last week is rapidly ending, although the affair was the text of some clergymen Sunday. The preachers without exception condemned the lynching notwithstanding the fact that public sentiment is overwhelmingly on the side of the lynchers. Rev. Robert A. Elwood, the Presbyterian minister, who has come in for much criticism for his sermon of last Sunday night in which he suggested lynching in case the Negro escaped speedy punishment at the hands of the law, did not refer to the lynching or the criticism Sunday. These criticisms were answered by his congregation Sunday by resolutions passed sustaining their pastor. They say:

"We record our belief that his message of last Sunday evening was both timely and true, sensible and scriptural, and in nowise can the actions of the citizens on Monday night be chargeable to that sermon."

Wilmington, Del., June 29.—Rev. Montrose W. Thornton, pastor of the First A. M. E. church of Wilmington, preached to a large congregation Sunday night. He said, in part:

"The white man in face of his boasted civilization stands before my eyes to-night the demon of the world's races, a monster incarnate; and in so far as the Negro is concerned seems to give no quarter. The white is a heathen, a fiend, a monstrosity before God, and is equal to any act in the category of crime. I would sooner trust myself in a den of a hyena than in his arms. With a court, law and officers of law in his hands, the despised Negro can expect no mercy, justice or protection. The Negro is unsafe any where in this country. He is the open prey at all times of barbarians who know no restraint and will not be restrained.

"There is only one part left for the persecuted Negro when charged with crime and when innocent. Be a law unto yourself. You are taught by this lesson of outrage to save yourself from torture at the hands of the bloodseeking public. Save your race from insult and shame. Be your own sheriff, court and jury as was the outlaw Tracy. Die in your tracks, perhaps drinking the blood of your pursuers. Booker T. Washington's charity, humanity, advice of forgiveness, love, industry, and so on, will never be reciprocated by white men."

The Situation Is Grave.

London, June 29.—A dispatch from Vienna to the Morning Leader says the situation in the Vilayet of Adrianople is very grave. There are many indications that Bulgaria and Turkey regard an outbreak of war as a probable contingency.

In a State of Eruption.

THE AMERICANS DINED

Emperor Williams Entertained Officers of United States Fleet.

President Roosevelt Received a Message From the Emperor In Regard to the Neatness of the United States War Vessels.

Kiel, June 26.—The emperor gave a dinner Thursday night on the Hohenzollern to Adm. Cotton, the American captains, Ambassador Tower, United States Naval Attache Potts and all the other members of the United States embassy staff, Prince Henry of Prussia, the German admirals and the other members of the imperial party and Chancellor Von Buelow, who is recovering from a sharp gastric attack and who came here from Berlin to be present at this and at Ambassador Tower's dinner Friday.

Washington, June 26.—President Roosevelt Thursday received a cablegram from Emperor William thanking him for sending the American squadron to Kiel and congratulating him on the neat appearance of the vessels.

Kiel, Prussia, June 27.—The dinner given by United States Ambassador Tower to the German emperor Friday night was made the opportunity, both by the emperor and the ambassador, to utter speeches of political significance.

Mr. Tower proposed the health of the German emperor, the empress, the crown prince and the members of the imperial family.

Emperor William Friday night for the first time saw the flag of the president of the United States, which formed part of the decorations of the banqueting room in the yacht club house, where Ambassador Tower's dinner was given.

After dinner the emperor walked to the Hotel Seebade Anstalt, which is near the yacht club, and sat with Ambassador Tower and the others on the veranda for an hour.

Prince and Princess Henry gave a large garden party Friday afternoon which was attended by all the American naval officers who could get leave and those civilian Americans visiting Kiel. The prince and princess, as the line of guests defiled past them, picked out the Americans and stepped forward and shook hands with each. The emperor and empress returned from the yacht racing in time to attend the party. Prince Henry presented Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt to their majestics and the emperor conversed with Mrs. Vanderbilt. The emperor and empress moved about the grounds freely, stopping to talk with those they knew.

Washington, June 27.—President Roosevelt sent a telegram of thanks to Emperor William in reply to the latter's message regarding the American squadron now at Kiel.

Kiel, June 29.—The emperor's yacht Meteor crossed the line first in Sunday's race for cruising schooners, class A, and kept the lead all the way over the 30 mile course, beating the Hamburg in a ten-knot breeze, by 1½ minutes. The Empress' yacht Iduna was again 20 minutes behind.

Emperor William had aa his guests on board the Meteor during the races United States Ambassador Tower, Prince Henry of Prussia, Prince Adelebert, the emperor's son, Count Tielewenckler, Count Redern and United States Naval Attache Potts. The emperor was quite a different man aboard the yacht than when aboard the battleship, talking about yachting and sporting matters the whole time. When lunch time came his majesty helped each member of the party and himself from the large cold dishes provided and Prince Adelebert photographed the group.

R. W. Goelet's Swan, in the race for yachts of her class, finished 3½ minutes ahead of Gustav Stinne's Glueckauf, but had to take second place under the handicap, which gave the latter 4½ minutes' time allowance. The Betty VII. was third.

In the cutter yawl race the Navahoe easily disposed of her only competitor, the Comet. The Therese unexpectedly beat the Commodore, and the big English schooner Cicely turned the tables on Herr Guilleaume's Clara, which won on Friday. The Cicely finished three minutes ahead but the Clara protested owing to the Cicely carrying only one anchor, where as under German rules two are necessary.

In handicap match for cruisers the Irion, giving the Navahoe a minute and a half and the Comet 10 minutes' time allowance, won by two minutes from the Navahoe. The Comet was nowhere.

There has been nothing whatever to complain of regarding the behavior of the American sailors who have been allowed ashore. They are welcomed along the water front, and shops and restaurants are engaging interpreters for their convenience. Signs are displayed every where, "Americans are Welcome to Kiel." The American tars cause considerable wonderment to the Germans by driving around in carriages and cabs; at least half of Kiel's limited supply of these vehicles are thus nightly employed.

ON HIS VACATION.

The City Tourist in the Country Comes Upon a New Kind of Bee.

The summer tourist, being engaged in some naturalistic pursuits, came upon a bee which sat leisurely on a blade of grass and seemed perfectly unconcerned, relates Judge.

"How now?" quoth the summer tourist. "This belies all I have read about the busy bee."

"What does?" asked his guide.

"Why, that bee on that blade of grass has been sitting there all morning, evidently, and still gives no sign of intending to go to work."

"Oh, he doesn't have to go to work for some time yet," explained the guide.

"He doesn't? What variety of bee is he?"

"That's what they call the husking bee. He won't have anything to do until next fall."

A Woman's Back.

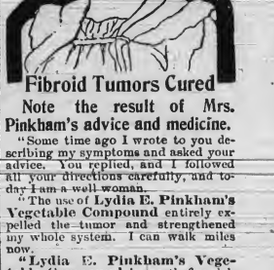
Dublin, Mich., June 29th.—To the many women who suffer with weak backand pains and tired feelings in the small of the back, the experience of Mrs. Fred Chalker of this place will be interesting and profitable.

Mrs. Chalker had suffered a very great deal with these back pains and although she had tried many things, she could find nothing that would relieve her. The pain kept on in spite of all she could do.

At last she chanced to read the story of another lady who had suffered with the backache, and said she had been cured by a remedy called Dodd's Kidney Pills, and Mrs. Chalker thought she would try the same thing.

After the first two boxes had been taken according to directions, she began to feel some better, and she kept on till at last she was cured.

Her pains are all gone, and she is very grateful. She says: "Dodd's Kidney Pills helped me greatly, and I will always recommend them as a cure for Pain in the Back."



Natural Misgiving.

"I cud finish de churnin' after me breakfast, mum. Dis work gives yer an appetite fer breakfast."

"Yes, but I'm afraid breakfast may not give you an appetite for work."—Puck.

"Yes, since Mr. Gotrox broke a mirror yesterday, he is convinced that it is very unlucky." "How superstitious!" "Not at all. It was a French plate mirror, and cost $400."—Baltimore News.

Fibroid Tumors Cured

Note the result of Mrs. Pinkham's advice and medicine.

"Some time ago I wrote to you describing my symptoms and asked your advice. You replied, and I followed all your directions carefully, and today I am a well woman.

"The use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound entirely expelled the tumor and strengthened my whole system. I can walk miles now.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is worth five dollars a drop. I advise all women who are afflicted with tumors or female trouble of any kind to give it a faithful trial."—(Signed) Mrs. E. F. Hayes, 252 Dudley St., (Roxbury) Boston, Mass. —$5000 forfeit if original of above letter proving genuineness cannot be produced.

Mountains of gold could not purchase such testimony — or take the place of the health and happiness which Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound brought to Mrs. Hayes.

Such testimony should be accepted by all women as convincing evidence that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound stands without a peer as a remedy for all the distressing ills of women; all ovarian troubles; tumors; inflammations; ulceration, falling and displacement of the womb; backache; irregular, suppressed or painful menstruation. Surely the volume and character of the testimonial letters we are daily printing in the newspapers can leave no room for doubt in the minds of fair people.

J. P. M'CANN'S DEATH.

F. Seymour Barrington Charged With His Murder.

James P. McCann, the Victim, Was of a Prominent Kentucky Family, and Lexington His Home—Body Will Be Interred There.

St. Louis, June 29.—Beside a pool of water in an abandoned quarry, near Bonfil's Station, on the St. Louis, St. Charles & Western railroad, 12 miles west of the city limits, was found Saturday by J. B. Lucas the body of Jas. P. McCann, a former owner of race horses, who lived at No. 2902 Franklin avenue, and, in connection with whose disappearance on June 13 "Lord" Barrington was arrested Thursday night by the police and subsequently released. "Lord" Barrington has been arrested again by the St. Louis police.

The body was entirely naked, and, from all appearances, death had resulted from drowning.

Special Officer Gratiot Cabanne discovered the dead man's shoes about one-quarter of a mile from the place where lay the body. About 100 yards from the body was found McCann's pocketbook, containing only four car tickets. These articles have been positively identified by Mrs. McCann as the property of her husband.

A warrant was sworn out Sunday by Mrs. James P. McCann, charging F. Seymour Barrington with the murder of her husband, James P. McCann.

As the alleged crime was committed in St. Louis county, the police Sunday gave Barrington over to Sheriff Hanhon. The prisoner was taken to Clayton and placed in jail.

The body of the man supposed to be McCann, which was buried soon after its discovery at Bonfils, was exhumed Sunday and an inquest was held by Coroner Koch, of St. Louis county. The features were gone owing to the ravages of vermin. Notwithstanding Mrs. McCann positively identified the body as that of her husband, partly basing the identification on a gold tooth. Others, who knew McCann intimately, also identified the body.

Coroner Koch made a rigid investigation and returned a verdict that two bullet holes were found in the head and the bullets extracted correspond in size with the revolver found in Barrington's trunk at the Union station Saturday night. The coroner also found a deep gash in the throat and a cut in the palm of the right hand, leading to the assumption that the man had been attacked first with a knife and in defending himself had seized the blade which cut deeply into the hand, that finally his throat had been cut deeply and he was ultimately shot twice in the head. Barrington still asserts his innocence.

Lexington, Ky., June 29.—James P. McCann, who was murdered in St. Louis, was of a prominent Kentucky family and Lexington was his home. His father was a wealthy farmer and horse breeder of this county. Two sisters live near this city, and Sunday afternoon B. T. Hume, a brother-in-law, left for St. Louis, his purpose being to bring the remains to Lexington for interment. Though McCann had been missing since the 18th, no word of it had reached the sisters, and the first information they had that he had been murdered was from the morning papers. McCann's wife was a Miss Callaway, of Owensboro, Ky. Two weeks ago he sent his sisters photographs of himself, his wife and F. S. Barrington, the bogus English lord who is held in connection with the murder. He is said to have been devoted to his wife, and relatives here believed her to be worthy in all respects. His first wife was a Miss Johnson, who secured a divorce some years ago. McCann was then quite wealthy but is said to have lost much of his property in dealing in race horses.

THREATENED LYNCHING.

A Ball Player Hit Another Over the Head With a Bat.

Salt Lake, Utah, June 29.—A lynching was narrowly averted during the baseball game between the Ogden and Salt Lake teams at Ogden Sunday afternoon. In the sixth inning Marshall, of the Salt Lake team, and Hausen, pitcher for Ogden, became involved in a quarrel during which Marshall hit Hausen over the head with a bat, seriously injuring him. There was great excitement among the spectators who swarmed into the field, threatening to lynch Marshall, who was hustled from the grounds and lodged in jail. Hausen was taken to the hospital. After the excitement had somewhat abated the game proceeded.

TRAIN WRECKED IN SPAIN.

Ninety Persons Were Killed and One Hundred Injured.

Madrid, June 29.—Fourteen bodies and 50 injured persons have been extricated from the wreck of the Bilboa train which overturned at Nejerilla river Saturday night.

The latest dispatches from Sarzgossa, near which place the catastrophe occurred, give the number of dead as 90 and the injured as 100. The rescue of the injured from the debris is not completed.

The train fell 50 feet from the bridge to the river bed, the coaches piling up in a mass of splintered wood and iron work. The scene is described as horrifying. Many corpses were carried down the stream, which was actually reddened with blood. It was found impossible to extricate numbers of the injured, who were pinioned under the wreckage. A railway guard was arrested in the act of robbing the dead and narrowly escaped lynching.

It is believed that the official figures underestimate the number of killed some accounts giving the number of dead as 100. The full extent of the catastrophe will only be known when the wreckage has been cleared away.

EXPLOSION IN A MEXICAN MINE.

Twenty-Four Miners Killed and About Fifty Seriously Wounded.

Barratoeran, Coahuila, Mex., June 29.—Twenty-four miners were killed and about fifty others seriously wounded in an explosion of gas that occured Thursday night in Las Eperanzas coal mines, the property of the Mexican Coal and Coke Co. The disaster was caused by the ignition of gas by the flame from a defective lamp. The men were on the point of quitting work for the day. Probably 100 men were in the mine at the time of the explosion. After the shock of the explosion those who were able to move rushed for the exits, but the falling earth and debris carried many down to death. Fully 50 miners escaped with broken limbs and scorched flesh. At last reports the dead bodies of 24 men had been brought to light. Others may die as a result of their injuries.

WERE SUSPICIOUS OF BANKS.

Robbers Broke Into Their House and Robbed Them of $4,000.

Little Valley, N. Y., June 29.—Robbers broke into a farm house two miles from Limestone Saturday night and robbed James and Patrick Quinton, who lived there alone, of $4,000. The Quintons, who are bachelors, were known to be suspicious of banks and kept their house barricaded against robbers. The intruders set fire to a mass of rubbish in the yard and when the brothers opened the door to run to the fire, the robbers hit James on the head, knocking him unconscious. The other brother is a cripple. Both were bound and were not able to release themselves until Sunday.

PILFERING MAIL BOXES.

When Devine was searched one of the numerous decoy letters sent through the mail by the inspectors was found on him. Devine will be taken to Lancaster for a hearing Monday.

LABOR WAR IN NEW YORK.

The Employer and Employe Seem Still to Be Far Apart.

New York, June 29.—Employer and employe in New York's labor war seem still to be far apart. Through neglect or misunderstanding the plan of the conciliation committee of the Civic Federation to bring the contending forces together has made no progress. The employers say they will not permit work to be resumed until the unions have signed their arbitration plan, while the union men say they will not consider arbitration until work is resumed under the conditions which prevailed before the strike and lockouts were declared.

FRAUDS IN POST OFFICE.

Their Magnitude Is Far Beyond What Is Given Out by Republican Authorities.

The post office department should be run on a business basis so that the people everywhere would have the best service for the vast amount of money that is expended. The investigation now going on shows that the republican plan has been to make the department a political machine to aid republican candidates and pack caucuses and conventions in the interest of those who are for the time in charge. Postmaster General Payne was selected by the president not as the most competent man, but as the most adroit and dexterous machine politician available, and he has been looked upon as the political manipulator of the administration. No credit is due to him for the exposure of the rotten conditions that prevail in his department. He has persistently made light of the charges that have resulted in the revelations that have so far reached the public. His confidential secretary is charged with being mixed up in the scandals and Mr. Payne is evidently shielding him from being included in the investigation that is still in progress. How far the probe will reach is still a question and depends upon the president. He has the power to go to the root of the matter, whoever is hurt. That behind the small fry who have so far been caught in the investigation net, there are other and larger fish is apparent. The New York World in this connection says:

"Behind Beavers and Machen it seems to be clearly established that there were men 'higher up,' leaders in the senate and house, who were using them as tools to exploit the postal service for their own political ends. The fact that the total annual expenditure for rural free delivery service was less than $50,000 in 1897, is now $12,000,000 and will be, it is estimated, $24,000,000 a year when it is fully expanded, indicates what a magnificent field for loot and blackmail it offers to corrupt officials working in collusion with self-seeking senators and congressmen. The public has a right to know the whole truth. The statesmen now dimly discerned in the background, working the rural free delivery system as a patronage mill and incidentally as a political bureau, must be brought to the front. Mr. Roosevelt's plain duty to the country is to force Mr. Payne, no matter how powerful the influences may be that seek to smother this manifestly far-reaching scandal, to live up to the historic mandate, 'Let no guilty man escape.'"

If President Roosevelt decides to push the investigation, no matter who is caught in the dragnet and will see that those in charge make it thorough and complete, he will have to give the important matter considerable personal attention. The obstacles in the way are powerful and far-reaching and may involve the disruption of the cabinet and the shattering of the political machine that is expected to have charge of the national campaign soon to be inaugurated. It appears that the president was informed, more than a year ago, that the post office department was honeycombed with fraud, but he was assured by the postmaster general that there was no truth in the charge. Events seem to be moving rapidly in the direction that either the investigation must be suspended or the president will have to request the resignation of his postmaster general.

OPINIONS AND POINTERS.

——The Hanna-Foraker harmony is so thick that anybody could cut it with a knife.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

——Many a politician could learn a useful lesson from Uncle Mark Hunna in the art of taking his medicine gracefully.—Detroit Free Press.

——Mr. Hunna referred to him the other day as "our young heroic president." Uncle Mark knows a hand wagon when he sees one.—Chicago Record-Herald (Ind.).

——Mr. Roosevelt knows what he wants, and asks for it of the man who has a great deal of the say about giving it. Indorsement in 1903 and getting the nomination in 1904 are different things, though. Next year is the time when the convention will be held, and when the politicians and managers will be doing the most work.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

——Postmaster General Payne "regrets to report" that one of the assistant attorneys of his department has been arrested for boodling. It is also sad to relate that the prisoner charged with the crime is a good republican and was vouched for by Senator Fairbanks. Indiana seems to be furnishing more than her share of these gone-astray patriots who have so far been discovered in the post office scandal.

——The republican organs are very busy selecting the democratic candidate for president and of course declare that no matter who is nominated he cannot win. They will find that the democrats, when the time comes for selecting delegates, will send their best men to the convention, and they will agree on a platform and candidates that will command the votes of all democrats and keep the republicans busy until the votes are counted.

——The home example has made the Philippine postmasters get busy. Two of them have looted their offices, one even carrying off the safe. There would be no need to carry off the safe here, for the department would doubtless give them as good a chance as Taner had, and carry off the contents of the safe when they saw fit.

——Postmaster General Payne exposes his hand by denouncing the motives of those who make charges of the rotten condition of his department. If he was earnest in wishing to turn the rascals out, he would welcome all evidence against the evildoers.

"Hands Off!"

PROBLEM FOR DEMOCRATS.

Nominee for President Must Be Man Who Will Receive Full Party Support.

The problem of who is to be the nominee of the democratic party for president has been giving the republicans much greater worry than it has democrats. There is no doubt a difference of opinion among democrats of who should be nominated, but the more important question is, who can be elected. When the convention meets next summer and it can be shown that any good democrat will be able to carry enough electoral votes to win, he will be nominated beyond question. It must be remembered that the rule that requires a two-thirds majority of a democratic convention to nominate makes it tolerably certain that the candidate will be acceptable to the great mass of the party.

The most serious question that the democrats will have to solve is a platform that will clearly express the issues upon which the campaign must be fought and upon which the candidate must stand. The platform must be agreed upon before the balloting for candidates begins and only a majority of the convention is necessary to adopt it. When the delegations from the different states meet in convention, they will all be animated by one impulse, to select the most available candidate. They will want to win.

The rank and file of the democratic party can add vastly to the chances of success, both as to the selection of a satisfactory candidate and of his election, by selecting the most representative and honest members of the party as delegates to the convention. Do not tie them down with instructions for any man, but leave them free to make the best selection, after conference with their brother delegates from other states. The opinion of the delegates from the doubtful states must and will have the greatest weight in making the selection. The democratic sky has been gradually clearing and with the united effort of all who believe in the good old doctrine of "Equal rights to all and special privileges to none," a glorious victory for the people is within their grasp.

Republican newspapers are taking more than a passing interest in the nomination of the democratic candidate. They have for some time been trying to breed strife in the democratic ranks; their advice and comments are to be taken with due allowance for such intentions. Their efforts from this time on will be to kill off the most able and loyal democratic candidates and to cause confusion and discord in the ranks of the democracy. To listen to them is to be deceived. They are controlled by the plutocrats, who are the trust magnates, and they know their downfall is at hand if the democratic politics prevail. The talk of Wall street or the trusts and corporations opposing the republican ticket is the sheerest nonsense. The monopoly that gives the trusts power to extort from the people has been granted by the republicans, against the protest and votes of democrats. In every town in the country the republican leader is either openly or secretly their willing tool and in many cases their abject slave. Republican legislatures delight in passing laws in their interest and a republican congress but rarely says them nay when the demand is made for legislation. In return they have poured out their money to elect the republican tickets, both state and national. Is it probable that a divorce of these two interests is intended or even considered? Do the actions of the republican administration point to any serious opposition to the trusts? It is all a political play, to fool the people, but it should not deceive democrats.

——Another republican scandal has come to light unexpectedly, by the discovery that the fund of the District of Columbia for special assessments has been looted of $75,000. The officers in charge of the District do not seem to have even taken the precaution to count the cash from time to time, for the looting has been going on for five years under republican management.

——The worst feature about the post office scandal is that so many congressmen must have been aware of some of the misdoings and participated in the plunder to the extent of getting their friends appointed to office or the salaries of those already there considerably raised.

——The general scramble of the republican politicians to get in place on the Roosevelt band wagon is born of a desire for political spoils. The republican patriot, whose main hope is for the old flag and an appropriation never gets left if he knows it.

STATE NEWS PICK-UPS.

GRAY HADDIX MISSING.

He Disappeared From Jackson After Threats of Assassination.

Jackson, Ky., June 27.—Gray Haddix, who is the principal witness against Ed Tharp and Joe Crawford, charged with burning Ewen's hotel here, just after Ewen had testified against Jett and White, charged with the assassination of J. B. Marcum, it was reported Friday morning, is missing. Haddix has been under guard for a part of the time since the arrest of Crawford and Tharp. He was attacked once by two of the Hargis henchmen on the bridge, and they were sent to jail for assault with a pistol. Later he reported an attempt to burn his house down. A few days ago he told a soldier that he had been threatened with assassination if he testified against Crawford and Tharp before the special grand jury to be called here on July 29 to investigate the charges of arson and bribery. The town was quiet Taursday night.

Mrs. Ewen has rented a house and will attempt to carry out the contracts of her husband with the Hargises. The men they employed were turned out by people boarding them for fear of the Hargises, and now she says the men refuse to work on the contract, and she may not be able to complete it, after all.

IT INVOLVED A SUIT.

Question of the State's Right to Pay For Collecting War Claims.

Frankfort, Ky., June 26.—Suit was filed Thursday by E. M. Wallace against J. C. W. Beckham, governor, to recover $43.80, alleged to be due Frank H. Taylor, a soldier in the Spanish war, out of the fund collected by Capt. Calhoun last winter. The records in the adjutant general's office show that $37.50 was paid to Frank H. Taylor, but Taylor says that he never received the money. E. M. Wallace bought Taylor's claim, but when he presented it found that some one had already collected it.

The right of the state to pay Capt. Calhoun 15 per cent. out of the amount collected for the soldiers in Washington is involved in the suit. The amount apportioned to Taylor in Washington was $43.50, while the amount paid the alleged bogus Taylor was $37.50, which is 15 per cent. less than the amount apportioned to Taylor.

ALLEGED MISTREATMENT.

Louisville Man Says His Father Was Beaten to Death.

Louisville, Ky., June 26.—Frank Griffo called Wednesday at the office of Charles F. Taylor, one of the commissioners of the Lakeland asylum, and filed charges against the officials and attendants at the Lakeland asylum, which virtually amount to the allegation that his father, Vincent Griffo, was killed by ill-treatment at the asylum.

Vincent Griffo died at 6 o'clock Tuesday night. He was brought to this city Sunday and taken at once to the home of his son. There an examination was made of the body, and it is claimed that a pitiful state of affairs was revealed.

Marks as if from straps were found upon the body, and there was a deep cut in the head.

Mr. Griffo was 50 years of age, and was taken to the asylum five years ago.

Dr. J. G. Furnish, superintendent of the Lakeland asylum, issued a statement denying that Griffo had been mistreated. Dr. Furnish says Griffo was bedridden and was taken away by Mrs. Griffo so he could die at home. Dr. Furnish claims the body was swollen by a dropsical affection.

A Little Later the Murderer Was Slain By the Marshal.

Olive Hill, Ky., June 26.—Everett Baity, a barber of this place, shot and instantly killed Deputy Marshal Gus Hall here Thursday morning. A few minutes later Baity was shot and killed by Marshal Lewis White.

Hall had a warrant for the arrest of Baity, charged with stealing tools from the barber shop of John Dameran, where he had been employed. Baity seemed to be expecting Hall and armed himself with a shotgun. When Hall appeared he shot him in the face. Marshal White then arrived on the scene when, it is said, Baity commenced loading his gun to shoot him. White pulled his pistol and shot Baity, the ball going through his heart.

This was the second shooting scrape Baity had been in in the past two months, being almost killed, it is alleged, by Frank Tyree in April.

THE KUKLUX GANG.

Widow Was Whipped But the Man They Attacked Fired Upon Them.

Sergent, Ky., June 25.—Tuesday night in Kent county a kuklux gang went to the home of Mrs. Maggie Day, aged 35, a respectable widow, and whipped her unmercifully, leaving her unconscious. They attempted to enter the home of James Ritchie, but Ritchie fired upon the outlaws at close range.

Pools of blood were seen Wednesday morning around the Ritchie home, and it is more than evident that one of the outlaws was wounded. An effort is now being made to drive the kuklux outlaws out of Letcher, Pike and Knott counties at once.

Mattie Changed Her Mind.

Paducah, Ky., June 26.—Fred Iverlett, a well-known young man, is badly disappointed. His marriage to Miss Mattie Collins, daughter of former Chief of Police James Collins, was announced to take place, but the young woman decided, after the bans had been published in the Catholic church, that she didn't want to marry.

Mrs. O'Brien's Petition.

Lexington, Ky., June 27.—Mrs. E. C. O'Brien, of Memphis, mother of Claude O'Brien, the condemned murderer of A. B. Chinn, who has been circulating a petition in behalf of her wayward son, has succeeded in getting 30 names of Lexington business men signed to the petition.

New Well in Barren County.

Glasgow, Ky., June 27.—The South Kentucky Oil Co. brought in well No. 2 on the Sallie Kinslow lease, on Boyd's creek. This makes ten producing wells the South Kentucky people now have on Boyd's creek, and the last one is said to be a 15-barrel well.

Died of Prostration.

Burkesville, Ky., June 27.—Mrs. Kate Smith, widow of Frank Smith, who committed suicide at Mendota, Ill., last week, died of prostration. She was an invalid, and the news of her husband's tragic death was more than she could bear.

Aged Kentuckian Missing.

Louisville, Ky., June 25.—G. P. Mountjoy, 65 years old, one of the wealthiest citizens of Lawrenceburg, Ky., disappeared early Monday morning in this city, and has not been heard of since. At the time he was last seen, he had over $300 in paper money on his person.

Caused a Scene.

Lexington, Ky., June 27.—J. L. Noble, of Jackson, caused a scene in the lobby of the Phoenix hotel Friday night. He was twice ejected by Deputy Sheriff Rogers. He is an outspoken ally of the Hargis faction in Breathitt county.

Whitney and O'Brien to Hang July 24.

Frankfort, Ky., June 27.—The governor fixed Friday, July 24, for the hanging of Earl Whitney and Claude O'Brien, the Lexington murderers. Their attorneys presented a petition for commutation of sentence.

Joe Childress, Union's popular law-enforcer, was in town yesterday.

John W. Gaines and wife, of Plattsburg, were guests at Dr. Duncan's yesterday.

You will miss lots of fun if you do not come to Burlington next Saturday. Remember the fireworks that night.

Welsh's show will give two or three open air performances next Saturday, to assist in making the old town lively.

A good horse belonging to Cluterbuck Bros. died Monday evening. They are very unfortunate with their cows and horses.

What do you think of burning $100 worth of fireworks in Burlington on the night of the 4th? Patriotism, you know.

Mrs. W. T. German died at 11 o'clock at the county infirmary last night. Mr. German has been at the point of death for several days.

The North Kentucky Medical Association will hold its regular meeting in Walton on the 9th inst., on which occasion there will be a fish-fry.

Rev. Jacob Ditzler, D. D., a great scholar, theologian and preacher, will preach in Florence on the second Sunday in July, morning and evening. Will then preach at Zion from Thursday evening till Sunday evening—the third Sunday. Let the people come and enjoy a great feast.

When Dr. Courtney Walton arrived home a few days ago from Medical College at Louisville, he found several acres of growing tobacco awaiting his attention, and he plunged into work, and now has the appearance of a thirty-third degree farmer. The anatomy of the tobacco worm will be given his special attention for the next few months, at the conclusion of which time he will be prepared to deliver an exhaustive lecture on its formation and habits.

I desire to extend to the people of school District No. 26 my heartfelt thanks for their patronage and support shown me while in their neighborhood. I regret very much my circumstances are such that I can not accept the invitation to teach for them this fall, but I will say to any teacher looking for a position as teacher of a school of intelligent and obedient children, District No. 26 is the place.

Sincerely Yours,

C. H. NEWMAN.

Night Was Her Terror.

"I would cough nearly all night long," writes Mrs. Chas. Applegate, of Alexandria, Ind., "and could hardly get any sleep. I had consumption so bad that if I walked a block I would cough frightfully and spit blood, but, when all other medicines failed, three $1.00 bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery wholly cured me and I gained 58 pounds." It's absolutely guaranteed to cure Coughs, Colds, Lagrippe, Bronchitis and all Throat and Lung Troubles. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free at all drug stores.

Very Remarkable Cure of Diarrhoea.

"About six years ago for the first time in my life I had a sudden and severe attack of diarrhea," says Mrs. Alice Miller, of Morgan, Texas. "I got temporary relief, but it came back again and again, and for six long years I have suffered more misery and agony than I can tell. It was worse than death. My husband spent hundreds of dollars for physicians' prescriptions and treatment without avail. Finally we moved to Bosque county, our present home, and one day I happened to see an advertisement of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera, and Diarrhoea Remedy with a testimonial of a man who had been cured by it. The case was so similar to my own that I concluded to try the remedy. The result was wonderful. I could hardly realize that I was well again, or believe it could be so after having suffered so long, but that one bottle of medicine, costing but a few cents, cured me." For sale by all Druggists.

Thirty thousand people per year for the past two or three years are leaving the central States for new homes in the northern west. Well-to-do farmers and others are buying lands and homes there for their sons while it is cheap, and scores of these young vigorous men are annually going to that region to make new homes. It was the way these central States were settled.

The great difficulty with some farmers is to secure an opportunity to plow during the summer, as pressing work prevents them from doing such when it may be an advantage. Summer plowing will answer well on ground that has long been in sod, and which has been turned under in the spring. Such land is usually planted in corn or potatoes, and the frequent use of the cultivator keeps the ground loose and promotes decay of the sod. But potatoes, for an early stock, are harvested as soon as possible, which leaves the soil not only rough, but in an excellent condition for weeds. By plowing the soil after the potatoes are off it will be reduced to a finer condition, the weeds will be destroyed and the second crop of weeds retarded, so that by the time the land should be gotten ready for the seedbed for the wheat can be harrowed down fine and nice, while all the weeds will not only have been destroyed, but prevented from seeding. If the plowing on corn land is done as soon as the corn is cut, and again the land plowed before seeding to wheat, it will be a great benefit to the crop.

Mrs. Fred Unrath,

President Country Club, Benton Harbor, Mich.

"After my first baby was born I did not seem to regain my strength although the doctor gave me a tonic which he considered very superior, but instead of getting better I grew weaker every day. My husband insisted that I take Wine of Cardui for a week and see what it would do for me. I did take the medicine and was very grateful to find my strength and health slowly returning. In two weeks I was out of bed and in a month I was able to take up my usual duties. I am very enthusiastic in its praise."

Wine of Cardui reinforces the organs of generation for the ordeal of pregnancy and childbirth. It prevents miscarriage. No woman who takes Wine of Cardui need fear the coming of her child. If Mrs. Unrath had taken Wine of Cardui before her baby came she would not have been weakened as she was. Her rapid recovery should commend this great remedy to every expectant mother. Wine of Cardui regulates the menstrual flow.

VOL. XXVIII. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, JULY 8, 1903. NO. 38

County Correspondence.

COMMISSARY.

July 6.—The best and latest joke of the season is on Miss Lou Longden.

Saturday the 4th was a warm day for Burlington ball teams.

Born, Wednesday morning July 1st, to Noah West, and wife, a 13 lb girl.

Buy yourself a good watch and you will not have to ask a gentleman for the correct time.

C. H. Acra has been appointed, sworn in, and executed bond as treasurer for school district No 2, to collect a tax to repair and paint school building and do other necessary repairs.

Solon Rice, of McVille, has for sale 1,500 bushels old corn, which he will sell at Cincinnati prices. He has cut his alfalfa, which made 6 tons per acre.

Caddy Mauer and Geo. Williamson, two old bachelors, were at the entertainment in McVille last Saturday night, escorting two of the young ladies. If Caddy had been attired in the ball suit he wore in the game in Burlington that afternoon, he certainly would have made a mash.

The people of McVille were surprised at the large attendance at the festival Saturday night. We know when they advertised their festival in the Recorder through the Commissary that it would be a success. By the way, it was the canal of, and in many partic ulars out did the Bellevue entertainment. At Bellevue the icecream was served in dishes built on the narrow guage style, and the cake cut on the starvation plan, while at McVille the icecream was served in coffee saucers with sideboards and the cake cut in great chunks. The icecream was homemade, but splendid, and the cake outrivaled Bellevue in quality and quantity and the decorations of the hall and tables were much nicer. The table set apart for the pupils was appropriately draped in mourning, in remembearance of the recently deceased member, Mrs. Fred Birkle, who was a faithful attendant and good worker in the school. The name "Union" had much to do toward the success of the entertainment. There is strength in union. The churches and schools of Bellevue and McVille could do much more good if united. The ladies of McVille have demonstrated that they know how to entertain. In behalf of the ladies of McVille, we thank the Masons for the use of their hall, and the people for their aid and patronage.

Owing to the fact that we have heard so much said within the last few days about correspondents writting nothing but visiting items, we decided to omit them this week, not that we have not plenty such items, but to show the chronic grumbler that we can write without them. At one time we thought as they talk, that there are too many such items, and that they are of no interest to the readers; but on close scrutinizing among the people while canvassing for the Elixir of Life, we changed our mind. By hearing the people talk we find this class of items it more enjoyed and are of more interest to a majority of readers than anyother class of news. Visiting news is enjoyed all over the county, except in the neighborhood where it is written. It is difficult to tell what class of reading would suit chronic grumblers, but perhaps fiction would suit them best. Fiction is an artificial blossom on the dead limb of education, but it bears fruit in larger quantities than the real literary blossoms on the green limbs, but that fruit is a sickly, sleepy, dreamy, skinless, seedless, hopeful ignorance that entertains the victim, while the real, living truths, and the facts of science, and the ripe fruits of good sense and reason are trampled in the dust. Fiction is an ingredient that is not used in the composition of the Elixir of Life. The county paper that publishes sickly, sentimental love tales, and detective impossibilities and the thousands whooping heroes, who rush into impossible dangers to rescue beautiful maidens, whose beauty would dazzle the eyes of a woodeu monkey, we think hard pushed for filling.

BELLEVIEW.

Most of the citizens spent the fourth at home.

James Love returned to his home in Evansville, last Thursday.

Mrs. Josie Grant was visiting her mother last Saturday and Sunday.

Hugh French and wife, of Indiana, spent the 4th with Ben Cason and family, out on Middle creek.

G. P. Rue celebrated his 52d anniversary on the second inst. A large number of his descendants and relatives were present, and a delightful time was enjoyed by all. Mr. Rue received some nice presents.

Misses Emma and Genie Moody entertained Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Hopkins and Miss Florence Hopkins and Mr. Frederick Smith, of Cochran, Indiana; Mr. Earl Shutts and Miss Ivy Selmental, of Aurora; Miss Maud Kinge, of Cleves, Ohio; Miss Amy Smith, of Weisburg, Ind.; and Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Botts, of Rising Sun, last Saturday night and Sunday. Hospitality at the home of Misses Emma and Genie is unbounded.

DOG FENNEL AVENUE.

Your humble scribe has been considerably under the weather of a bad cough for several weeks.

Blant Pope and wife from down on Middle creek, visited Mrs. Pope's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. L. Nichols, last Wednesday.

Louis Hensley, of this neighborhood, and Miss Carl Lonaker, of Belleview, were married at Lawreneeburg last Wednesday.

We were very much pleased to meet our old friend G. W. Weindel, of the U. S. Navy. He looks like Uncle Sam had fed him well.

One of Petersburg's gallant gents was calling on his lady love in this neighborhood last week. Here's wishing you success, George.

Bob Patterson and Clyde Akin had quite a thrilling encounter with a black snake in the harvest field one day last week. It came very near being too much for both of them. It measured 6 feet and 8 inches.

There are some parties in this neighborhood who instead of trying to stay clear of the smallpox have met one patient on several different occasions, which has caused considerable comment. Although the present cases are very light, we have been told by physicians that there was no reason to believe that those who might contract the disease in the future, would have it in a light form. If this be true, in which there is no reason to believe otherwise, it is the general opinion of the people that the health officer should quarantine every person known to have been exposed to the disease.

IDLEWILD.

M. Souther and wife, of Pt. Pleasant, and W. B. Graves and family, of Hebron, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Stephens, Sunday.

Miss Mabel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Perry Cropper, of Louisville, is spending the summer with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Cropper.

The death of Mrs. Sarah Cooper, of Kyle, Texas, who was an old citizen of this county, and the deaths of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. German, were reported at our services at Bullittsburg, Sunday.

Our pastor was so indisposed last Sunday that his members prevailed on his not preaching at night. He gave us a splendid sermon in the morning on the word "Better," as the key-note to Christian service.

George states that there were two distinct reports from the strike.

LUDLOW.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

The mayor and city council have ordered the police to collect the notorious vehicle license. Two arrests have been made and the cases taken to the Kenton circuit court on an injunction, where it was decided that the ordinance is valid, therefore, on and after July 8th, the ordinance will be enforced, and every person entering the corporate limits of Ludlow without a vehicle license will be required to pay the license or submit to arrest. The chief of police declares he will arrest every person who refuses to pay, and the police judge says he will fine everyone who is arrested. Every farmer knows he can sell his produce in any city in the United States without paying a license, but the decision of the Kenton circuit court says he has to pay in Ludlow. Not only the farmers, but any person passing through Ludlow with a vehicle, whether they stop or not, will be required to pay the license. If you pass through the town without being caught, a warrant will be issued for your arrest, and you will be fined when arrested, and yet, the citizens of Ludlow spent several hundred dollars on the 4th as a testimonial of their appreciation of a free country. Why should we farmers patronize a people who do not want us, when we can buy our goods just as cheap elsewhere? And why should we patronize their National Bank, when that same bank's attorney is fighting the case against the farmers, while it is reported that the officials of that bank say every dollar the farmer pays into the city treasury reduces their city taxes. This has become a serious matter if we want to go to Covington, as we will have to pay $10 for the privilege of passing through Ludlow. We all know it is not lawful, but what are we to do? Refuse and be arrested and fined? The amount is not large enough to appeal, and if it was that court has already decided it. The two who were arrested have to pay their license, fine and cost, which will amount to $25 each besides their lawyer fee. The power is against us and our only remedy is to stay away from Ludlow and keep our money. By all means don't go to Ludlow. POOR FARMER.

Very Remarkable Cure of Diarrhoea.

"About six years ago for the first time in my life I had a sudden and severe attack of diarrhoea," says Mrs. Alice Miller, of Morgan, Texas. "I got temporary relief, but it came back again and again, and for six long years I have suffered more misery and agony than I can tell. It was worse than death. My husband spent hundreds of dollars for physicians' prescriptions and treatment without avail. Finally we moved to Bosque county, our present home, and one day I happened to see an advertisement of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera, and Diarrhoea Remedy with a testimonial of a man who had been cured by it. The case was so similar to my own that I concluded to try the remedy. The result was wonderful. I could hardly realize that I was well again, or believe it could be go after having suffered so long, but that one bottle of medicine, costing but a few cents, cured me." For sale by all Druggists.

Our Idlewild correspondent telephoned us the account of the burning of the residence (the Dickens house) on the farm of J. F. Cason, in that neighborhood, about noon last Monday. A disordered stomach may cause no end of trouble. When the stomach fails to perform its functions the bowels become deranged, the liver and kidneys congested, causing numerous diseases, the most fatal of which are painless and therefore the more to be dreaded. The important thing is to restore the stomach and liver to a healthy condition, and for this purpose no better preparation can be used than Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. For Sale by all Druggists.

Quite a number of persons from Petersburg, Lawreneeburg, Ind., and Covington, Ky., spent June 30th with Reuben Akin and wife, of Woolper Heights. By noon all had rested from their ride, and were in excellent condition to test true Kentucky hospitality by doing full justice to a table laden with all the "good things" of the season, fried chicken being one of the specialties. One of the amusing incidents of the day was the eating match between the men, each of whom rendered such a good account of himself that the ladies declared that they were heartily ashamed of them, and that in the future the rations would be dished out to each man. The contest was won by Chas. Dawson, after two hours hard and fast work, Wm. Ramsy and Thos. Hines pushing him hard far first place. In the afternoon the members of the Woolper Sunday school came in, and several hours were spent in singing and reviewing the lessons. Every one present reported a good time.

Night Was Her Terror.

"I would cough nearly all night long," writes Mrs. Chas. Applegate, of Alexandria, Ind., "and could hardly get any sleep. I had consumption so bad that if I walked a block I would cough frightfully and spit blood, but, when all other medicines failed, three $1.00 bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery wholly cured me and I gained 56 pounds." It's absolutely guaranteed to cure Coughs, Colds, Lagrippe, Bronchitis and all Throat and Lung Troubles. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free at all drug stores.

God-Given Wisdom and Its Practical Utility

The Story of Solomon and Its Lessons for To-Day.

Sermon by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher.

(Copyright, 1903, by J. M. Edson.)

Chicago, Sunday, July 5, 1903.

Text:—"If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him."—James, 1:5.

NEARLY eleven hundred years before the words of our text were written there ascended the throne of the kingdom of Israel a young man in whom was exemplified most strikingly their truth and meaning. Take your Bibles and read the third chapter of I Kings. Solomon has just been called to rule over the Jewish nation in the room of David his father. Among the first acts of his reign he seeks the Lord in sacrifice and worship at Gibeon. The testimony of God's Word in the third verse of the chapter is that "Solomon loved the Lord, walking in the statutes of David his father," and it is with the deepest reverence and devotion that this young king recognizes God's claims upon him and his need of and dependence upon God. With lavish hand the king makes his offerings before the Lord. The smoke of a thousand burnt offerings ascended from the multitude of altars erected there. The priests and the Levites have been kept busy in preparing the flocks of lambs, and the droves of cattle for the sacrifice. All the nation knows of the religious devotions of the new king, and thousands have gathered from all over the kingdom to share in the ceremonies. What a revival season was that for Solomon and the nation! The hearts of all are quickened and God draws very near unto them. He always does when the soul steadfastly sets itself to seek the Lord. And in the stillness of the night watches during this great national religious celebration. God appears to Solomon in a dream. And the words of the Lord and the reply of Solomon indicate the burden which was upon the heart of the young ruler. The new and great responsibilities require increased wisdom and abilities. He did not have the words of our text to admonish and encourage him, but his heart was open towards God and he felt the need of more than human help. It was then that God came to him. It is at such times that the Lord always comes. The words "If any of you lack wisdom" imply a condition similar to that which we find prevailing in the life of Solomon at this time—responsibilities incurred, modesty in measuring personal abilities, consciousness of the need of Divine assistance.

AT the very outset we wish to dispel any thought or impression which may prevail that this visit of the Lord to Solomon, His request that he ask of Him his heart's desire, and the gift of great wisdom in response to the expression of the wish, are of such a supernatural character as to partake of the nature of a fairy tale. Such coloring could be and has been given to this Bible story. It is fascinating to think of having the privilege of one wish and then being suddenly and miraculously endowed with the thing wished for. But such are not the facts in this story before us, I believe; and there is nothing in the experience of Solomon at Gibeon which may not have its reproduction in the life of everyone. The words of our text are for all, and they find their full realization in this experience of Solomon. This story has always had its fascination for children and for older ones, too, but its practical value has been largely lost because superficially and supernaturally considered. Solomon was not one of those specially favored individuals to whom chance brought the golden opportunity of expressing a wish, and then the magic wand being waved above him—presto, change!—he was quickly transformed from an ordinary mortal to one endowed with superhuman wisdom. That is not the way God operates. Solomon sought God with all his heart, and the Lord revealed to him the privilege which the soul always has when in accord with the will of God, that of asking and receiving. Or, as our text declares: "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him."

THESE words of James are not intended to imply that there are those who do not lack wisdom, and who therefore do not need that wisdom which comes from above. No man has ever yet lived who has not needed Divine direction and help in the proper conduct and administration of human affairs, whether they involved the responsibilities of a kingdom or only those of the work bench in the shop or the care of the modest, humble home. But rather does our text refer to the one who has awakened to a sense of that lack of wisdom which has previously existed. Responsibilities in greater or less degree come to everyone. Modesty in measuring personal abilities in coping with those responsibilities, and recognition of the need of Divine wisdom and help, are the lessons which this incident in the life of Solomon should teach us. Let us then consider our text under the following heads: The need of wisdom; The source of wisdom; The request for wisdom; The gift of wisdom; The evidence of wisdom; and, The influence of wisdom. At no time is a [illegible] so [illegible] is in the presence of God. It was when Solomon was performing his religious obligations before the Lord at Gibeon that the sense of his human limitations and his great need of wisdom in administering the affairs of his kingdom were borne in upon his soul. It is only when one seeks God and comes into His presence that he can get his correct bearings and adjust the compass of human judgment. Solomon, amidst the princely splendors of his court at Jerusalem, surrounded by his courtiers and great retinue of officials and servants, immersed in the intricacies of the affairs of state, would never have heard God speaking to him: "Ask what I shall give thee;" and would never have felt a great need outside of himself and have asked for Divine wisdom in administering the responsibilities of the kingdom. He must withdraw from the rush of human activities, he must get out of the sound of human voices that he might realize that God was a factor in every human activity and that he might hear His voice speaking. It is so always. The king on his throne, and the humblest peasant in the realm; the public official directing the affairs of a nation, and the most obscure citizen; the man in whose hands rest great financial, commercial and industrial interests, and the struggling clerk; the skilled artisan, and the commonest laborer; the gifted and cultured woman with her wide social and charitable obligations and responsibilities, and the shut-in housewife who bears, single-handed, the burdens of her home; the business woman, struggling amidst the trials and temptations of the business and industrial world, and the factory hand whose weary toil keeps her at the machine in monotonous servitude; the boy or girl on the playground or in the schoolroom—all alike have need of that wisdom which cometh down from the God of all wisdom, and the realization of that need is felt only as one withdraws for quiet meditation and prayer. "If any of you lack wisdom," James says; and we would add: If you feel no lack, seek God at Gibeon—the place of retirement and worship—and in the midnight watches the voice of God will be heard speaking and the soul will cry out: "Lord, I am but a little child; give me wisdom for the duties and the responsibilities which rest upon me."

SOURCE of Wisdom.—It is not in man, that is certain. The united wisdom, skill and energy of the people of the world after the flood but plunged them headlong to the disaster and confusion of the tower of Babel. All the learning of the Egyptians, which in our day appears as a marvel of human achievement, was as nothing before the faith and the rod of a Moses who, following God, led the children of Israel in great wisdom and skill out of Egypt to the promised land. All the astrologers and wise men of the far east could not aid the king of Babylon in his perplexing dreams and troubled thoughts, but a Daniel who was in touch with the all-wise, all-powerful God was not only able to foretell the events of the future, but to administer the vast interests of the extensive kingdom in a manner never before experienced. All the rabbis and scribes and keen-witted lawyers of Jesus' time, though they rested neither day nor night in their efforts to frame questions that would entangle Him and trip Him up, were like chaff before the wind, as His God-given wisdom swept them aside and He passed on with undeviating step.

We are told that the "foolishness of God is wiser than men." God is called the "God of all wisdom," and Paul, in his letter to the Romans, exclaims: "O the depth of the wisdom of God!" One question which the neighbors and countrymen asked concerning Jesus was: "Whence hath this man this wisdom?" The united arguments of the scholars and advanced thinkers from every section of the world were not able to stand before the wisdom with which Stephen spake. Why? Because man in touch with the God of all wisdom is always more than a match for the wisdom of the world. God is the source of all wisdom, both for temporal as well as spiritual things. Solomon did not search the world for the wise men who would be able to help him administer the kingdom, he did not trust to human abilities, but sought out God alone at Gibeon, whom he knew was the source of all wisdom, and obtained from Him the wisdom he needed. It must be so with you and me. Human advice, human counselors and your own human wisdom must not be allowed to crowd God out, or obscure your sense of dependence upon the God of all wisdom. No. "Ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally and upbraideth not."

REQUEST for Wisdom.—To my mind one of the most charming pictures we have of Solomon is this where, in the attitude of a little child, he is bowed before the Lord. One might prefer the scene of the matchless splendor and richness of his palace, his throne, and his gorgeous apparel and stately dignity, but I love to picture the young king at Gibeon clothed with beautiful humility, and stirred by pure earnest purpose for the right, talking with God, and asking, not something for himself, but something for his people and nation. And here is the key to his success. There are three things we wish to emphasize in connection with this incident in Solomon's life and in the unfolding of our text. First, the simple faith of the supplicant; second, his genuine humility, and third, his per[illegible]ness. No doubt comes between Solomon and his God at this time. There is no question in his heart as to God's ability and willingness to grant the request. This is the way the soul must always go to God if it would obtain from Him. James emphasizes this very point in the verses following our text. He likens the man who doubts to a wave of the sea driven hither and thither by the wind, and solemnly declares: "Let not that man think that he shall receive anything from the Lord." Read carefully the verses which follow the request which Solomon makes of the Lord. No immediate evidence that Solomon has been clothed with the mantle of wisdom. In fact, Scripture declares that Solomon awoke and found it was a dream. This does not mean there was a vague intangibleness to it all such as is ordinarily attached to dreams, but emphasizes the fact that there was not any immediate or miraculous change in Solomon. There was only the inward consciousness that he had talked with God and that wisdom when needed was to be his portion from the God of all wisdom. In faith he went down to Jerusalem, and waited and then followed the evidences that the wisdom for which he had asked had been bestowed. God does not give the soul the conscious possession of His treasures that they may be hoarded and gloated over, and unwisely used, but He gives when the need for use arises, and faith keeps the soul confident that in the time of need God will not fail. The request for wisdom must be made with that faith which assures the soul and makes it patient to wait for its bestowment in the hour of need.

GIFT of Wisdom.—As we have already intimated, this gift of wisdom to Solomon was not miraculous. God did not send it down upon him in great chunks so that he could gather it up and ship it back to Jerusalem, there to be used when he wished to make a display of it, or when circumstances required. It came in the most natural way, and while Solomon was using every energy and faculty of his being. God supplemented his natural abilities. He did not supplant them. While the gift was natural and timed to the need, the evidences of that wisdom were striking and well-nigh miraculous, for the nation instantly recognized that "the Wisdom of God was in him to do judgment." And that is the way the wisdom which you are told to ask of God will be received. When the difficult problem arises, when confused in the presence of perplexing circumstances, then look for the gift of wisdom, and move straight on, knowing that each step will be guided by the unerring judgment of God. Wisdom from God is not something you can have a large reserve stock of on hand, as you would a grain supply or a bank account, but is always in the possession of God, but the prayer of faith will always be able to move God and obtain from Him just what is needed for the present requirement.

EVIDENCE of Wisdom.—Did it ever occur to you that it was singular that God selected the incident He did to prove the wisdom of His servant Solomon? Surely out of the many hard tests to which the Queen of Sheba put him upon her visit, there must have been some one which could have been selected which would have so clearly proved the possession of the gift. Surely there must have been other and pleasanter circumstances when he could have displayed his God-given wisdom. But, instead, he is found sitting on his throne and adjudicating a disgusting justice-court case; a case in which the complainants had no standing and the object of their dispute being the fruit of their sin and a witness against them. Instead of hearing their case he might have ordered their stoning without the city according to the solemn judgment of the Jewish law. Why was it? We may not be able to suggest the correct answer, but may it not have been to emphasize the fact that the highest wisdom of God reaches to the lowest human need. Does it not emphasize the practical utility of God-given wisdom? Even the meanest and most despised of all of His subjects was to feel and know that the wisdom of God was guiding him. The evidence of Solomon's great wisdom was unexpectedly found in a matter which most vitally concerned the every-day life of two outcast women. What a lesson this ought to teach you and me! Where are we looking for evidences of wisdom from God? In some great thing? You will be disappointed. But realize that the gift will be bestowed for the meanest and most humble affairs of life, that it will be given that you may bless and help some despised, outcast soul, and then there will be such a commonsense, yet exalted, walk with God as will demonstrate to all about that "the wisdom of God" is in you.

INFLUENCE of Wisdom.—And this last brings us to our closing thought: The influence of wisdom. If we were able to go back to the period in Jewish history when Solomon reigned, and mingled with the people, we would find that the manifest presence of God with Solomon which put him in sympathetic touch with the lowest and meanest of human needs influenced the people toward practical views of God and practical religious living, more than would all the learned preaching which the king could have given expression to. He might have talked religion faithfully during the 40 years of his reign and left little or no impression, but this practical application of his God-given gift exerted a lasting influence upon all the nation. An ounce of applied religion is better than carloads of sermons merely preached. You will obtain from God as much as you are willing to apply to be every-day needs of those about you. Then ask that ye may receive, receive that ye may give. "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him."

OUT WITH THE RASCALS!

Inquitious Conduct of Federal Departments Glossed Over by the President.

"The deeper the post office scandal is probed the greater is the extent of the rottenness revealed. There are indications of fraud, favoritism, "graft," blackmail and pickings and stealings in nearly every branch of the postal service.

The civil service commission's report that the Washington post office has been used as a dumping-ground for large numbers of unnecessary employes is confirmed by the report of Special Examiner Bristow, though Mr. Payne seeks to put all the responsibility upon the late and still lamented McKinley and his Postmaster General Smith.

The rural free delivery mail carriers have been used as "drummers" for private business and electioneering agents for congressmen. Mailpouches have been bought at three times the market price. Large printing contracts have been so drawn as to be securely awarded to favored bidders at enormous profits. Cash registers, mailboxes and other fixures have been foisted upon the government through political "push," in the profits of which conniving officials or their relatives have shared. Promotions and increases of salary have been obtained for a price.

A recent Washington dispatch to a republican evening paper in this city said that—

"Although the crisis of the investigation of post office department scandals is expected to come this week, and result in a number of arrests of persons both in and out of the postal service, the astonishing statement was made at the department this morning that the ramifications of fraud and scandal and criminality are widening at such an ever-increasing pace that the inquiry, which has now been in active progress for more than three months, will probably last all summer and may possibly even extend through the next session of congress."

A "high authority" in the department is also cited by the same correspondent as suggesting that—

"By the time the legislative body convenes the disclosures of corruption in the postal service will be such that the results will occupy a considerable portion of the time of both houses, and make the memory of the famous star-route cases pale into insignificance."

In this emergency what is the president doing? Has he removed the postmaster-general who characterized the charges as "hot air" and denounced the honest man who brought them as "a wind-bag?" No; he has simply ordered him not to talk.

Has he directed the suspension or removal of any of the officials under whose administration these frauds and abuses have occurred? Only one, and that tardily. Two of them have been allowed to resign and another has been given a leave of absence.

Has the president made any public declaration of his purpose to go to the top as well as to the bottom and to see that "no guilty man escapes?" No; he has repeated his tiresome talk of the need of a big navy to protect us in our "aggressive" foreign policy—concerning which the people of this country are both innocent and ignorant—but has, as the Evening Post says, "kept silent when the enemies are of our own household."

If this policy of silence and looking for little scapegoats shall continue, the democrats will need no other issue for the campaign of next year than that embodied in the war-cry that elected Tilden in 1876:

"TURN THE RASCALS OUT!"

——In all the states where republican state conventions are adopting resolutions nominating Roosevelt for 1904 a "snap" advantage is taken by occupying the field, like a squatter on public land, a year in advance of the proper time. The republican state conventions this year cannot speak for the republican conventions of next year, next year's conventions will be called for the special purpose of electing delegates to the republican national convention by which a candidate [illegible] will be nominated.

THE TRUSTS ADVISE THE PEOPLE TO "STAND PAT" AND HOLD THE HORN OF PLENTY—FOR THE TRUSTS.

WARNING TO FIRST VOTERS.

Protection Literature Placed in Their Hands by Protected Manufacturers to Mislead.

The American Tariff league, an organization composed of 1,000 protected manufacturers who pay $100 a year each in dues, and who contribute generously besides, is sending thousands of circular letters throughout the country in an endeavor to secure the names of all first voters in 1904. The letter says that "a great number of young men do not look upon protection as a vital interest to themselves and to their country. No time should be lost in placing in the hands of such young voters a series of protection literature especially adapted."

Young voters, when you get the numerous pamphlets which will be sent to you at the expense of these protected manufacturers, ask yourselves a few questions like the following:

1. As I am not a manufacturer, why should I vote for tariff duties which prevent competition from foreign manufactured goods and enable American manufacturers to form a trust and obtain higher prices?

2. How can a duty on goods protect labor?

3. With labor on the free list and immigrants flocking to this country unchecked at an average rate of 3,000 per day, why should I vote for a system to make goods dear and increase the cost of living?

4. Being a farmer, and knowing that the prices of grains are fixed in foreign, free-trade markets, why should I vote to maintain a bogus tariff on wheat and corn, which serves as a cover to the genuine protection on manufactured goods?

5. Why should manufacturers who are selling goods all over the world at free trade prices be encouraged by a high tariff to sell the same goods here at 50 or 100 per cent. higher prices?

6. Why should I vote money out of my pocket and into the pockets of the protected trusts?

7. Does the Protection Tariff league think that we young voters are everlasting chumps, and that we can be duped by its thinly disguised sophistry?

These and other similar questions, taken before and after, will render tariff league literature innocuous and harmless even when taken in ten lots. The worst thing that could happen to protection and its beneficiaries, the manufacturers, is to start tariff discussions in our granges, labor organizations and homes. The tariff league is supplying its sophistry to 6,000 papers every week. It has kept steadily at this work for 15 years. Its members have become millionaires and multi-millionaires in the meantime. They are interested in having the farmers and workingmen believe that all of our prosperity, our good crops, our fertile soil, are due to "protection." They know well that "protection" enables the trusts to skim the cream off our prosperity and leaves only the skimmed milk for the farmers and laborers. But can we blame them for asking us to support this system? We can stop the tariff plundering when we know and vote for our own interests. Why not do it?

Mrs. Anderson, a prominent society woman of Jacksonville, Fla., daughter of Recorder of Deeds, West, says:

"There are but few wives and mothers who have not at times endured agonies and such pain as only women know of. I wish such women knew the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It is a remarkable medicine, different in action from any other I ever knew and thoroughly reliable.

"I have seen cases where women doctored for years without permanent benefit who were cured in less than three months after taking your Vegetable Compound, while others who were chronic and incurable came out cured, happy, and in perfect health after a thorough treatment with this medicine. I have never used it myself without gaining great benefit. A few doses restores my strength and appetite, and tones up the entire system. Your medicine has been tried and found true, hence I fully endorse it."—Mrs. R. A. Anderson, 225 Washington St., Jacksonville, Fla.—$5000 forfeit if original of above testimonial proving genuineness cannot be produced.

The experience and testimony of some of the most noted women of America go to prove, beyond a question, that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will correct all such troubles at once by removing the cause, and restoring the organs to a healthy and normal condition.

Purest of Emollients and Greatest of Skin Cures.

The Most Wonderful Curative of All Time

For Torturing, Disfiguring Skin Humours

And Purest and Sweetest of Toilet Emollients.

Cuticura Ointment is beyond question the most successful curative for torturing, disfiguring humours of the skin and scalp, including loss of hair, ever compounded, in proof of which a single anointing preceded by a hot bath with Cuticura Soap, and followed in the severer cases, by a dose of Cuticura Resolvent, is often sufficient to afford immediate relief in the most distressing forms of itching, burning and scaly humours, permit rest and sleep, and point to a speedy cure when all other remedies fail. It is especially so in the treatment of infants and children, cleansing, soothing and healing the most distressing of infantile humours, and preserving, purifying and beautifying the skin, scalp and hair.

Cuticura Ointment possesses, at the same time, the charm of satisfying the simple wants of the toilet, in caring for the skin, scalp, hair, hands and feet, from infancy to age, far more effectually, agreeably and economically than the most expensive of toilet emollients. Its "Instant relief for skin-tortured babies," or "Sanative, antiseptic cleansing," or "One-night treatment of the hands or feet," or "Single treatment of the hair," or "Use after athletics," cycling, golf, tennis, riding, sparring, or any sport, each in connection with the use of Cuticura Soap, is sufficient evidence of this.

A MODEL COW STALL.

Hint from Alabama Which May Prove of Value to Many Northern Dairy Farmers.

I tried all kinds of ties, and everything I could read of, and nothing would do until I tried this plan, but now the cow is always clean; never have to wash her, and it used to be every morning's job to scrub the cow before I could milk her. First close up front of stall so cow can't get her head through, and make a rack to feed rough feed in about four feet from floor, depending on size of cow. I used a 14-inch board for the bottom A as long as I wanted the rack to be; mine was four feet, letting the bottom droop slightly so the hay would always work to the front so she could get it all easily, and a 1x4 piece B same length as A fastened at each end back two feet from C, and to this and the bottom A nailed 1x2-inch slat to make the bottom of rack; six to eight inches apart makes a good distance, as they can't pull out and waste feed so easily. At D, I nailed a box in right hand corner near the floor to feed grain in, and at E bored a hole to fasten chain in, making it so she could reach her feed bor easily and also step back to reach up to eat out of rack. Then as she stood when tied, I took a 4x4-inch piece long enough to go across the stall and fastened securely just in front of her hind feet. Thus all excrement fell behind this 4x4-inch piece, and when she went to lie down she put her head under the rack and laid in front of the piece in the dry. I bedded her thoroughly in front of this piece with chaff, and it kept dry all winter; didn't need to change it at all, and she was not out of her stall from November 1st until April, for I had no place to turn her out, living in a town.—Ed. S. McKean, in Epitomist.

ABSURD DAIRY LAWS.

Legal Enactments Won't Make Good Butter Nor Will They Make Clean Farmers.

In commenting on the clamor of many creamery butter makers for more rigid laws relative to the delivery of good milk to the creamery, Mr. A. W. Trow, of Minnesota, in the St. Paul Farmer, well says:

"It may seem an advantage to some butter makers to shirk the responsibility of refusing bad milk or cream, and have this responsibility carried by the state, but laws have not the required elasticity nor exceptions. They cannot discriminate on quality. Laws can never step in to take the place of the tact and judgment of a butter maker. If good milk, good cream and many other good things could be obtained by making laws we would now be subsisting on the angelic diet of the millenium, instead of milking cows to make butter. It is as difficult to legislate cleanliness as godliness into us farmers. Better results will be obtained by politely, kindly but firmly, refusing all unwholesome milk or cream, be it one day or a week old. The greatest requisite to creamery success is cooperation among patrons, directors and butter makers; and the enforcement of drastic laws without great discretion is the quickest way of destroying cooperation. Three years ago we heard the head man of a new creamery say that the easiest way to get along with a crowd of farmers was to lay down a set of iron clad rules with severe penalties attached, draw a distinct line and whenever one of them failed to toe the scratch in complying with the rules to unceremoniously annihilate him. With the aid of this policy it took this man but two years to completely annihilate the creamery. The farmer will stand coaxing and reasoning but no bluff."

It is almost universally true that those creameries are the most successful that possess butter makers that have a kindly, patient tact and the disposition to get out among their patrons and convince them of the great value of better methods.

Tobacco for Plant Lice.

Coarsely-ground tobacco is good for nothing as an insecticide, under ordinary circumstances. When finely ground, it can be used dry with good effect against plant lice and soft-bodied insects generally.

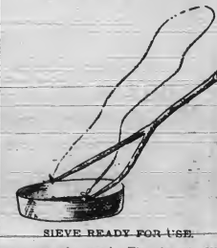
In the form of a decoction it may be prepared by using one pound of coarsely ground tobacco or chopped stems or refuse and pouring through it one gallon of boiling water. This decoction will be effective against plant lice of almost all kinds and is the cleanest material that can be used on house plants.—J. B. Smith, in Farm and Home.

NUT TREES FOR TIMBER.

An Industry Which Promises Large Returns in Cash Profits as Well as in Pleasure.

Much is now being accomplished in educating the public to the importance of timber preservation and the rehabilitating of our forests, but something more seems necessary, as the preservation of what remains of our native forests only postpones the day of reckoning.

The especial value of hickory, chestnut and walnut lumber is our occasion for urging the consideration of the planting of nut trees for their timber value, which will incidentally produce a valuable by-product in the nuts grown; thus making such a plantation a valuable property years before its maturity for lumber. This harvesting of annual crops also obviates, to a great extent the chief impediment in the way of planting for lumber only by the long time investment. By this plan the man who plants and cares for his nut grove is rewarded during his own day by the annual crops and his children have a veritable heritage in the lumber.



The present is none too soon to begin planting for such purposes. The consumption of lumber of all kinds is increasing much more rapidly than in proportion to the increase of population. In 50 years the United States may have double its present population, and who can predict what the demand for black walnut, chestant or hickory lumber may be by that time? One thing is certain; if consumption continues as at present there will be no lumber of these kinds on the market unless the trees are planted by this generation.

Besides this, there are great tracts of land in many sections which are not well adapted to ordinary agricultural operations which are peculiarly suited for growing timber. Our mountain ranges are the natural home of the chestnut. Bottom lands which overflow too frequently for farming are often well adapted for the rapid growth of hickory and walnut, so that the waste places seem to be intended for such beneficent uses as growing timber and food.—J. F. Wilson, in Nut Grower.

KILLING POTATO BUGS.

An Excellent Way of Applying Poisonous Substances Thoroughly, Cheaply and Rapidly.

Poisoning potato bugs by hand on large plants is generally considered hard work. For the easiest way—and the best if one does not wish to use Bordeaux at the same time, for blight—is this: Take an old-fashioned flour sieve holding six or eight quarts and attach it to a crooked stick with two branches, as shown in cut. A short search in almost any tree will find one of the right shape. It is fastened to the sieve by three small bits of wire through gimlet holes in sieve. A stout piece of twine reaches from the two ends of the stick around the operator's neck to support the weight. Instead of sieve a light box with wirecloth bottom may be used. The sieve is filled with a dry mixture of paris green and land plaster or flour, one pound to 100 thoroughly mixed. The handle is carried in one hand, the weight being on the neck and not noticed, while the other hand carries a very light stick, with which the sieve is lightly tapped when over each potato hill. The poison is very thoroughly, economically and rapidly applied, and above all the work is very light. The sieve is held over a pan while filling, to avoid waste.—E. N. Barrett, in Epitomist.

Cause of Dairy Prosperity.

The remarkable increase in the production of milk and butter in the United States in the last decade was due far more to increased yield per cow than to increase in the number of cows. There is plenty of opportunity for an equally great increase in the production per cow during the present decade. As farmers become more careful and accurate in determining the relative production of their cows, the culling of their herds becomes more rigorous. This immediately raises the average standard of production and tends, by aid of the laws of heredity, to increase the producing capacity of the descendants of cows retained for dairy purposes.—Midland Farmer.

Don't Dicker with Strangers.

Sign no papers for any strangers, or on any pretext, in any circumstances on any promise of profit, on the ground that they are contracts, or for any other offered reason. Signatures are binding. You cannot expect the courts and juries to take your word against your signature. Simply refuse, always and absolutely, to sign papers for traveling strangers, who claim to be able and willing to enrich you suddenly and enormously. The bigger the promises the fakirs make, the surer your signature will be to get you into trouble. Everything you need you can buy from established business concerns. No not dicker with traveling strangers.—Midland Farmer.

MUSCLE AND VITALITY.

Athlete Potato Out How Development of One May Result in Destroying the Other.

It is the custom during the early summer afternoons and evenings for men interested in boating to wander along Harlem Heights and watch the crews getting in trim for their annual contests. Among this number lately was a man who was once the best all-around athlete in the east and who has now attained eminence in the medical profession of New York. His opinion of the men in the various boats, as expressed to a reporter for the New York Times, was that the appeared too eager to sacrifice vigor for muscle.

"The popular notion is," he said, "that the bigger and more conspicuous an oarsman's biceps are the more vigor he has. As a matter of fact the relation between the size of a man's muscles and his vitality is not nearly so close as is generally supposed. Some of the strongest athletes I have known have gone under at critical moments because of insufficient vitality. They had built up tremendous and powerful muscles on the exterior of their bodies at the sacrifice of the power within the body that we call vitality.

"It is a comparatively easy thing for any ambitious athlete to develop large muscles and do it with such success that he will almost ruin his staying powers. Certain exercises carried on moderately that tend to build up muscular tissue will also build up vitality, but it is an indirect and not a direct relation. If you will notice some of the men in the practice crews, they have sunken eyes, drawn cheeks, and show very clearly the effects of the vital strain under which they are practicing. If I mistake not, many of them will be compelled either to take a good rest or drop out before the final contests.

"The same thing is true," he continued, "of men in business life. When a man comes to me for nervous treatment I usually find that he has been working too long. But it is more difficult for me to get him to shorten his hours than it is to induce him to take medicines. The hardest and most disagreeable prescription to some men is rest. The men of greatest force in the world are the men of greatest vitality. A man who takes care of himself and does not overwork or overstimulate will resist disease where another man, under precisely similar circumstances, will succumb to it.

"We all know busy men who are not sick, but who have comparatively little physical power. They lack vigor and they cannot stand the strain of hard work. Professional baseball players and men who play golf are not necessarily men of muscle; but they are men of good vitality. There, I have been preaching a little sermon from Harlem Heights; but if some men will take a hint from it and develop the vitality that will surely avail them in time of unusual strain, mental or physical, I shall not have talked in vain."

TOO FASCINATING GOLF.

A London Authority Says the Game Is Apt to Lead Players Into Over-Indulgence.

If "the healthy mind in the healthy body" is a truism much employed by our profession, so is the equally obvious proverb, "Enough is as good as a feast." Too much time is spent over golf and men bring to bear on the game an industry and devotion to detail which ought to be expended upon more serious things, says the London Lancet. This kind of enthusiasm for a form of recreation cannot be regarded as merely a struggle to maintain the standard of physical health on which mental health depends. It must rather be looked upon as immoderate attention to a fascinating sport and must be guarded against like any other form of excess.

It is an admirable thing in golf—which we admit to be an excellent game, even while we desire to say a warning word against its cult—that it cannot be played carelessly and that assiduous practice is required after the position in the handicap list that is somewhat contemptuously described as "domestic twelve" has been reached, if a higher standard is to be attained. It is exactly here that golf proves, to our thinking, a pitfall to many men—some of them of our profession.

Whatever is worth doing is worth doing well is an axiom that every medical man and every thinking man must cordially indorse. As no one can play golf really well without the sacrifice of much time the working man is soon brought to a parting of three ways. Shall he leave off playing the game in which he can only excel by much expenditure of time? or shall he continue to play moderately a game in which he feels he could, and he would, play much better? or shall he give more thought than is right to what, at best, is but laborious idleness?

We hope that all our readers will take the middle course. Let them reap the undoubted good that is offered to them by a break in their round of toil and by brisk exercise on open hill and heath, and let those of them who are not brilliant exponents of golf recognize cheerfully that excellence can only come by the neglect of more important things.

Peru's Presidents.

Most of the presidents of Peru have been soldiers. They have attained power by the aid of the army, and at the expiration of their constitutional terms have usually endeavored to continue themselves in office by the same means. They have been practically dictators, and their rivalries have kept the country in a state of turmoil.—N. Y. Sun.

CHILDREN HAVE POOR SIGHT.

Startling Condition of Pupils Attending Schools in The City of London.

It is estimated that in the schools of the London school board 60,000 children suffer from defective sight, and if metropolitan voluntary schools are included the numbers brought up to about 80,000.

At a recent meeting of the board it was stated that 80 per cent. of the children possessed normal sight, ten per cent. have fair vision, and the sight of the remain ten per cent. is bad. Regarding the latter the sight of two or three per cent. is very bad.

Every child on entering a senior department in future will have his or her sight tested by the teacher, the test to be repeated annually. Those who have defective vision will be carefully examined by the board's oculist, and cards will be given to such children to take to their parents, pressing the need of medical advice.

To carry out the experiment the board has engaged for one year the services of an oculist for three days a week, and five assistants for three half-days a week, at a cost of £275.

FAMOUS CLOCK FOR POPE.

The Gift of the Count of Caserta Is a Marvelous Piece of Mechanism.

One of the most precious of Pope Leo's gifts is the famous Farnese clock presented by the count of Caserta to the house of Bourbon.

The clock was made in 1728 at Plaisance by a noted Italian mathematician, Bernard Facini. It was first presented to Elizabeth Farnese on her marriage to King Philip of Spain. The octagonal case is of ebony and crystal, incrusted with precious stones, and the works are ornamented with magnificent sapphires. It bears a pompous latin inscription to the glory of Elizabeth Farnese and the name of its maker.

To make it an appropriate gift to the pope it is to be surmounted by two silver angels supporting Leo XIII's coat-of-arms. It records the duration of daylight and darkness, according to the season, the position of the sun in relation to the constellations, and is wound only once in 14 years.

BREAK ALL GUN RECORDS.

Crew of Battleship Indiana Makes Fourteen Hits in Sixteen Shots with Thirteen-Inch Guns.

The superiority of the gunners of the American navy was emphasized the other day when the crew of the battleship Indiana, at target practice in the gulf, established a new world's record in firing 13-inch guns. The ship entered Pensacola harbor in the afternoon and reported to Admiral Higginson that the gunners of the turret had scored 14 hits out of 16 shots with the 13-inch pieces, at a range of five miles lowering the world's record by one shot. Admiral Higginson ordered the jackies on every ship of the North Atlantic squadron to cheer the Indiana and its crew as it steamed past them up the harbor.

Wireless Ship Telegraphy.

The North of France Railway company has decided to install wireless telegraphy on its Dover-Calais cross-channel steamships Nord and Pas de Calais. A land station will be erected at the harbor station, Calais. Some time ago an effort was made to introduce wireless telegraphy on all the packets running between Dover and Calais, but the obstructive tactics of the English postal authorities prevented a receiving station being erected on their side of the channel.

MISSOURI'S MILLION.

How It Is to Be Spent at the World's Fair.

A MAGNIFICENT STATE BUILDING.

Kentucky Only Wants One-Tenth as Much as Her Daughter to Advertise a Wealth of Products and Resources Quite as Great.

Missouri is spending one million dollars upon the State exhibit at the World's Fair. The State Commission, well organized, is pushing the work in every department. The State will appear at its best in all the great exhibit palaces of the Exposition.

Since Missouri is to act as hostess to all states the Commission expects to have the finest state building ever erected at an exposition. It will cost with its furnishing and landscaping about $250,000. The building is over 300 feet long and has a magnificent site on a hill southeast of the United States Government building. Work was begun on this building early in May.

The collection of exhibits has been in progress some time. Specimens of this year's crops throughout the state will be carefully stored until the time for installation. Each ear of corn for example will be wrapped in tissue paper that it may lose none of its valued qualities before it is placed on display. Fruits will be placed in cold storage as the season progresses, in order that all varieties may be included in the exhibit next year.

In the Live Stock department the Missouri mule will take a prominent part. Among the mules will be seen the largest mule on earth, a three-year-old mare belonging to Michael Murry, of Herefors. She is 18 hands high, or six feet at the shoulders, and weighs 1,705 pounds.

A fine display of horses, cattle, hogs and poultry is also being provided for in this department.

Specimens of the mineral products of the state are being collected and classified. The exhibit of zinc will be the most extensive, as Missouri produced three-fourths of the world's output of this ore.

The prospects for an exhibit of fish from the streams and lakes of Missouri are excellent. The exhibit will be confined to native fishes and to those varieties which have demonstrated their adaptability to the waters and conditions of this latitude. Fish are now being caught and being placed in aquariums from which they will be transferred to the State section of the Fisheries building.

Schools and colleges throughout the State are preparing specimens of their work for the Educational exhibit. The public school system will be fully exemplified. To do this successfully all the educators of the State and those interested in education are working industriously.

In the collecting of other branches of Missouri's large display the work is being vigorously pushed.

Missouri is to spend a million dollars at the Fair. Kentucky, the mother of Missouri, certainly will be able to raise $100,000 for making a display of her products and resources.

WASHINGTON AT MORRISTOWN.

New Jersey Reproduces Revolutionary Hero's Headquarters as Her State Building at the Fair.

Ford's old tavern at Morristown, which at one time during the war of the Revolution was General Washington's headquarters, will be reproduced at the World's Fair, St. Louis, as New Jersey's State building.

The historic structure, which will be reproduced with fidelity, will cost $20,000. New Jersey has already appropriated $100,000, and is arranging for a liberal increase. Her industrial and educational exhibits will be as interesting in their way as the old Ford tavern is in the State's history.

The famous men of early days who were sheltered by the old tavern when the colonies were engaged in the memorable struggle for freedom, includes Alexander Hamilton, Lafayette and Kosciusko, Israel Putnam, Philip Schuyler and others.

Are you an educator? If so, you will want to go to the World's Fair next year. Why not enter the School Teachers' Popularity Contest being conducted by the Kentucky Exhibit Association and get one of the 120 free trips that will be given the most popular educators? Full particulars and blank ballots sent on application to the Secretary, R. E. Hughes, Louisville, Ky.

Kentucky will be the only State in the Union with two coal displays in the Mines and Metallurgy building. One will be in the regular Kentucky [illegible] the other is [illegible] will [illegible]

Albert T. Cloud, born Dec. 14, 1816, in Indiana, died at the home of his son-in-law, R. W. Huey, at Plymouth, Ill., on June 20th. His first wife was a son of Rev. Joseph Botts. Mr. Cloud was a citizen of this county from the time he was three years old, until his parents moved to Illinois. He was a pioneer citizen of that State, and was noted for benovolence, veracity and honesty, and was fearless in the discharge of all his duties.

The news of the death of Dr. Paris B. Parker of Yellow Fever, on Ship Island in the Gulf of Mexico, was received here by telephone late Monday evening. He was a son of Elijah Parker, of Petersburg, and a brother of County Judge Cason's wife. Last May he completed a four years course in the Ohio Medical College, and soon thereafter he located in Mobile, Alabama, and, in the absence of information, it is supposed that he was on a gulf voyage when he contracted the disease. Paris Parker was a very promising young man, and a great favorite with everyone of his acquaintances.

Mrs. Mary E. Cochran, relict of the late Wm. Cochran, who was one of Carroll county's most prominent citizens and most elegant old gentleman, died at the residence of her granddaughter, Mrs. Jos. P. Blackwell, on the English pike, last Tuesday morning at four o'clock, aged about 74 years. She was a most estimable old lady, loved by everyone who knew her. She leaves three children to mourn her loss —Dr. R. W. Cochran, the eminent oculist of Madison, Thos. J. Cochran and Mrs. Nannie Corbin, of this county. She was an exemplary member of the Christian church, and after services at the house this morning at 10 o'clock by Ed Lawrence Williams her remains will be laid to rest in the Odd Fellows' cemetery.—Carrollton News.

W. T. German died last Wednesday at 3 p. m., in the 77th year of his age, and he and his wife, who was in her 81st year, were interred in the same grave in the Odd-Fellows' cemetery at 11 a. m. last Friday, in the presence of a large concourse of friends. The funeral services were conducted by Burlington Masonic lodge, of which he had been a faithful member for many years, and nearly every member of the lodge was present. Mr. German was a man who never shirked a duty, and was always ready to bear his part in anything that would redound to the welfare of a friend or the interest of the public. He served through the civil war on the side of the Confederacy, and his comrades say there was not a braver man in the ranks. He and his wife believed in the teachings of the Baptist church, and held their membership at Bullittsburg.

The editor of the Glasgow Times has been asked: "Do you not know that the Hargis faction in Breathitt county is Democratic?

The editor of the Glasgow Times does know that the Hargis faction in the Breathitt county feud is Democratic.

The editor of the Times does know that Judge James Hargis, the leader of one of the Breathitt county factions, is a Democrat and a member of the Democratic State Central Committee—a position he should at once resign or be forced out of.

The editor of the Times does know that J. B. Marcum was assassinated just after he filed notice of contest for an office in Breathitt county, and that Jett, a nephew of Judge Hargis, is on trial for the murder.

But what has any of this, or all of this, to do with the present condition of affairs in Breathitt? No Democrat has any more right to assassinate a Republican than has a Republican to shoot a Democrat in the back. The assassin belongs to no party. He is an outlaw, a blood thirsty beast whose extermination is the duty of every brave, honest man. If it is true that the murderers and ambushers of Breathitt county are Democrats, then so much the more and stronger the reason why they should be relentlessly hunted down and brought to justice. Democracy is not the party of assassination.

The outlaws who are murdering citizens and burning homes in Breathitt county are assassins—not —Democrats.—Glasgow Times.

The average American farm hand in common with the members of other American employes lives better and does better than his contemporaries in any other country in the world. Some figures presented by our consul-general to Sweden show a marked contrast of conditions. The average yearly wage of a farm hand in that Kingdom is shown to be $54.67 or less than $5 a month, and that of a woman servant, $28.15 a year. This is higher than any average which has ever been paid before and is pointed to as a sign of the improvement of the condition of labor. These figures are the average, but it is stated that as high as $73.70 has been paid for a year's work in the northern province. Other figures presented, however, do not show a condition of extravagant living on the part of the hired hands. At the wages above quoted, board and lodging are of course provided, but the average cost for food and lodging is stated to be, for men $67 per year and for women about $40 per year on an average of about $2 a week for board and lodging for two people. The highest wages paid for farm hands are during the summer season for [illegible] labor [illegible] hands [illegible] to [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

The first week of the field work on the illustrated edition the RECORDER will issue in the near future, indicates that the people of Boone county are going to take hold of the enterprise in a liberal manner. The larger the number of persons and firms represented in the edition the more interesting it will be at the time of its appearance and the more valuable in the years to come. Besides the biographical sketches, it will contain a brief history of the county and other features that will add to its value and make it a desirable paper to preserve.

Cholera Infantum.

This has long been regarded as one of the most dangerous and fatal diseases to which infants are subject. It can be cured, however, when properly treated. All that is necessary is to give Chamberlain's Colic Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and castor oil, as directed with each bottle and a cure is certain. For Sale by all Druggists.

Judge J. M. Lassing, last week, rendered judgment in the Owen Circuit Court against The Cincinnati Enquirer, The Cincinnati Times-Star and the Cincinnati Tribune in sums of $10,000, $2,500 and $2,500 respectively, under indictment for felony found by the grand jury at the last term of Circuit court, for setting up an enterprise of chance and hazard, whereby 50 cents was to be paid for a guess on the number of votes cast at the last November election. Large sums of money were taken from the country without regard to class or condition. The papers made no defense claiming that the money could not be collected as they had no property in Kentucky. This decision will doubtless cause the Courier-Journal and other Kentucky papers to withdraw similiar propositions relative to the coming elections.—News-Herald.

BASE BALL.

Last Saturday was a very lively day in Burlington, a large crowd coming in early to witness the games of ball and other festivities billed for the fourth. The game of ball in the morning was poorly played and resulted in a victory for Petersburg by a score of 8 to 3. Gordon struck out 5; Hughes, 2; Petersburg made 4 single and 1 double hit; Burlington made 6 hits and a home run, Houston turning the home run trick.

The game in the afternoon was a nice contest until the ninth inning, when the Petersburg team made three runs, making the score 5 to 3 in their favor. In their half of this inning the Boones put two more men across the home plate, but Petersburg claimed that the third man was out before the two men crossed the home plate. As it now stands Petersburg claimes the game 5 to 4 while the Boones say it was a tie.

The following is the score by innings:

Boones	1 0 0 2 0 0 0 0 2—5
Petersburg	0 1 0 0 0 0 1 0 3—5

Struck out—By Hoffman, 7; by Houston, 2; base hits, Crisler, Brady, Theete 2, Hoffman, Clutterbuck 2, Bullock; two base hit, Bahn; home run, Houston.

In the evening a large crowd assembled on the ball ground and witnessed the display of fire works, which lasted about an hour, when Welsh's show was visited by a crowd that packed his tent. It was the liveliest fourth of July Burlington has experienced in many years.

The Burlington third nine played two games of ball at Bellevue, last Saturday, losing both, the morning game by a score of 24 to 12, and the afternoon game by 12 to 8. A large crowd witnessed each game. Smith and McAtee, Slayback and Rockwell, were the batteries in the morning; Smith and McAtee; Kirkpatrick and Harve Smith, in the afternoon. The Burlington boys were delighted with the treatment they received and say they never partook of a better dinner than was served. The excellent treatment more than overceme the defeats they received.

The duties of a base ball umpire are specifically set forth in sections 65 to 69 inclusive of "the base ball guide, and nowhere is there any provision making it the duty of the umpire, or giving him the right or power to decide whether or not a run shall be scored. Rule 54 provides for the scoring of runs, and is as follows:

"One run shall be scored every time a base runner, after having legally touched the first three bases, shall touch the the home base before three men are put out. (Exception) If the third man is forced out, or is put out before reaching first base, a run shall not be scored."

This is the only rule we have on the subject of whether a run or runs shall be scored in a game of base ball. That being the case it was clearly not within the province of either of the umpires officiating in the game played in Burlington on the afternoon of July 4th, 1903, between the Burlington and Petersburg teams, to decide whether or not the two runs, or either of them made by the Burlington team in the last inning should have been counted. My decision at the time was that the last run should not have been scored, but the home team questioned, then and there, not only the accuracy of my judgment as to the order in which the plays were made, but, also, my right or authority, to make any decision at all, so far as the scoring of runs was concerned. If, as a matter of fact, I had no right, under the rules governing the game, to make any decision at all as to whether or not these runs, or either of them, should have been scored, then the accuracy or inaccuracy of my judgment in making the decision that I did make, is no longer important, and upon a careful examination of the rules defining the duties of an umpire and governing a game of base ball, I am very free to say that I am now convinced that I had no right to render any decision at all as to whether the two runs, or either of them should have been scored. In professional base ball the official score keeper would alone have the right to score the runs or not as in his judgment he sees fit. O. M. ROGERS.

In all large cities they have carriers to deliver the mail two or three times a day at the door. In small towns the citizens have the postoffice near them and do not have to lose any time in order to get their mail. The rural people have to go from one to five miles more to get their mail. Some times a very important mail is delayed, then they have to make several trips, scarcely ever losing less than a half of a day. The rural people know what it is to lose time at some seasons of the year. The government established a free rural delivery and published instructions how to get it established. Wishing to have the benefit of F. R. D., we wrote for instructions so as to get a route established. We laid out the route from Burlington, four miles on the Burlington and Bellevue pike; thence the Woolper pike to the Berkshire school house; from there to Burlington. We presented a petition to the people on this route and with few exceptions every one, after understanding it, was very anxious for it, and signed the petition, which we forwarded to the department. It was filed and an agent was sent here to inspect the route. He reported favorably to the route. The department wrote for reduction of toll on these pikes. The boards for these pikes made a small reduction in the toll, but in the time the department ruled that no more routes would be allowed on toll roads. We received notice to that effect and a request to see what could be done. We presented a petition to the board for the Burlington and Bellevue pikes, a majority of the owners of which would receive no benefit by the service, but they very generously gave a free toll. We then presented the petition to the Burlington and Petersburg turnpike board, and they refused to give a free toll priviledge, thereby blocking the route.

There are about 400 readers and mail receivers and mail senders on this route, who are blocked off of the greatest benefit the department ever offered the rural people, and by whom? Scarcely half a dozen people, and why? Gentlemen, you do not make anything by stopping this route. You first claimed it would interfere with your postoffice, and your mail carrier. You have a system there that a F. R. D. would be no benefit to you, and the department pays for it. If you payed for it privately and our route would interfere with it, it would be wrong for us to ask the favor of you, and we would not. The department does not want to interfere with your postoffice, nor your mail carrier, and proposes to stop delivery mail east of your office, and not deliver any more matter until it gets west of it.

The agent decided that the carrier had to go by way of Petersburg pike and return by Bellevue pike. Should a person living on the line prefer the F. R. D. he has the right to get it.

As the department has decided not to interfere with your office and you gain nothing by not giving us the right of way, what would you lose by doing so? You say the little toll that it would be would amount to nothing, also the wear of the pike by the little mail wagon you would not miss. You cannot stop the carrier from traveling your road, but you could stop his wages for your toll. We would pay his toll, rather than not have service but the department would not have it. They take the ground where they furnish the system that they must have free way.

When Ludlow was getting its route started they went to Mr. Harrison Clore and the other pike company, and they gave them the free pass on their pikes. Anyone passing over that line could not fail to see the great benefit of it. Gentlemen, we hope you will reconsider the move and give a free pass over your turnpike.

Kentucky people are brave and generous in common and when they see the benefit of an enterprise like the F. R. D. they will not be held back by three or four persons, especially when they see that those same persons are getting the same thing they are after, and the department is paying for it. You have a horror of free pikes, so do we. It is not the taxes that hurts but where would our roads go? The Arkansas traveler said his road did not go anywhere, but ours would go down the creek. The statutes in regard to funerals and public worship may be amended so as to include F. R. D. if not, then let us have free pikes.

THE STRANGLER'S TRIAL.

Knapp Feels Confident That He Will Not Be Convicted.

Hamilton, O., June 30.—Eight witnesses were examined Monday afternoon in the trial of Alfred A. Knapp for alleged wife murder. The jury was completed at 11:30 o'clock, and the statements of counsel occupied the session until noon. It is evident that the defense will try to upset the confessions made to Mayor Bosch, the sheriff and police, as Lawyer Darby asserted in his opening speech that Knapp absolutely denied all knowledge of his wife's death, and would continue to do so regardless of any possible testimony by the state.

Hamilton, O., July 1.—Several witnesses from New Albany, Ind., where the body of Hannah Knapp was found, were called Tuesday afternoon in the Knapp murder case. Albert Rusk, a roustabout of the steamer Bellevue, described the finding of the corpse on March 2 and identified the jewelry taken from it. Coroner Stars said that he held an inquest, but was not allowed to give his verdict. Undertaker Edward M. Scharader could not identify the jewelry but added the important fact that there was no water in the lungs or stomach of the corpse. Chief of Police Adams, of New Albany, and Officer Hedbrick, of Hamilton, were the last witnesses of Tuesday, but contributed nothing material. The state will close its case Wednesday.

Hamilton, O., July 2.—Mrs. Knapp, mother of the alleged strangler, testified Wednesday in his behalf. She told of injuries received by her son when a child that affected his mind. Mrs. Knapp, while considerably shaken as to details, clung to her principal statement persistently. The deposition of Mrs. M. T. Marshall, Knapp's former teacher at Madison, Ind., was read after Mrs. Knapp left the stand. Miss Marshall said that Knapp was a dull, disobedient boy, incapable of learning and lacking in her opinion, all discrimination between right and wrong.

Hamilton, O., July 3.—Among the witnesses Thursday were Reuben Hagman, William Maher, Charles E. McCarthy, John Cleary, John Smith, William Wallingford and Mrs. Martha Reis, all of Cincinnati. These people all knew Knapp well about 1886, and though each recited different details of Knapp's peculiar traits, their testimony was practically the same. All were of the opinion that Knapp was abnormally fond of "showing off" and that he was insane. He associated with younger boys and was frequently doing things intended to impress them. He used often to buy a pitcher of beer and throw it into the street, sometimes breaking the pitcher as well. Knapp was incessantly trying to flirt with the girls in the cotton factory across the street from his home and sometimes he pursued them and stoned them as they returned from work. He occasionally appeared in the streets in cold weather without coat or shoes. At one time he procured a "Fall of Babylon" costume and paraded the streets in it. Knapp himself feels confident that he will not be convicted.

THE YACHT RACE.

A Seaman on the Columbia Was Washed Overboard.

Newport, R. I., July 3.—For the first time in the history of American 30-footers a fatal accident occurred Thursday. Carl B. Olsen, a seaman on the old cup defender Columbia, was washed from the bowsprit just before the yacht reached the first turn in Thursday's race and was drowned.

Out of respect to the dead man, the Columbia withdrew from the race.

There will be no more racing until the yachts start on the New York Yacht club's cruise.

Thursday's race was also marred by a mishap to the Constitution. Soon after the start it carried away the jaws of its gaff and the great steel spar, swinging forward, buckled in the center. The mainsail was ripped clear across several times and rendered al most worthless.

The Reliance received the severest buffeting it has had since launching. The sea was a terrific one for racing yachts and when the yacht reached its moorings it was noticed that it had a big dent five feet long in the bronze plating close to the waterline on the port bow. The indentation was similar to that the Constitution sustained two years ago. The Reliance sailed splendidly in Tuesday's event. The wind blew more than 20 miles an hour and all three yachts went off under the three lower sails only.

The Reliance with no craft to push it and with only a No. 1 jib topsail hoisted in addition to the three lower sails, came to the finish line from the second turn in 47 minutes 10 seconds, the fastest ten mile leg ever sailed.

ARE HELD IN SLAVERY.

Habeas Corpus Proceedings For Release of Negroes.

They Will Then Be Taken to Montgomery as Witnesses Before the Grand Jury Which May Indict the Transgressors.

Indianapolis, Ind., July 3.—A special from Montgomery, Ala., by a staff representative of the Morning Star Thursday night says:

Alabama people labor under the impression that the prosecution of those now under indictment from Coosa and Tallapoosa counties will be the end of the present peonage sensations.

But they are mistaken. Developments in the near future will prove a veritable bombshell.

Information is now in the hands of federal officials that Negroes by the wholesale are being held in bondage just as they were by the Pace-Cosby ring in Tallapoosa and by J. J. Turner in Coosa county.

This information is for the present jealously guarded by officials, who will discuss the matter with no one. They are not yet in position to act, but have applied at the headquarters in Washington for especial authority that will enable them to take vigorous steps.

And they have received assurances that they will get what they ask, and that, too, within a few days, probably within a week.

What they will institute habeas corpus proceedings in the federal courts for the release of Negroes now held in slavery, condemned after mock trials, before magistrates doing the bidding of white plantation owners, who pay them for their services. Then, having obtained the release of these Negroes or peons the officials will have them brought to Montgomery as witnesses before the United States grand jury which may indict those who caused them to be held in servitude.

In most cases the guilty parties are prominent men.

There will be many scores and possibly hundreds of Negroes released in this manner. Many have been in bondage for years.

PROTECTION OF NEGROES.

The National Anti-Mob and Lynch Law Association Meets.

Springfield, O., July 3.—At a meeting of the National Anti-Mob and Lynch Law association Thursday night it was unanimously decided to petition congress and the president for some legislation for "the protection of the Negroes of the country from lynchers and slave drivers. If the rulers of the United States fail to remedy the evils which exist then we appeal to the Christian nations of Europe."

The meeting was attended by President H. C. Jenkins, Vice President J. L. Harris, Secretary U. E. Huffman, and National Organizer C. F. Hines. After the meeting the secretary said that it was "better for all the Negroes in the country to die at once than to be killed one at a time."

By that time it is believed that all architects, artists and sculptors desiring to enter the competition will have submitted their designs.

Butte, Mont., July 3.—Prof. Cooley, of the state agricultural college at Bozeman, has returned from an investigation of the district about Forsythe which is suffering from grasshoppers. He says the insects have devoured everything in a strip 70 miles long and 50 miles wide and that range conditions are the worst he ever saw. He says the plains are dotted with cattle that have starved to death as a result of the grasshopper raids.

A TERRIFIC STORM.

Loss of Life and Damage to Property in New York City.

New York, July 3.—A terrific storm Tuesday followed a period of intense heat. There were four deaths from the heat Thursday and a score or more of prostrations. Already three deaths, directly due to the storm, have been reported, and many persons caught in the fury of the wind were injured.

At one time the gale blew at the rate of 72 miles an hour in the upper part of New York, according to the weather bureau. Many places were struck by lightning, which played continuously for an hour or more. A great section of the Manhattan field fence was blown down and there was almost a panic among the thousands of men and women who had gathered at the Polo grounds adjoining to witness the New York and St. Louis baseball game. The Polo grounds were flooded with a foot of water, the game was off and the attention of the officials and police was directed to getting the half panic-stricken baseball spectators to a place of safety.

A wind of extremely high velocity swept from west to east, uprooting trees, smashing plate-glass windows, blowing pedestrians from their footing and doing all kinds of damage. Rain and hail fell in torrents. Fannie Kinsler, 6 years old, blinded by the rain, ran under a wagon and was killed.

John Dominick, a laborer, was knocked into the East river by a plank which had been picked up by the wind and he was drowned.

The wind swept the embers of a bonfire, kindled by a number of boys, over the pinafore of Clarence Halden, 3 years old, and he was burned to death.

Miss Mary Carman was dashed by the wind against the Flatiron building and so severely injured that she had to be taken to the New York asspital.

Among the places struck by lightning or damaged by the gale were the Church of the Divine Paternity in Central Park West, the Hotel Normandie, the Lancaster apartment house in West End avenue and the Arbuckle building in Water street.

A squall overturned a catboat at Sandy Hook. Launches from Sir Thomas Lipton's yacht Erin were sent out at once to the boat's assistance, and several men and women were rescued, and the catboat was taken in tow.

THE AUTOMOBILE RACE.

Wretchedly Bad Showing Made By the American Team.

Bally Shannon, Ireland, July 3.—The international automobile race for the James Gordon Bennett cup was run Thursday and won by Jonathy, a member of the German team, who covered the distance of 370¾ miles in 6 hours 38 minutes and 9 seconds, including the stops imposed by the regulations. Two members of the French team ran each other so close for second place that it will not be known until Friday whether De Knyff or Farman is entitled to the honor.

The most remarkable feature of the great race was its practical immunity from serious accidents and the wretched showing by the American team. At Bally Shannon, which is headquarters for the race, no news had been received Thursday night of any one being injured except the English crack, Jarrott, and his chauffeur. Jarrott had a narrow escape from death and now lies with a broken collar bone and a broken leg. Both, however, are doing well.

THE SUBURBAN RENEWAL.

Haggin's Water Boy Won the $12,000 Stake at Sheepshead Bay.

New York, July 3.—Before a crowd of 30,000 persons, J. B. Haggin's Water Boy, with Odom up, won the Suburban Renewal, worth $12,000, at Sheepshead Bay Thursday. The black son of Watercress broke the track record for the mile and a quarter by covering the distance in 2:04 3-5, which is two-fifths of a second faster than the previous record made by the mighty Salvator in 1890. The Brooklyn Handicap winner, Irish Lad, was second and Goldsmith, the favorite, a bad third.

RIOT AT EVANSVILLE.

An Attempt to Lynch a Negro Caused a Race War.

City in the Hands of a Mob—Several Persons Were Killed and Wounded on Both Sides—Hardware Stores Broken Into.

Evansville, Ind., July 7.—At 1 o'clock Monday morning this city was in the hands of a mob. The troops have been ordered out by the governor to protect the jail, which is surrounded by 2,000 men. Two Negroes have been killed in the race riot, which is rampant. The crowd around the jail, incensed at the murder of a patrolman by a Negro, is shouting death to all Negroes. The Negro has been secretly removed to Vincennes, but the mob refuses to believe it and is trying to tear down the jail. Stone masons in the mob are chiseling out the bars of the windows and a battering ram is being used. A white boy has been shot by a Negro, an unknown Negro woman has been killed and several Negroes have been seriously injured.

The race riot Sunday was the immediate outcome of the shooting of Patrolman Massey Friday night by Leo Brown, a Negro. Brown and another Negro had engaged in a quarrel and Brown had sworn to kill his antagonist. He ran toward his home to secure a revolver and Patrolman Massey, hearing of the trouble, lay in wait for Brown. As the Negro came back armed, hunting his enemy, Massey stepped from a doorway and laid his hand on his shoulder. Brown turned quickly, a revolver in hand, and shot the policeman in the abdomen. The officer as he lay on the sidewalk fired at Brown and wounded him dangerously. Massey died Saturday night.

The steel bars of the jail windows could not withstand the rain of blows from the battering rams of the mob. At 1 o'clock Monday morning the crowd swarmed in and began a search for the murderer. Police Capt. Breennecke tried to check their advance by turning the hose upon them. When he appeared at the window, holding the nozzle, a rain of bullets was sent through the window. The captain retreated and no further attempt was made to keep the mob out. A mob of 200 white men heavily armed was marching through the streets of the city where Negroes would be likely to be found. Shots were heard constantly. It was reported that another Negro had been shot in First street.

Monday morning the crowds on the streets were increasing, and firing could be heard in all directions. Disorder and deadly rioting were everywhere and every one of the thousands on the streets was carrying his life in his hands. The police were being cheered for numerous arrests of the Negroes they were making. Every time a Negro was taken into custody the police were applauded and hundreds of people were following the wagon. A whole patrol wagon load of Negroes was picked up on Water street and about 300 shots were fired as they passed up Main street. The mob was still going through the streets looking for Negroes.

After the mob had been in the jail only a few minutes word was brought that a gang of Negroes was congregating at Budd Fruit's saloon, at No. 415 Upper Fourth street, and was firing from windows and roof upon the whites as they passed.

The mob immediately decided to bombard it. A hundred or more armed men, upon command, fell into line and marched from the jail up Fourth street into the Market square, halting in front of Fruit's place. Negroes were to be seen below and in most of the windows, but they quickly dispersed upon the arrival of the mob. Then, upon command of the leader, a volley of 100 shots was fired into the building, completely wrecking it. It was known at the time that there was a large number of Negroes in the saloon. It is thought that many of them were hid in the large buildings surrounding the saloon. Several are reported shot, but no dead bodies have been brought in.

STARTING IT RIGHT.

This Woman Was Superstitious About Having Thirteen Stamps on Her Package.

"How much postage will this package require?" asked a woman at the window of the Havenswood postal station, relates the Chicago Daily News.

"Thirteen cents," was the answer.

"Just exactly 13?"

"Yes."

"Think it would go all right?"

"Sure!"

"Wouldn't it go for 12 cents?"

"No, madam."

"Hadn't I better put 14 cents on it?"

"What for?"

"Thirteen is unlucky, you know. Wouldn't it get lost?"

"Scarcely."

"Wouldn't it be sure to fetch up at the dead-letter office?"

"Hardly."

"Some pilfering clerk would steal it?"

"Uncle Sam's clerks are honest."

"Well, that may be, but I'm not going to start that stuff away from here with a hoodoo amount of postage sticking to it. The address would rub off, it would get smashed in the mail, even if it didn't roll out of the car and get under the wheels. That's not all. If the woman to whom it is addressed discovered that it came to her home for 13 cents, she'd find fault with the goods, be cross for a week, and finally throw the whole thing into the fire. Here's another cent; make it 14 and start it right."

For Aged People.

Bellflower, Ill., July 6th.—Mr. G. V. Bolner, of this place, has written an open letter to the old men and women of the country, advising them to use Dodd's Kidney Pills as a remedy for those forms of Kidney trouble so common among the aged. Mr. Bolner says:

"I suffered myself for years with my Kidneys and urinary organs. I was obliged to get up as many as seven or eight times during the night.

"I tried many things with no success, till I saw one of Dodd's Almanacs, and read of what Dodd's Kidney Pills were doing for old people.

"I bought two boxes from one druggist, and began to use them at once. In a very short time I was well. This is over a year ago, and my trouble has not returned, so that I know my cure was a good, genuine, permanent one.

"I believe Dodd's Kidney Pills are a splendid medicine for old people or anyone suffering with Kidney and urinary troubles, for although I am 84 years of age, they have made me well."

Didn't Get Through.

They are laughing in Washington over a rebuke that a sentry of one of the departments administered recently to the Russian ambassador's coachman.

The coachman, it appears, wished to drive through a certain carriage way that for some reason was barred. When the sentry refused to let the carriage pass, the coachman remonstrated: "I drive," he said, "ze Russian minister."

"I can't help it," returned the sentry.

"Let me t'rough," persisted the coachman. "My master is ze Count Cassini, ze ambassador extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of ze czar of all ze Russias."

"Frenchy," said the sentry, "I wouldn't let you through even if your master was a free-born American citizen."—Boston Post.

New Wheat Fields in Southwest.

What would you think if told that the unirrigated sections of Western Kansas, Eastern Colorado and Panhandle of Texas can be counted on to produce 50,000,000 bushels of wheat annually? Yet that is what a government official predicts with reference to a new variety of that cereal imported from Russia, known as macaroni wheat. Recent experiments, as reported to the industrial department of the Santa Fe, show that this plant flourishes best where the rainfall is less than 15 inches a year. The yield per acre is equal to that of ordinary wheat, and the price received is about the same.

The Change.

"He used to kiss me every time we passed through a tunnel before our marriage," said the little woman, with sad reflection.

"And does he do so now?" asked the bosom friend.

"No, he takes a drink."—Chicago Daily News.

POPE CLINGS TO LIFE.

But His Death, it is Thought, is Very Near.

The Solemn and Gorgeous Ceremony of Administering the Last Sacrament Took Place at the Bedside of the Pontiff.

Rome, July 6.—In these days, when the life of the veneral pontiff, Pope Leo, hangs by a thread, the excitement and perturbation which prevails within the vatican is intense. While the illustrious patient lies in a quiet chamber, assiduously and affectionately watched and attended by his favorite physician, Dr. Lapponi, and his trusted valet, Piocentra, the rest of the vast palace is in a state of continual unrest. Telegrams are following each other in quick succession from foreign powers, high church dignaries or individuals, and are being read and answered by a busy staff of secretaries. Carriages are driving up incessantly to the court of St. Damaso, in which the apartments of the pope open.

The exact definition of the Pope's illness is senile adynamic pneumonia, but his holiness has not the least idea that he is attacked by any organic disease.

During the afternoon the strength of the pontiff began to fail him so rapidly and his condition became so critical that it appeared that only a few hours of his life remained to him. It was, therefore, deemed wise to advise him of his grave condition, and this was done with tender precaution. Pope Leo was thus prepared for his last communion, which was administered Sunday night with the participation of all the cardinals now in Rome and the whole of the pontifical court.

The solemn yet gorgeous ceremony of administering the last sacrament took place at the bedside of Popo Leo. The central figure was the dying pontiff, whose long life's journey is nearly over, calmly preparing to enter the dark valley. His pale and emaciated face, almost as white as the pillows on which it rested, showed little sign of life except the keen, glittering eyes, always his most striking feature.

Around the bed were grouped the noble guards in their glittering uniforms, the knights of the cloak and sword in their picturesque medieval costume of black with white ruffs, 25 cardinals, all the members of the sacred college who are present in Rome, stately and venerable figures in their sweeping crimson robes; the whole forming a scene of rich, yet subdued, coloring, a fit subject for the pencil of Rembrandt. The whole of what is called the pontifical family, headed by Cardinal Rampolla and including all the private chamberlains, were there.

Nearest to the bed stood the imposing, tall figure of the Cardinal Grand Penitentiary, Serafino Vannuttelli, with the pope's confessor, to hear the last confession of the departing pontiff. Then the priest apostolic approached bearing the vasticum to give the last communion and another the extreme unction, assisted by the grand penitentiary. Pope Leo feebly recited the confession of faith, as formulated by the council of Trent, and finally the words of absolution and the formula of indulgence in Articulo Morils were solmenly pronounced by the grand penitentiary. The heads of the great religious orders who were present granted the pope the special indulgences which they have the privilege of conferring. Then came the touching prayers for a passing soul and part of the gospel, the Lord's passion. As the last words died away, all fell on their knees. The pontiff, raising his almost transparent fingers with a feebie effort, pronounced in scarcely audible words his benediction on the sacred college and on all present and then sank back on the pillows. Thors was scarcely a tearless oye in the whole assemblage.

At 3 a. m. Monday, though hovering on the brink of death, the life of the pontiff was still prolonged by means of strong stimulants and concentrated nourishment, and while he is still barely alive his wonderful vitality may again resist and conquer the attack of this illness. Late Sunday evening after the excitement of the ceremony of the last sacraments was over, the pope seemed less restless, partly soothed by the religious service and partly by a dose of chloral, which was given to him in considerable quantity.

The pontiff is lying on a small bed drawn up to a window overlooking the piazza of St. Peters. The only picture in the room is an antique madonna and the sole ornament a great ivory crucifix.

NEW YORK BUILDERS' STRIKE.

Employers and Employes Reach a Plan of Arbitration.

New York, July 4.—President Chas. Eidlitz, of the Building Trades Employers' association, announced Friday night that as a result of the protracted conference between that body and the committee representing 19 unions affiliated with the United Board of Building Trades, the points in the plan of arbitration offered some time ago by the employers' association have been accepted by the unions. One of these is that all main points at issue are to be arbitrated. A second does away with the walking delegates.

The plan will be submitted at once to the membership of the different unions. It provides in substance:

When the employers have an agreement with their employes they shall have a trade sribtration board where all difficulties of that trade can be discussed and adjusted; but in addition there shall be a higher court of general arbitration board for the settlement of all disputes between employers and employes, or any question of mutual interest.

Each association represented in the Building Trades Employers' association shall elect two arbitrators to serve for not less than six months.

Each union, the employes of which are represented in the Building Trades Employers' association, shall elect two arbitrators, who shall serve for not less than six months, and who shall be in the employment of a member of the Building Trades Employers association at the time of their election. The arbitrators from the union shall not be business agents.

The unions as a whole or as a single union shall not order any strike against a member of the Building Trades Employers' association collectively or individually, nor shall any number of union men leave the works of a member of the Building Trades Employers' association, nor shall any member of the Building Trades association lock out his employes before the matter in dispute has been brought before the general arbitration board and settled.

Complaints shall be referred to the executive committee of the general arbitration board, composed of an equal number of employers and employes, and it shall be their duty at once to organize a special arbitration board to decide the points at issue. No general arbitrator can act when the dispute is occurring in the trade which he represents.

The employers shall be permitted to engage men outside the union, they to be paid union wages, if the union shall be unable to supply the employer with all the men he needs; and the employer may keep such men if his services are found to be satisfactory.

Officers were also elected Friday afternoon and all business was transacted and the conference adjourned sine die. The Sabbath question was taken up at the afternoon session after several committee reports had been disposed of.

A telegram was ordered sent to President Roosevelt congratulating him on his decision to forward the resolutions of the society of B'nai B'rith to the czar and thanking him for it.

BIG DAM LET LOOSE.

Many Lives Lost and Much Property Destroyed.

Loss of Life Would Have Been Much Greater Had Not the Pleasure-Seekers Been Warned of the Impending Danger.

Greensburg, Pa., July 6.—A waterspout of immense proportions, striking in the vicinity of Oakford park Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock, created a flood that caused great loss of life and property. It is known that at least 20 persons lost their lives, and rumors place the number of dead at more than 100, but until a late hour Sunday night only three or four bodies have been recovered, having been washed to the banks of the little creek that runs parallel with the park.

At 3 o'clock rain began to fall in torrents in the vicinity of the park and spread over a territory covering probably ten miles.

A half-hour later the cloudburst occurred, and the umbrellas carried by the crowds of people were crushed like eggshells. The waters in the lake north of Oakford park began to swell, and Manager James McGrath, believing that there was danger of a final break in the great walls of the dam, hurried among the crowd of pleasure-seekers who had gathered under the roofs of the eating stands, the merry-go-round, the theater, the dancing pavilion and other buildings in line of the water should the banks break and warned them to run to the hills.

On both sides of the pleasure grounds there are high hills, the park being situated in a ravine about a fourth of a mile wide and a mile long. The people, protected from the rain, were loth to leave the cozy places, and not until Mr. McGrath and his assistant entered each building in turn and simply drove the crowds out into the rain did they realize that the park managers were in earnest, for they knew after careful study of the dam that the awful flood meant probably the breaking of the wall that held five acres of water. A half-hour after the buildings had been cleared of the people, the waters mounted the wall of the dam, and within five minutes waters to the depth of five feet was flowing over the entire length of 600 feet of the wall.

The park or ravine, studded with buildings, the merry-go-round, the laughing gallery and other amusement places were twisted about and all but the dancing pavilion and large lunch stands were knocked from their foundations. The rain continued to fall in torrents and at 4 o'clock 40 feet of the wall of the dam to the east gave way with a crash. The flood beat down the ravine with a roar that was heard for two miles. A half mile down at the junction of the Greensburg and Jeannette and the park car lines, the car barns are located. The entrance gates to the park were lifted and with the force of a pile driver the mammoth posts were hurled by the waters against the barn. Beyond were located the small waiting room and on the track was standing a car laden with people on their way from Greensburg to Jeannette.

The electric storm had rendered the power south of here useless and the motorman was unable to move the car. The flood struck the waiting room containing probably a dozen people. A number of them struggled to a point of safety but in the excitement that followed it is not positive how many were lost. The street car was caught and swept into the creek and whirled and tumbled about. A number of the people in the car jumped off and there are conflicting stories as to the number of persons who were carried with the car.

Irwin, Pa., July 6.—The sudden rising of Brush creek Sunday evening, caused by a cloudburst and the breaking of the Oakford dam, caused damage near Irwin of several hundred thousand dollars and probable loss of life.

So sudden was the rise in the stream that people living along the banks barely had time to run to the hills. Many houses and other buildings were swept away. The water is still rising. The freight depot at this place was washed away from its foundations and carried down the stream, taking with it the Irwin bridge, the steel bridge on the Youghiogheny branch, and the iron bridge to the freight yards. Five loaded coal cars on the bridges were swept down the stream. There is still a big volume of water held back by debris at Manor, and this may break at any moment.

IN THE CUBAN SENATE.

United States Naval Station and Isle of Pines Treaties Read.

Havana, July 4.—The United States naval stations treaty and the Isle of Pines treaty were Friday read in the senate and referred to the committee on foreign relations without comment. The text of both treaties is brief and simple, the naval stations treaty containing seven articles and the Isle of Pines treaty four articles. The ratifications of both are required to be exchanged at Washington within seven months.

In the naval stations treaty the United States agrees to pay $2,000 annual rental as long as it occupies the stations. Article 1 provides that Cuba is to acquire forthwith all private and other realty within the required areas, the United States agreeing to furnish the money necessary for the purchase of private properties, such sums to be advance payments of the rent.

Article 2 requires the United States to mark the boundaries of the station areas by permanent fences or other enclosures.

Under article 3 the United States agrees to prevent the establishment of commercial, industrial or other enterprises within the areas.

Article 4 says fugitives from justice who are amenable to Cuban law and who take refuge within the areas of the naval stations shall be delivered to the United States authorities from Cuban territory.

According to article 5 materials, all kinds of merchandise, stores and munitions of war imported in these areas for exclusive use and consumption therein shall not be subject to customs duties or other charges and the vessels carrying the same shall not pay port tonnage or other fees unless they discharge outside the limits of the areas.

In the Isle of Pines treaty the United States relinquishes to Cuba all claims of title to the Isle of Pines, which has been made by virtue of the treaty of Paris.

Article 2 says this relinquishment is in consideration of the grants of coaling and naval stations hereafter made to the United States by Cuba.

Article 3 says citizens of the United States who at the time of the exchange of ratifications of this treaty are residing or owning property in the Isle of Pines shall suffer no diminution of the rights and privileges acquired prior to the date of exchange of the said ratifications. They may remain there, or may remove therefrom, retaining in either event all their rights and property, including the right to sell or dispose of such property or its proceeds and also the right to carry on their industry, commerce and professions, being subject in respect thereof to such laws as are applicable to other foreigners.

For a time the entire stockyards district was threatened. By hard work the Nelson Morris plant, 300 feet north of the Hammond plant, was saved, and this saved the Swift plant, which is to the north of the Nelson Morris building.

Washington, July 4.—The board of commissioners of the District of Columbia Friday advised James T. Petty auditor of the District, that he could no longer serve in that office as a result of the negligent methods which made possible the recent defalcation of $73,000 by James M. A. Watson, one of his trusted clerks. The commissioners have offered Mr. Petty a place on the board of personal tax appraisers at a salary of $600 a year less than he now receives. Alexander McKenzie, of that board and a former deputy auditor under Petty, is slated as Petty's successor.

IMPORTANT CAPTURE.

Supposed Horse Thieves With Arms and Burglar Tools.

Covington, Ky., July 3.—The Covington police made an arrest Thursday night that may turn out to be an important capture. The information leading to the arrest came from Richard Warmford, a former resident of Covington, but now a farmer living in the northern part of Boone county. Warmford left home early Thursday to come to Cincinnati. Before leaving for home he received word that a man and woman, who had stopped at his home Wednesday night, had hitched up his best horse and were headed toward Covington. Warmford hurried to Covington police headquarters and stated the facts. Notice was sent out to the night patrolmen, and at 11 o'clock Lieut. Finnegan and Officer Flavin ran into the couple at Fourth and Bakewell streets. They ordered the couple to stop, but the demand was unheeded. The officers then drew their guns, a move that caused the man to rein up. They were taken to police headquarters and searched. On the man, who gave his name as John Graham, was found two big dirk knives and an ivory-handled revolver. The fellow also had a lot of burglar tools in his possession. The woman, who is big and muscular and tanned from exposure, gave her name as Mary Ann Graham, and claimed to be the wife of her companion. Both prisoners look to be capable of doing desperate work. Graham told the officers that he and his wife were on their way to West Virginia. They were both locked up charged with horse stealing.

McVille has organized a ball team and challenges any nine in the county. Challenges should be addressed to Capt. Len Stewart, Grant, or to Mayor George Thomas, secretary, Burlington, Ky.

H. P. Parsons and Thomas Marshall caught, within a week, 134 rats. Last Thursday night they caught 35 in one hour and 15 minutes. Tom got sleepy and they went to the house and retired or they might have caught them at that rate all night.

In 1896 Harry Acra, another brother, found the turtle, and turning it over he discovered the above names and dates, clear and distinct. As his two brothers were dead, Harry took the turtle to the house, and his mother requested that it be killed and the shell kept. The killing was put off until after dinner, but in the meantime the turtle escaped. Two or three weeks ago Harry found the turtle again about a quarter of a mile from the house and killed it.

LUDLOW.

The vehicle license is the talk of the town. The police judge and the chief of police made a corb-stone decision, a few days ago, and thereby modified the decision of the circuit court as follows: All vehicles and quadrupeds and hipeds attached thereto may pass quietly throug without paying the license, provided they do not stop to buy or sell anything within the cooporate limits, as the business men are too busy discussing and cussing the license.

The expressmen have raised the price of hauling, the milkmen are going to raise the price of milk and the citizens will pay the license.

We understand that warrants of arrest will be issued for some that are trying to evade the payment.

Last year when the farmers had produce to haul the license law was strictly euforced, after they thought they had caught all the farmers the city council ordered the police to stop collections until now.

Last year T. W. Spinks run 8 or 10 wagons in the town hauling sand. He was arrested but the case never come to trial, and Spinks never paid his license, but the two farmers who were arrested had to pay. POOR FARMER.

DEATH

That Knows No Waking Comes to Paris B. Parker.

Death is always sad and the separation which it brings must cause a pang to loved ones, but when it snatches one just in youth's bloom, with all of lifes unfulfilled, Oh! the anguish of this only the hearts that have been thus bereft can tell. Thus it was with Dr. Paris Brown Parker, who was just starting into life with the brightest of prospects, having completed his education and had just been appointed medical inspector on the fruit steamer, Mount Vernon, plying between Mobile, Ala., and Port Simou. He was the eldest son of Elijah and Adelaide (Terrill) Parker, born October 25th, 1879, died in government quarantine, on Ship Island in the Gulf of Mexico, of yellow fever, July 6th, 1903. He graduated from Aurora High School in 1898; from the Commercial College in Indianapolis, Indiana, 1899; from the Miami Medical College, Cincinnati, with highest honors this year. His life was one of unremitting study and toil. It can truthfully be said, he did not have one bad habit. He always aimed high and was a model young man—an honor to his parents, sisters and brothers, and a credit to the community. He knew no such word as fail; he was always seeking for higher and nobler things; he was truly a gentleman, a friend, and above all, a christian. One of the saddest features of his sudden demise was the fact that he and Miss Bessie Webber, an estimable young lady of Aurora, Ind., were to have been married in September. She as well as the family have the sympathy of the entire community in their irreparable loss, but while they mourn their loss they have the happy knowledge that he has now crossed the dark river and entered the pearly gates of the New Jerusalem and is safely anchored in the arms of Jesus, waiting to welcome to the other and better shore those whom he has left to mourn his death. Not laid in the cold ground hundreds of miles away. Oh! no, dear grieved friends, Paris is in heaven. May his departure from this world draw those whom he has left behind nearer to Jesus, that when they are called to their long last sleep they may all unite in never ceasing praise to the lamb of God.

Oh! how sadly we do miss thee,
Paris, thy voice we'll hear no more;
Yet the thought is more consoling,
That thy sufferings are all o'er.

A disordered stomach may cause no end of trouble. When the stomach fails to perform its functions the bowels become deranged, the liver and kidneys congested, causing numerous diseases, the most fatal of which are painless and therefore the more to be dreaded. The important thing is to restore the stomach and liver to a healthy condition, and for this purpose no better preparation can be used than Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. The citizens of Bellevue were terribly shocked Monday shortly after eleven o'clock by O. N. Grant, the local druggist and postmaster, taking carbolic acid with suicidal intent. Mrs. Grant was at the store when she heard her husband fall. She hastened to his side and soon discovered that he had swallowed a large quantity of the deadly drug. The local physiciau was summoned and was present in a few minutes but he at once saw there was no chance to save Mr. Grant's life, which ended a few minutes before 12 m. Mr. Grant's domestic relations were as pleasant as those of any man, and his death was not only a terrible shock to his wife and pareuts, but to the community as well. Mr. Grant was the son and only child of W. W. Grant and wife, and was born and raised in Bellevue, where everybody was his friend. The funeral took place yesterday at 3 p. m., under the auspices of the Odd-Fellows, of which order he was a member, bretren from Rising Sun, Petersburg and Burlington being present. The deceased was in his 33d year, and a member of Bellevue Christian church, and Rev. Atkinson conducted, a brief and impressive religious ceremony at the grave, which was surrounded by a large concourse of friends who wept in sympathy with the grief stricken wife, parents, grandparents and relatives. Everyone present was moved by the solemnity of the occasion as the last and rites were performed at the earthly receptacle of the loved one.

Very Remarkable Cure of Diarrhoea.

"About six years ago for the first time in my life I had a sudden and severe attack of diarrhoea," says Mrs. Alice Miller, of Morgan, Texas. "I got temporary relief, but it came back again and again, and for six long years I have suffered more misery and agony than I can tell. It was worse than death. My husband spent hundreds of dollars for physicians' prescriptions and treatment without avail. Finally we moved to Bosque county, our present home, and one day I happened to see an advertisement of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera, and Diarrhoea Remedy with a testimonial of a man who had been cured by it. The case was so similar to my own that I concluded to try the remedy. The result was wonderful. I could hardly realize that I was well again, or believe it could be so after having suffered so long, but that one bottle of medicine, costing but a few cents, cured me." For sale by all Druggists.

THE MANUFACTURERS.

The Association Will Greatly Enlarge Its Scope.

The New Constitution Will Include Employes Other Than Manufacturers—Name of the Organization Will Be Changed.

Indianapolis, Ind., July 10.—If the purpose of the committee on constitution of the National Manufacturers' association is approved by the executive committee and ratified by a vote of the members, the organization will enlarge its scope and become the propaganda of aggressive ideas and methods in restraint of the tendencies of organized labor, backed by a fund of $1,500,000.

The executive committee, composed of President D. M. Parry, Indianapolis; J. W. VanCleve, St. Louis; John Kirby, jr., Dayton, O.; E. W. DuBrul, Cincinnati; Maj. A. C. Rozencranz, Evansville, and Secretary Marshall Cushing, New York, finished a two days' session at the Claypool hotel Thursday evening after thoroughly going over a new constitution for the manufacturers' association.

The committee met responsive to a resolution adopted at the New Orleans convention last March, which provided for a new constitution, broadening the scope of the organization so that it would include employers other than manufacturers.

Under the new constitution decided on by the committee Thursday the name of the organization will be the National Association of Manufacturers and Employers. Instead of being limited to manufacturers it will open its doors to any one engaged in "legitimate business." The membership will include all those in legitimate business as the actives of the organizations of employers and others as auxiliary members and contributing members, including local organizations and an honorary class.

The purpose of the new constitution is to maintain all the present purposes of the Manufacturers' association and to advance them through its export, credit and other bureaus, and, in addition to offer all employers an organization with which they may affiliate.

In short, it is a federation of the employers of the country to resist the aggression of organized labor through its federated organizations. It is intended to respond to the appeal for an organization to represent the aggressive policy, of which President D. M. Parry is the leading exponent, and one of the provisions of the new constitution is for an emergency fund of $1,500,000. This fund is to be used for propaganda work for active resistance of the encroachments of organized labor and to sustain the organization.

The fund will be raised largely by membership as fees. Participating members will pay $50 annually, auxiliary members $100; contributing members $25, and honorary members $15. These amounts are minimum and may be increased.

The new constitution will come before the meeting of the executive committee early in September. If approved by it President Parry will submit it to the members for a vote by mail.

New York, July 11.—It was announced Friday that the president's conference with Oscar S. Straus, Simon Wolf and Leo N. Levi respecting the Kishineff petition would be held on Tuesday next. The plans for getting the signatures are going on as rapidly as possible, and signed petitions are already coming in. The absence of a number of prominent men is the greatest impediment. Nearly every person who has been approached has promptly given his signature. The names come from every portion of the country and are representative of all classes. The quality rather than the number of names is sought. No returns are in except from nearby points and relatively few from them. It is intended later to classify and print the signatures.

London, July 11.—The Daily Chronicle's correspondent at Berlin says the Jewish population of Cracow, Galicia, is excited by reports of anti-Jewish persecutions similar to those at Kishineff. It is believed that no severer sentences than 12 to 15 years penal servitude will be passed on the more guilty concerned in the massacre.

The Times correspondent at Vienna says it is announced in a dispatch from St. Petersburg that the chief notary of Kishineff has committed suicide by shooting on account of the unfavorable result of the inquiry concerning his participation in the recent Jewish massacre. The Russian minister of finance, who is at Kishineff, has ordered many arrests among the educated classes.

Home Duties

The real heroines of every day are in our homes. Frequently, however, it is a mistaken and useless heroism.

Women seem to listen to every call of duty except the supreme one that tells them to guard their health. How much harder the daily tasks become when some derangement of the female organs makes every movement painful and keeps the nervous system unstrung? Irritability takes the place of happiness and amiability; and weakness and suffering takes the place of health and strength. As long as they can drag themselves around, women continue to work and perform their household duties. They have been led to believe that suffering is necessary because they are women. What a mistake!

The use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will banish pain and restore happiness. Don't resort to strong stimulants or narcotics when this great strengthening, healing remedy for women is always within reach.

FREE MEDICAL ADVICE TO WOMEN.

If there is anything in your case about which you would like special advice, write freely to Mrs. Pinkham. No man will see your letter. She can surely help you, for no person in America has such a wide experience in treating female ills as she has had. She has helped hundreds of thousands of women back to health. Her address is Lynn, Mass., and her advice is free. You are very foolish if you do not accept her kind invitation.

For proof read the symptoms, suffering and cure recited in the following letters:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I wish to express to you the great benefit I have derived from your advice and the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. My trouble was female weakness in its worst form and I was in a very bad condition. I could not perform my household duties, my back ached, I was extremely nervous, and I could not eat or sleep, and the bearing-down pains were terrible. My husband spent hundreds of dollars to get me well, and all the medicine that the doctors prescribed failed to do me any good; I resorted to an operation which the physician said was necessary to restore me to health, but I suffered more after it than I did before; I had hemorrhages of the womb that nothing could seem to stop.

"I noticed one of your advertisements and wrote you for advice. I received your reply and carefully followed all instructions. I immediately began to get stronger, and in two weeks was about the house. I took eight bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and continued following your advice, and to-day I am a well woman. Your remedies and help are a godsend to suffering women, and I cannot find words to thank you for what you have done for me."—MRS. LOTTIE V. NAYLOR, 1528 N. J. Ave., N.W., Washington, D. C.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I write to tell you what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me.

"I was suffering with falling of the womb and could hardly drag about, but after taking five bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was completely cured. I am now a well woman and able to do all my work.

"I think your medicine one of the best remedies in the world."—MRS. J. M. LEE, 111 Lyndal St., Newcastle, Pa.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done a great deal for me. I suffered so much from falling of the womb and all the troubles connected with it. I doctored for years with doctors and other remedies but received only temporary relief.

"I began taking your medicine, and had not taken it long before I was feeling better. My husband said that I should keep right on taking it as long as it gave me relief from my sufferings, as I could not expect to be cured by one or two bottles. I did so and am now able to be on my feet and work hard all day, and go to bed and rest at night. Thanks to your Vegetable Compound I am certainly grateful for the relief it gave me. It is the mother's great friend. I would not be without it in my house, for when I feel tired or out of sorts I take a few doses and feel all right.

"I would recommend your medicine to all tired mothers, and especially to those suffering as I was."—MRS. L. E. CHAMBERS, Bennet, Neb.

ON OPERATING TABLE.

John Terrell, a Wealthy Farmer, Shot and Killed Son-in-Law.

The Frenzied Man Then Loaded His Shotgun, Held a Mob at Bay and Delivered Himself Up to the Sheriff.

Bluffton, Ind., July 13.—John Terrell, a wealthy farmer living near Petroleum, nine miles north of the city, killed his son-in-law, Melvin Wolfe, Sunday afternoon, firing both barrels of a shotgun into his head as Wolfe lay on the doctor's operating table to have a leg amputated, necessitated by a wound from Terrell's gun fired a short time before.

Four years ago Wolfe married Terrell's daughter. Wolfe deserted the girl, it is said, leaving her with a child in her arms. A suit was brought to compel him to support his wife. It is claimed Wolfe had twice driven past the Terrell home shouting insulting remarks and shaking his fist at Terrell.

The third time he drove past, Terrell jumped from some bushes along the roadside and fired at his son-in-law with a double-barreled shotgun. The first charge shattered Wolfe's right leg. The second barrel missed. Wolfe was hurried to the office of Dr. Saunders at Petroleum and placed on an operating table to have the leg amputated. While a crowd stood around watching the doctor, Terrell came up from his home in a buggy, broke in the doors of the doctor's office, drove out the crowd at the point of his gun, and, with the remark, "I am after him and I am going to get him yet," fired both barrels into his son-in-law's head. He was terribly mutilated. At the time he fired the young man was only half-conscious. Terrell got in his buggy, loaded up his shotgun and pointed it at the mob that had hastily formed, held it at bay and drove to the sheriff's residence. He is in jail.

TRAINS COLLIDED.

Three Tramps Killed and Over Fifty Persons Injured.

Kansas City, Mo., July 13.—A Missouri Pacific fast mail train which left St. Louis Sunday morning for Kansas City crashed into a south-bound excursion train that had become stalled at "Dead Man's Curve," between Little Blue and Lees Summit. Only the locomotive, a baggage car and mail car on the fast mail left the track.

Kansas City, Mo., July 13.—The locomotive on the excursion train, which consisted of 12 well filled coaches, broke down. While repairs were making, two flagmen were sent ahead to stop the fast mail, which was about due. The engineer on the mail train failed to see the foremost flagman, and, it is said, slackened up only when warned by the second man, who was running at a high rate of speed, and it was impossible to come to a full stop. When the fast mail struck it was making only 15 miles an hour.

NEWS IS REASSURING.

Distinct Signs of Improvement in Pope Leo's Condition.

Dr. Lapponi Felt Sufficiently Secure to Leave the Vatican to Go Home, Where His Daughter Lies Stricken With Fever.

Rome, July 13.—Pope Leo lived to see another Sunday and with the Sabbath quiet which fell upon Rome came also peace and even progress to the pontiff. Beginning Sunday morning with distinct signs of improvement, he maintained this throughout the day. Sunday night Dr. Lapponi made the following important statement in answer to the question if he believed the improvement in the pope's condition could continue:

"I believe that if the improvement lasts until July 21 we may not perhaps achieve an absolute cure, but we will secure such a general state of health in the patient as will allay our anxiety."

During the morning the pontiff participated in the celebration of mass. The ceremony was held in the chapel adjoining the sick chamber, Mgr. Marzoni being the celebrant. The door connecting the sick room with the chapel was opened so that his holiness might follow the service. He insisted that Dr. Lapponi and his valet Centrai should leave his side and enter the chapel in order to better hear the mass.

The history of the day has been comparatively uneventful. The pontiff had several hours' repose. Dr. Lapponi resting near him throughout the night. The physician twice administered injections to him, once of digitalis to strengthen the heart and once of camphor caffeine to overcome the patient's growing depression. Sunday morning found the pontiff with spirits bright and the conditions generally improved. Dr. Mazzoni joined his assistant at 8:20 a. m., and after a brief conference issued the most encouraging official bulletin thus far given. Besides summarizing the satisfactory pathological conditions, the doctor gave the cheering tidings that the pontiff's condition had manifestly improved. The pulse, which went down Saturday to 82, had risen to 85, while the temperature and respiration showed no abnormal characteristics.

Pope Leo took his usual light breakfast and Dr. Lapponi, who has remained in unceasing vigil since the patient's case became desperate, felt sufficiently secured to leave the vatican for the first time, going to his home, where his daughter lies stricken with fever.

Rome, July 13.—As many fantastic descriptions are in circulation regarding the room where Pope Leo lies, a press representative has taken some pains to secure an exact account from one of the pope's nephews, who sees his uncle daily. The room is large, bright and airy. The walls are hung with pale green and gold silk damask. Entering it, with the sun pouring through the ample window, is like a taste of spring. A large curtain divides the room and is generally drawn open, showing on the right the modest narrow brass bed covered with a red damask coverlet. Even in his desperate condition, Pope Leo shows great daintiness with regard to his person, performing a full toilet whenever possible and changing daily his fine white batiste nightshirt. At the head of the bed is a good picture of the Madonna, besides a holy water font, while in the middle of the adjacent wall is an immense crucifix, reaching from the floor to the ceiling, with an ivory figure of Christ. At the foot of the bed stands a very simple walnut writing desk, at which the pope has written the best of his Latin poems. On the other side of the curtain stands the now famous arm chair, which is most comfortable, a small table, a few shelves with the pope's preferred books and nothing more. The chamber gives the idea of extreme simplicity, luxuries being rigorously banished.

A BRILLIANT AFFAIR.

The Lord Mayor of London Entertained the American Naval Officers.

London, July 13.—The lord mayor of London Friday entertained the American naval officers of the American European squadron at a luncheon.

Ambassador Choate, in toasting the lord mayor, said he hoped the Americans would realize the great honor which was paid them in being entertained in this historic room. Alluding to the United States navy, Mr. Choate said it was growing, thanks to the enthusiasm of its commander-in-chief, President Roosevelt.

The luncheon was a brilliant affair, accompanied by all the picturesque city ceremonies, while the speeches were made the occasion for an Anglo-American love feast.

Mrs. Choate sat on the lord mayor's right and Adm. Cotton was seated between the mayor's wife and Prince Louis of Battenberg. The others present, including Senator Gorman, Lord Rothschild, the entire staff of the American embassy, Consul General Evans, Senator Depew and Sir Henry Irving. Altogether there were over 150 guests.

After the luncheon the naval officers proceeded to the armory of the honorable artillery company, which was reviewed by King Edward at 5 p. m.

The review was a brilliant affair. The king wore the uniform of the regiment, of which he is captain general and colonel. He rode to the Horse Guards parade at 5:45 p. m., followed by Queen Alexandra and Princess Victoria in open carriage. An immense crowd encircled the parade and all the windows and the roofs of the adjoining houses were crowded with spectators.

The Honorable Artillery company consisted of six companies of infantry, two batteries of khaki colored guns and an up-to-date staff of cyclist dispatch bearers, motor cycle couriers and signal men.

The king followed the evolutions closely and at their conclusion said he was glad of the opportunity to inspect the companies for the first time since his accession and remarked that 200 of the artillerymen would soon go to Boston to participate in the anniversary of the ancient and honorable artillery company of Boston, which was an offshoot of their own corps. They would be received in the most cordial fashion and he hoped their visit would help cement the bond of friendship between the two countries, which he regarded as being of so much importance.

The king gave a public exhibition of his interest in the American officers by shaking hands with Rr. Adm. Cotton and bowing to each of the American captains during his inspection of the honorable artillery company.

Ambassador Choate gave a dinner Friday night in honor of the American naval men, inviting them to meet a number of the distinguished officials.

State News Happenings

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE.

Love of One Woman For Another Said to Be the Cause.

Louisville, Ky., July 13.—Love for Mrs. Leona Sheehan is declared by the police to have been the cause of the attempted suicide of Mrs. Annie Barth. The woman leaped from the third-story window at the lodging house of Doc Faust's saloon at First and Jefferson streets and a packet of letters found in her room furnished a clew to the strange story of the alleged remarkable devotion that led to the tragic climax. The letters were from two women to each other, but they abounded in a gushing sentiment characteristic of the correspondence of young lovers of the bumbler walks of life to which the two women belong.

"My Own Dear Lee," began Mrs. Barth in one of her letters, in which she declared "we are happy, and that ought to be enough," and "Darling, I love you and don't care who knows it." A letter from Mrs. Sheehan to Mrs. Barth glows with sentiment and says: "I would rather see you in your grave than with any one else."

The two women had lived together three months, during which time this strange affection had sprung up between them. They conducted a boarding house in Preston street, and from there moved to Brook and Main, where, together with two brothers of Mrs. Sheehan and Mrs. Sheehan's 18-months-old baby, they kept house.

From the letters that had passed between them at different times, although they have neither of them been out of the city since their intimacy began, it is evident that they had had numerous lovers' quarrels. It is also evident that the women were jealous of each other and that Mrs. Barth was especially jealous of Mrs. Sheehan. This was the direct cause of the attempted suicide.

Died Protesting Innocence.

Sergent, Ky., July 11.—In the presence of many 'mountaineers Wilson Bryant, aged 28, was hanged at Clintwood, in Dickenson county, Virginia just over the Kentucky line, at 1:49 Friday, for the murder of William Vanover, aged 60 years, his cousin, at George's Fork, in October, 1902. BOONE CO., RECORDER

Wednesday, - - July 15, 1903.

W. L. RIDDELL, - - Publisher.

Sheriff Callahan of Breathitt county has decided not to serve during the approaching special term of court at Jackson, which will relieve Judge Redwine of the duty of removing him.

The expense incurred in holding the recent State primary election for the selection of Democratic nominees for Governor and other State offices was $19,684. The original assessment against candidates was $16,000, leaving $3,684 to be paid by the successful candidates or nominees.

Governor Beckham has named Friday July 24, as the date for the execution of Claude O'Brien and Earl Whitney, the murderers of A. B. Chinn at Lexington, Attorneys for O'Brien and Whitney presented a petition for commutation of sentence, which will be paseed upon in a few days.

The Verona Deposit Bank opened its doors for business on Monday of last week. The bank is capitalized at $15,000 with the following officers: President, W. M. Whitson; Vice President, R. Q. Powers; Cashier, J. E. Franks, of Erlanger; Directors.—M. H. Richards, of Napeleon; W. M. Whitson, R. O. Powers, J. T. Roberts, J. D. Cunningham.

MR. ALLIE W. YOUNG was sat down on repeatedly at the meeting of the Democratic State Central Committee in Frankfort Monday. It seemed that whatever Young favored the other fellows were "agin." If Mr. Young has any respect for himself he will resign the chairmanship at once. His arbitrary actions in the last few months have brought upon him the condemnation of at least nineteths of the Democrats in Kentucky.

The report of the Commissioner of Agriculture Mr. I. B. Nall, as to the conditions of crops at the close of June, shows that the conditions during the month were not favorable generally for the crops in Kentucky. The cool rains the first part of the month were a hindrance to farm work, and retarded the growth of tobacco, corn and garden truck. Corn was planted late, but nearly the usual area was planted. In some sections, however, it was not possible for it to be given the required attention, and on this account there will be little improvement in the crop over that of the previous month. The yield in wheat was disappointing, while the quality was much below that of former years. Oats and barley are not changed materially in condition since last month, while rye is worse than it then was. Fruit is a poor crop, although there is a fair yield in berries and plums.

A man who answered advertisements in cheap "story papers" has had some interesting experiences, says an exchange, He learned that by sending $1 to a Yankee he could get a cure for drunkenness. Sure enough he did. It was to "take the pledge and keep it." Later on he sent 5o 2-cent stamps to find out how to raise turnips successfully. He found out—"Just take hold of the tops and pull." Being young, he wished to marry, and sent 34 1-cent stamps to a Chicago firm for information as to how to make an impression. When the answer came it read, "Sit down on a pan of dough." It was a little rough, but he was a patient man, and thought he would yet succeed. Next advertisement he answered, read, "How to double your money in six months." He was told to convert his money into bills, fold them and he would see his money doubled. Next he sent for twelve useful household articles, and he got a package of needles. He was slow to learn, so he sent $1 to find out "How to get rich." "Work like the devil and never spend a cent." And that stopped him, but his brother wrote to find out how to write a letter without pen or ink. He was told to use a lead pencil. He paid $1 to learn how to live without work, and was told on a postal card to "Fish for suckers as we do."—Ex.

The worst thing about making love in poetry to win a woman is the living up to it in prose after you have won her.

A woman is never sure that her husband is always going to follow the straight path; she never doubts that her son will.

A happy home is an earthly annex to heaven.

Talk about your Prosecuting Attorney Folk, Breathitt has one that is a Byrd.—Owensboro Messenger.

The sands of the seashore are numerous; likewise, also are they numerous in the craw of Commonwealth's Attorney Byrd.—Hardinsburg Democrat.

Commonwealth's Attorney Byrd made a strong speech in prosecuting Jett and White, but his future is not in Breathitt county under the present reign.—Owingsville Lookout.

When Judge James Hargis goes to Cynthiana, loaded like a gift-bearing Greek, he will probably get a tomahawk stuck where it will at least do somebody some good.—Hawesville Plaindealer.

We heartily endorse the sentiment that Judge Hargis should either resign from or be forced off the Democratic State Central Committee. Kentucky Democracy has enough weights to carry without having this millstone fastened around its neck in an official capacity.—Midway Clipper.

A letter came to the Winchester postoffice Monday, postmarked in a far-off State, and addressed as follows:

MR. BYRD, ATTY. AT LAW.

"One of Kentucky's most honorable citizens, who dares to stand before his fellowmen and point the true and honorable path of duty."—Winchester Sun Sentinel.

The interest of the Democratic party in the State requires that Judge Hargis be removed from his position as a member of the State Committee. If the committee lends him its countenance, even to the extent of tolerating his presence at its meetings or participation in its action it will be responsible to the party and the people of the State.—Owensboro Inquirer.

The people of Kentucky are so thoroughly aroused to a sense of the shameless disregard of law and order that has characterized the past history of Breathitt county that the question of expenses does not enter at all, and every means and method that the Governor may properly see fit to take to put an end to lawlessness will meet with the hearty concurrence and approbation of every peace-loving citizen of the Commonwealth, regardless of political opinion or bias.—Danville Advocate.

Some weeks ago we said that no conviction or punishment would be had or meted out to the Breathitt county assassins, and we are still of that opinion. It is true that only one man stood between Jett and a verdict, but one man was enough, and it will be the same thing in Harrison. The power behind these assassins is too powerful to be overcome by such efforts as will be made.—Carlisle Mercury.

The conditions at Jackson offer no encouragement to the average man to take a position against murder and outlawry, for it means or indicates, that he may be removed from earthly cares on short notice. We do not know anything about the man who hung the jury. It may be that he was honest in his opinion or that he feared to make a decision against the accused, but it is certain that he saved the neck of a hardened wretch, believed to be guilty of the crime for which he is charged.—Columbia News.

When a woman begins to praise her husband to her friends for his goodness to her she has given up hope of every thing else.

The tactful man is a success with women because when he sees one in a cotten shirt waist he makes her believe no other woman could do it without appearing commonplace.—New York Press.

THEDFORD'S BLACK-DRAUGHT FOR CONSTIPATION

Constipation is nothing more than a clogging of the bowels and nothing less than vital stagnation or death if not relieved. If every constipated sufferer could realize that he is allowing poisonous filth to remain in his system, he would soon get relief. Constipation invites all kind of contagion. Headaches, biliousness, colds and many other ailments disappear when constipated bowels are relieved. Thedford's Black-Draught thoroughly cleans out the bowels in an easy and natural manner without the purging of calomel or other violent cathartics.

Be sure that you get the original Thedford's Black-Draught, made by The Chattanooga Medicine Co. Sold by all druggists in 25 cent and $1.00 packages.

Morgan, Ark., May 25, 1901.
I cannot recommend Thedford's Black-Draught too highly. I keep it in my house all the time and have used it for the last ten years. I never gave my children any other laxative. I think I could never be able to work without it on account of being troubled with constipation. Your medicine is all that keeps me up.

Local News.

Buy Nadaud's flour, it is good.

Put the wheat yield down at half an average.

The dry weather knocked out the blackberry crop.

The dry weather began injuring the corn last week.

No mistake about this being genuine summer weather.

No new cases of smallpox in the Plattsburg neighborhood.

The telephone from Burlington to Bellevue is found to be very useful.

The carpenter's work on the county's eruptive hospital is about done.

Zimmer has put his fruit wagon, on, he is moving J. J. Berkshire's crop.

A good barn at the county infirmary will be worth considerable to the county.

If you are not represented in the illustrated edition of the RECORDER you will be sorry of it.

Occasionally a fishing pole is seen going toward the creek, but no fish come back with it.

Next Saturday is Grange Field Day at Harvest Home Grounds. It will be an interesting day.

The bank statements published in this issue show a healthy condition for these institutions.

Chas. Westbay was offered $400 cash for his team of horses one day last week by a man in Cincinnati.

The local drygoods stores have had screen doors put up. Flies were getting too familiar with their stock.

There is a fine crop of weeds suffering for an application of the scythe,on the streets of Burlington.

The Aurora Bulletin gave its readers an illustrated edition on the 4th inst. It was a piece of nice work.

The work on the new bank building at Union is progressing nicely, and the structure will be completed in a few weeks.

A telephone line is being put up from Bullittsville to the Snyder and Watts neighborhood in the extreme north end of the county.

The Wilson and Bellknap fight in the Republican party in Louisville, is becoming as interesting as the Democratic scrapping in that same city

The race war at Evansville, Indiana, is only another proof that human nature is the same under the same conditions either in the north or in the south.

A jury in Judge Cason's court, last Thursday, fined John W. Early $50 for striking Ben Luck, during the game of base ball here on the afternoon of the 4th inst.

The citizens along the road from Rabbit Hash to Burlington have organized to erect a telephone line from that town to Burlington. Quite a large number of instruments will be on the line.

Those who desire to be represented in the special, illustrated edition of the RECORDER which will be issued the week before the fair should make their desires known at once. If you remain out you will regret it.

The Republican convention held here last Saturday was not attended by a large crowd, but it was a lively little assemblage, notwithstanding. The Belknap people had considerably the advantage and while they did not instruct the delegates it is understood that they are for Belknap.

Supt. Snyder is amusing himself these hot days formulating a course of study to be adopted in the common schools in this county. He is satisfied that it will be beneficial to both pupils and teachers, and he will spare no effort to make the course the equal to that of any other State.

The numerous Boone county friends of Mr. D. C. Peck, of Trimble county, are pained to hear of his sad affliction, the death of his wife on the 9th, inst., of consumption. She was a Miss Bradley, of Petersburg, this county. They had reared a family of several children, each of whom is grown and of marked intelligence.

No Pity Shown.

"For years fate was after me continuously" writes F. A. Gulledge, Verbena, Ala. "I had a terrible case of Piles causing 24 tumors. When all failed Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured me. Equally good for Burns and all aches and pains. Only 25c at all Drug Stores.

W. T. Stott, a successful grower of the luscious watermelon was in this office a few days since, and said the prospects for a fine crop in the Petersburg melon fields was exceedingly good.

If two machines were to thresh all the wheat in this county, their owners could make good money out of the business, but with two or three machines in each neighborhood, the work is divided up so there is not much above running expenses in it for any of them. This is one instance in which competition is detrimental to business.

The old friends of Judge P. U. Major, in this county, will be sorry to hear of his death at his home in Frankfort, a few days ago, in his 82nd year. At one time many years ago Judge Major was known by every man in this county. He was Commonwealth's Attorney and afterwards circuit judge in this judicial district, which then embraced Franklin county.

Cholera Infantum.

This has long been regarded as one of the most dangerous and fatal diseases to which infants are subject. It can be cured, however, when properly treated. All that is necessary is to give Chamberlain's Colic Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and castor oil, as directed with each bottle and a cure is certain. For Sale by all Druggists.

Supt. Snyder is now at work arranging for the next Teachers' Institute which will be held in Burlington next month. If the suggestions of some of the citizens prevail the graduating exercises will be made particularly interesting this year. The people should manifest their appreciation of the teachers, because they are engaged in a very important work for which they receive meager pay.

The premium list for the next fair at Florence will be out in a few days. There is no telling what a tremendous success the fair will be this year, as everything appears to conspire to make it the largest and best in the history of the association. There is an unusual demand for catalogues and everybody seems to want to capture one or more of the very liberal premiums that are to be given. The liberal premiums insure sharp competition in every ring.

Russell Gibson, the bright ten year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Gibson, was drowned in the Ohio river Friday morning.

He in company with Earl McAdams and Fred Hess, boys aged about 13 and 16, started up the river in a skiff to meet Price's show boat. When in mid-stream, opposite the head of the dike, they met the boat and rowed towards it. Russell was standing on the seat in the stern of the skiff and it is supposed he lost his balance by the waves from the passing steamer rocking the boat and he fell in. The water at this point is thirty feet deep. The other two boys were so badly frightened that they could not help the drowning lad. People on the show boat said Russell made a game fight for his life but the odds were against him. All day Friday the river in that vicinity was dragged and dynamite exploded in hopes of raising the body, but up to Friday evening the efforts of the seachers proved futile.—Rising Sun Local.

Since the above was put in type the Recorder learned the body of young Gibson was found Sunday afternoon by a fisherman below Warsaw.

Two errors in the afternoon game cost the Boones three runs.

The fielding on the part of the Petersburg team was sensational on several occasions.

Petersburg has two good pitchers, as shown by the way they handled the Burlington sluggers.

Two home runs in one day is big work at the bat, and Houston is the boy who can turn the trick.

A team of Burlington ball tossers visited Hebron, last Saturday afternoon, and were defeated 10 to 5.

Petersburg always had good ball tossers and this season's club will sustain her reputation along that line.

About 700 people witnessed the game in the afternoon, the friends of the two clubs being about equally divided.

The Milford ball team, of Cincinnati, that was advertised to play the Boones here, last Saturday, did not materialize.

Houston's home run hit in the morning was considered a wonderful drive, but he made a longer one in the afternoon.

The rooters on each side were too enthusiastic. There is no sense in ugly, hateful remarks. They do not assist the players, and no gentleman will indulge in them.

The play that retired the Burlington team in the ninth inning on the afternoon of the 4th sprung a question that was new to the rooters, but there was not one of them but who knew how it ought to be decided—that is in their mind.

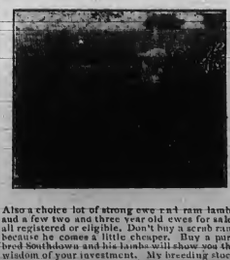
"Our idea of a chairman of a great party like the Democratic party in the State of Kentucky should be a man who can rise above all personal fellings that he may cherish, whether they be of hatred or favor to any individual Democrats, and let his first and great purpose be for the good and best interest of the party at large. Now the question with us is, does Mr. Young fill this bill? We think not. Mr. Young seems determined to do all in his power to embarrass and defeat the party this fall and is it a fact that the great Democratic party of the State of Kentucky must stand silently by with their hands tied while one man who sways this great power tries to send his party on to death and destruction. We think the time has come when the Democratic party of this State should let any man like Mr. Young know when he has been selected to be their leader, that he must not use his official power to accomplish any personal feelings that he may have to the detriment of his party, and if there is no rule by which we can do this, it is time we madeone."—News-Herald, Owenton, Ky.

An Iowa correspondent in a recent issue of the St. Louis Republic gives some estimates on the feeding value of a bushel of corn, as the result of various tests, which will be found interesting, as the compiled statistics afford opportunity for comparison. How many pounds of corn on an average will it take to make a pound of beef or a pound of pork?

The number of pounds of beef that a bushel of corn will make will depend upon the quality of corn, upon the temperature of the season, upon the age of the animal and upon the digestive and assimilative capacity of the animal. It will also depend on the balance of the ration, that is whether the corn is fed alone or in connection with other feeds. Our readers will see therefore, that there is a very wide range, in a general way.



The younger the animal the better the digestion as a rule, and the smaller proportion of the food digested will be required to maintain the heat and waste of tissue; or in other words the less will be required to run the machine. There is no possible gain except from the surplus, which can be used for growth over and above that which is required to maintain the waste; or in other words to run the machine.

The Demas-Type of Christian

Love of the World Draws Him from the Pathway of Service.

Sermon by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher.

(Copyright, 1903, by J. M. Edson.)

Chicago, Sunday, July 12, 1903.

Text.—"Demas hath forsaken me, having loved this present world, and is departed unto Thessalonica."—II. Tim., 4:10.

THESE were sad words which Paul was forced to record against a fellow servant of the cross of Jesus Christ and one who had labored with him at different times and in different places. Paul's regret is not that he has been forsaken, but that Demas has proved faithless to the Lord and loves the things of the world better than he does the service and ministry of Christ. Demas is mentioned three times in Paul's letters. In Colossians in the closing words of the epistle he unites with Luke and Paul in sending greetings. And in the letter to Philemon he again joins in the closing salutations of the letter, and is there called the fellow-laborer of Paul. The third instance is that of our text, where Demas has wearied of the Lord's service, its hardships and trials and dangers, and, forsaking his post of duty, has sought the ease and comfort and pleasures of the world. It was apparently during Paul's first imprisonment at Rome that Demas labored with him in the Gospel and was his companion. Years pass and the second imprisonment of Paul with its increased rigor and trials and dangers closes in upon them. Demas' faith grows weak, his ardor cools, and, while Paul is writing: "The time of my departure is at hand," Demas is sneaking off to his old home and friends at Thessalonica. Just a sentence about this man and yet enough to tell us of his character and life. Demas is a type of the Christian which is found so often, bringing disappointment and discouragement to Christian workers, and hindering the progress of the Gospel. Let us consider his case: His early zeal; his associations and labors with Paul; his backsliding and final forsaking of the Lord and Paul; his life at Thessalonica; its probable unhappiness and bitter end.

DEMAS was probably a Greek, as the name would indicate. It is thought probable that his home was at Thessalonica, for Paul speaks of his return to that city after he has forsaken him. The date and place of his conversion are unknown, but the time was considerably prior to Paul's first imprisonment, for the reason that at that time Demas was engaged with Paul in the ministry, as is evident from Paul's reference to him as his fellow-laborer and from his being well enough known to send Christian greetings to the people at Colosse in Paul's letter to the church in that city, and to Philemon, who was one of the chief men of the church there. If his home was at Thessalonica, may have been in that city that he was brought to a knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ, either as a result of Paul's preaching or the faithful work of some of the disciples there. Or it may be at Colosse was the place. At any rate as known to the Christians of that and undoubtedly to those of other in Asia, as well as in Macedonia Greece. He must have been a man of gifts to have been specially associated with Paul in service. He must have been zealous for the Lord, and have followed Paul to Rome. Perhaps between the dangers of the first and second imprisonment, when it is supposed that Paul visited the churches in Greece and Macedonia, Demas was raising companion of the apostle found in the missionary activities of the time, but then his ardor began to cool and his zeal, as we are not told us, but probably, his love of poverty and travel and hardships grew cent sacrifices worn off, he grew indifferent to the needs, and although he did impress all to Rome and saw the came in contact with the untiring apostle again of dangers, his faith and courage had grown cold, the face of the evident but he had his fellow-workers, thought of the story of his cowardice. Next adv the brief sentence of read, "Demas hath forsaken me, in six months present world, and is convert his Thessalonica." them and I doubled. Many, thorny-ground hearers, watered by Jesus in useful houses, got a package of power in the thirties, slow to learn, slow to act, the same is out "How to word and anon like the devil, yet hath he not cent." And yeth for awhile, but his brother persecution how to write Word, by and by or ink. He w that received he has that heart-pencil. you and I might be warned, and reproved and instructed in righteousness, for in the same letter from which our text is taken, and only a few verses preceding it, he declares: "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness; that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works." There are Demases in every church forsaking the leaders, growing cold in their Christian experience and getting back into the world.

DEMAS began all right, but he didn't hold out. It is not the beginning but the end which tests what a man is. It is easy to start in a race, but it takes pluck and muscle and endurance to cover the course and come in winner. Demas exhausted all his zeal in the first spurt of his Christian experience. I remember years ago a young man who, after his conversion, developed a most surprising zeal for the Lord's work. He was the first speaker and the longest talker in meeting. He was active in all the work of the church. His enthusiasm was a rebuke to the steadier, more even efforts of the faithful membership of the church. And so it continued for weeks and even months. And then there came a change. The thrill and enthusiasm of the first experience wore off. The sudden growth of spiritual activity which so remarkably manifested itself withered in the noon-day heat of life's trials. No new and deeper experiences came to thrill the inner life and keep alive the new-found hope and joy. He slipped farther and farther away until at last the old life and old ways claimed him again. It was the case of a modern Demas. What did his early zeal profit him now that it must be written of him: "He hath forsaken the Lord, having loved this present world, and is departed to the conditions of the old life." And how many, many there are with a similar experience!

WHAT opportunities Demas had! A Paul to work with. A Paul to admonish, instruct and advise him. As we contemplate his desertion of Paul, and his return to the pleasures and ambitions of the world, we marvel. And yet, had we been in Demas' place, would Paul have been able to have written differently of us? We think so. But we forget the Demas weakness in our own lives, how we have deserted our pastor, or our superintendent, or our teacher, or leader of some department or work in the church just at a time when our cooperation and help were most needed, and we think if we had been privileged to labor with Paul we would have been true to him and the cause of Christ. The test is not what we think we would have been or would have done if we had lived in the days of Paul and had been with him at Rome, but what we are in the place where God has put us. How prone we are to attribute to ourselves virtues—faithfulness in the face of trial, heroic devotion when persecution and danger confront us—under imaginary conditions, and then utterly fail in the actual experiences of life. Great opportunities you say Demas had! Greater opportunities have you, to-day! You have all and more than Demas had. You have Paul in fuller and deeper measure than ever Demas had, for all the wealth of his record, and his marvelous doctrinal epistles, unfolding the translucent mystery of the church, lie spread before you in God's printed Word. You have all the increasing light of the centuries as spread abroad by the church of Jesus Christ. You have the record of its development and growth. You have the superior privileges and advantages and glorious liberty of the twentieth century. And with so much to help you that Demas had not, what have you to say for your faithlessness, for the desertion of your trying post of duty, and slipping off to the Thessalonica of worldly pleasure and ambition? When the great Swiss reformer, Zwingli, was a boy he made this resolution: "I will be true and upright before God in every situation in which He may place me." He learned to be steadfast and unmovable in the duties of the everyday life, and when the supreme testing of later years came, he did not fail to stand faithful to God and the cause he had espoused.

YOU may be sure that Paul exhausted every effort to keep his fellow laborer from deserting the Lord, and departing for Thessalonica. But the tears and prayers of Paul and his earnest pleading were of no avail. Demas had made up his mind, and he would go. He wanted to go. And so go he would. Again we say it is strange that he would not listen to Paul's urgent pleading, but have you never let your heart be drawn in its desire away from God, and despite all that the still small voice could do as He pleaded with you that you were doing wrong, despite the pleading of friends and loved ones, perhaps, or of pastor or Sunday school teacher, you have rushed headlong after the pleasure of the world at Thessalonica? You know it is so. You do not have to think very long before the sad circumstances of your forsaking of the Lord and the rushing after the selfish desires of your own heart are clearly recalled. Why was it that Demas backslid? Why is it that you desert the Lord and get back into the world?

NEGLECT of prayer; neglect of Bible reading; forgetfulness of the atoning power of Jesus' blood which has cleansed you and made you acceptable to God; disobedience to the leadings of the spirit through the medium of the conscience, so as to grieve Him away; neglect of personal work for Christ. All these are steps to the final forsaking of God and the getting back into the world. The failure of Demas was not a sudden catastrophe in his life. It had been the growth of months and perhaps years. Gradually, step by step, in the face of all that Paul could do, he moved willfully and steadily on to the final desertion of the apostle and the return to the pleasure and ease of the old life at Thessalonica. The neglect of prayer will as surely lead to the failure of Demas as the setting sun will draw on the deepening shades of night. Prayer to the life and health of the soul is as essential as breath to the body.

NEGLECT of Bible Reading.—The living Word of God is the only thing that the soul can feed upon. As surely as it is fed upon the husks of man's reason, it will starve and die. There is awful peril in this our day with its multiplied newspapers and magazines and books.

What man has written is so voluminous that when the daily newspaper and the magazines are read there is no time for the reading of God's Word. How much time each week do you devote to newspaper and magazine reading, and how much to the Bible? Be honest with yourself, look the question squarely in the face, and see if you are not treading the pathway over which Demas walked. How can the Bible be a Lamp unto your feet and a Light unto your path unless you let it shine daily in your life? How can it "be the power of God unto salvation," unless you know it well enough to tell out the Gospel story? How can the Sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God, be effectively used unless you become familiar with it? Neglect of the Bible will make a Demas of any Christian.

Forgetfulness of the cleansing power of Jesus' blood. We do forget it. We unconsciously take our eyes off the cross of Christ and soon get away from Him. We ought to pray with Paul: "God forbid that I should glory save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ." David cries: "Restore unto me the joy of Thy salvation." And the same cry needs to go up from our hearts. We need daily renewal of the consciousness of what God has done for us through His crucified and risen Son. If we keep our eyes on Him, we will never wander far. We will be nerved to face trial and danger. Demas had his eyes turned towards the world's pleasures and had lost the vision of his Lord crucified for him, and it was not strange that he could desert Paul in his distress and seek ease and pleasure instead of the hardships and persecutions of the Christian life. Keep your eyes on Jesus!

DISOBEDIENCE to the Spirit—"Grieve not the Spirit," God tells us. The Spirit operates on the conscience, like the magnetism of the north pole acts upon the compass. If the conscience is tender towards God, the voice of the Spirit can be heard whispering: "This is the way; walk ye in it." To disobey that voice is to sear the conscience, to stifle the voice of the Spirit, and drive Him in grief from the heart. Demas, long before his final forsaking of Paul, had been rejecting the leading of the Spirit. How plainly the account of Paul and the spread of the Gospel, as recorded in the Acts, sets forth the importance of the Christian being filled with the Holy Spirit! The first question Paul asked on visiting believers in Christ was, have ye received the Holy Ghost?

And the work was carried on by Spirit-filled disciples. That is the reason there were such faithfulness and mighty results. But Demas, by disobeying the voice and leading of the Spirit, lost the presence of the Spirit from his heart. He ceased to strive with him and off he goes to Thessalonica, leaving Paul behind in prison. We must obey God promptly, as He speaks to us by His Spirit, if we would walk safely.

NEGLECT of personal work for Christ will also lead us to the failure of Demas. This last is drill ground on which is proved the faithfulness of our praying, our Bible reading, our realization of the saving power of Jesus, our yielding to the leading of the Spirit. Here is where the need of all these conditions are realized and here is where their efficiency is manifested. Demas, no doubt, ceased to be the personal worker for Christ he had been. Perhaps when he got back to Thessalonica he observed in a perfunctory way his religious obligations. He mixed enough religion with his worldly pleasures and love of ease to keep up his standing in the church and community, but he gave up personal work for Christ. He went to church, perhaps. He felt proud that out of his worldly prosperity, which came to him at Thessalonica, he could give to religious work. But he had long since ceased to deal with lost sinners and seek to lead them to Christ.

But, notwithstanding his share in the world, its prosperity and pleasures, down deep in his heart there was unrest, and unhappiness. The unhappiest person in the world is the Demas who has forsaken the Lord, whom he has professed and served, and gone back to the old life. There is desperate effort to forget it all. To ease the troubled conscience. To say peace, peace; but there is no real peace. The unrest and unhappiness follow to the valley of the shadow of death, and the bitterness and despair of a faithless life rise specter-like before the dying eyes, and the soul goes out to meet its God. Let us not attempt to follow. Let us who read these words resolve that, God helping us, we will not join the ranks of Demas, but will remain at the side of the Paul whom God has called us to labor with, and will choose hardship, and trial and persecution, yea, even death, with Christ, rather than all the riches and honor and pleasure which the world can offer!

MODISH FANCIES.

A Few of the Pretty Trifles That Now Delight Followers of the Fashions.

Embroidery in straw is a new departure described in one of the large fashion journals. The straw braid imported from Florence and from certain Swiss and German centers are used effectively in decorating all kinds of useful and ornamental articles such as work bags, paper and music holders, etc. The straw is as pliable and as easily managed as thread, and it is dyed in all the leading tints of silk and woollen threads, says the New York Post.

Bows have disappeared in everything except ostrich feathers, stoles and capes of the costliest and most perishable materials having taken their places. Cheap stoles are not tolerated. Chiffon, maline, mousseline de soie, lace, and other thin materials which "fluff" well are used in their construction. Sometimes ribbon loops are used, dozens of yards being consumed. The loops, doubled several times, are sewed to an invisible foundation of net tags, themselves being attached to a flat shape of net. They are thus relieved of all heaviness, and have that airy, easily disturbed look which is required of the garment.

The only stiff linen collars which are worn at all at present is the rolling shape which used to be called Byronic. Most of these are ornamented with double rows of hemstitching or embroidered dots or edgings. Soft scarfs of silk or Windsor ties in sailor knots, are worn with these collars, which are the correct thing for all sporting occasions.

Trained skirts are not seen except for weddings and very dressy occasions. The fashionable skirt touches the floor in front, is a little longer at the sides, and lies on the floor not more than four inches at the back. Walking skirts, or sidewalk skirts as they are called, must escape the floor all around.

It is predicted that the fall will witness a revulsion from the over-decorated gowns of the spring and summer. The new fabrics will be rough, with "nub" stripes, splashes, and broken checks. These do not admit of much trimming aside from stitching and buttons.

Velvets and velveteens in black and dark colors are being imported in large quantities. It is said that the new velveteens will be revelations of beauty in weave and luster, and are guaranteed not to rub off on white gloves, as velveteen always has done.

Hats of unlined guipure, the edges finished with black or white velvet, are dressy. The trimming is usually an ostrich feather or an aigrette. Lighter lace is beginning to be seen in hats, and in one fashionable shop are seen a few hats of valenciennes.

HOW TO WHIP CREAM.

A Simple Process by Which the Best Results Are to Be Obtained.

Before whipping cream it should be thoroughly chilled. Pour the cream into a bowl of the desired size (cream increases in bulk when whipped), pack your bowl in a pan of cracked ice, to which water is added. Without the addition of the water your cream will not be thoroughly chilled, says the Boston Globe. To whip heavy cream, undiluted, or diluted with one-third its quantity of milk, use the medium-sized egg beater; undiluted cream heats one moment too long turns into butter. When whipping thin cream, it is more satisfactory to use a whip churn; the same is true of heavy cream, when diluted as above directed. The churn is placed in a bowl containing the cream, cover is held down with the left hand, while the right hand works the dasher with a rapid downward motion and short upward motion. Do not raise dasher too high in cylinder, as this will spatter the cream and waste it. The first froth which appears should be stirred with the cream, as the consistency is so loose and air bubbles so large that they collapse. After this as the whip raises it should be removed with a spoon to a fine strainer, placed over a bowl, as some cream will drop through. The first which drains through may be rewhipped. Continue whipping as long as whip rises; there will be some cream left in the bowl which does not reach above perforation in the churn, and, therefore, cannot be whipped. This cream and that which drains from that already whipped, may be scalded and used to dissolve gelatine, when gelatine is used, in whipping cream.—Cream should treble its bulk. If these directions are carefully followed, one need have no trouble in whipping cream. Be sure and have your cream of the proper quality. Cream should be flavored and sweetened before whipping when used for charlottes or pudding sauce.

Bacon Salad Dressing.

Try out two tablespoonfuls of bacon or ham fat and while hot add a tablespoonful of flour and stir until perfectly smooth, then stir in gradually half a cupful of hot water and let it come to a boil, then place the saucepan over another that contains boiling water. Beat two eggs well; add to them a level teaspoonful of salt, a teaspoonful of mustard, a teaspoonful of sugar and a tablespoonful of lemon juice. Add half a cup of good cider vinegar to the hot mixture and when well mixed pour it into the egg mixture and blend thoroughly, then return to the fire and cook and stir until it thickens, then set aside until cool and keep in a cool place. This will keep in good condition for 14 days.—N. Y. Post.

PLUNDER IS THE POLICY.

Abuses of Every Kind Have Flourished Under the Republican Plan of Administration.

"It's the hit dog that hollers" is a homely proverb, and, judging from the noise coming from the post office department, public opinion is laying the lash on well. The howling, however, is unseemly, judged by the established methods of the republican party in dealing with a full treasury in the past. In fact, it cannot be said that Machen and Tyner and Heath and Payne have departed in any manner from the regular plan of proceeding in a republican administration whenever the vaults of the treasury began to overflow.

The famous declaration of Corporal Tanner, "God help the surplus," when he entered upon his occupancy of the post of pension commissioner, may be taken as the keynote of the republican policy in such matters. "Corp." Tanner went farther than any other of the party leaders; he was franker and more outspoken, but he in nowise varied from the policy which Messrs. Tyner, Machen, Heath and others have been practicing so successfully at this later day. The corporal's plan was to shovel out the treasury assets to the army of pension beggars, but he made so much noise and ranting over it that President Harrison was forced to displace him with Gen. Green B. Raum. It can be said for Gen. Raum, however, that he made no substantial amendment in the prodigality with which Tanner administered the pension office. What Tanner did was done openly and by main strength and awkwardness; Raum reduced to a science an equally prodigal method of scattering the public revenues. Under the plea of helping the veterans and expediting the work of his bureau, applications were rushed through the hands of the examiners with such rapidity as never before known. He put a bolder and more plausible face upon the matter, but he, no less than Tanner, helped the whole party lay the broad foundations for the deficit with which the succeeding democratic administration had to deal.

"It is easier to deal with a surplus than a deficit" was another oracular republican utterance, and was as easily justified as Tanner's. The demoralization which followed Gen. Raum in the pension office was not corrected by Gen. Black's severe honesty nor even by the lawyer-like respect for the technicalities and the statutes shown by Commissioner Evans. Mr. Evans was finally driven from office by the hungry pack of pension agents and solicitors, and now his methods have been transferred to the department that furnished the next best opportunities for looting. The great revenues of the post office and the plea of enlarging the service afforded the means for a new outbreak of criminal extravagance. Abuses of every kind have multiplied and flourished until every step that is taken in the investigation reveals new and more extensive means of plundering.

Do not blame the looters unthinkingly. Aside from the fact that they are all republicans and following republican precedents, they are perhaps only aiming to distribute the vast accumulations of the treasury. They have heeded the cry of Wall street that money has been taken out of business and locked up in the vaults of the government where it can do the people no good. It is the sympathy with Wall street and with the cry for a more liberal currency system that has set these officials to blowing open the vast receptacles of the revenues and parceling them out where they will relieve those who believe themselves the needy. Their methods have been effective, and they have been working along old and respected lines of republican policies. What is the moral difference between taking money from the consumer for the benefit of the rohber tariff barons and stealing it from the treasury by illegal contracts and gratuities? Certainly the distinction has to be finely drawn to make the one plan appear worse than the other.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

OPINIONS AND POINTERS.

——As long as the men who profit by the tariff are in control of the republican party machinery it is folly to believe that the republican party ever will revise the tariff in the interests of the consumers.—The Commoner.

——"No tariff revision until after 1904" is the slogan with which the Roosevelt crowd seeks to fool the people with the idea that something will be done some time, while assuring tariff-fed monopoly that nothing will be done at any time so long as the republican party has hold of the government.—Buffalo Courier.

——The greatest question raised between the body of republican voters and the national party machine is: Shall the Dingley bill be upheld in every particular, or shall it be readjusted in accordance with lowaism? The machine evinces its intention to stand pat, and it only remains for the voters to holt. Should enough of them do so, democracy will at least satisfy the requirements of lowaism.—St. Louis Republic.

——Even from a partisan political point of view it will hurt the republican party more to hush up these suspected iniquities than to bring them all to light, and deal with the transgressors as they deserve. We may trust the president to do that even at the expense of Mr. Payne's resignation. The whole situation gives the president an admirable chance to illustrate concretely what he has often preached, namely, that patriotism and religion do not consist in cheering the flag or the Bible, but in honesty, fidelity, and courage, in doing one's duty.—Watchman.

"A GREAT FOOD FOR TRUSTS."
—N. Y. American.

SURRENDER OF ROOSEVELT.

Tariff Principles Abandoned by the President for the Gain of Office.

There is no longer any question that President Roosevelt has abandoned any idea of tariff revision or reciprocity. His evident acceptance of the Ohio "compromise" demonstrates that. Last year President Roosevelt, in what was doubtless a carefully considered speech on the tariff and trust issue, told us that the Sherman law was inadequate and a constitutional amendment was essential to control the trusts. The Ohio republican platform says, "Combinations for the monopoly of trade and kindred unlawful purposes are directly amenable to penalties provided by republican legislation," meaning, of course, that the Sherman law is ample to control the trusts. Which of these statements now stands, that of the president or Senator Hanna? Neither do the same authorities agree on the tariff as affecting the trusts, while the Ohio platform, after declaring as above quoted on the control of monopolies, further says: "No worthy interest is imperiled, but whatever will work public harm is restrained and that without resort to the democratic plan of destroying all American industries through tariff revision or otherwise." This is a plain statement that the trusts must be preserved, says the Indianapolis Sentinel.

This is not the first time that President Roosevelt has abandoned his tariff principles for office. It is not generally known that he was originally a pronounced free trader and a member of the New York Free Trade club in the 80s. But after he had been elected to the legislature as an "independent" he went over to the Platt crowd, which he had been elected to fight, and resigned his membership in the Free Trade club, stating in his letter of resignation to Mr. Poultney Bigelow, the secretary, "I am a republican first and a free trader afterward."

About a year ago Dr. Schurmann, one of President Roosevelt's good friends, announced as a campaign slogan for 1904, "Three R's—Roosevelt, Reciprocity and Revision" of the tariff. He thought he understood the president's position, and so did everybody else. The protection beneficiaries understood it in the same way, for their organs have repeatedly announced since then that President Roosevelt has "changed" his views. He could not well change them if he did not hold them to begin with. The reason of the change is obvious. The tariff league people simply made him understand that he must accept Dingleyism if he wanted the nomination. And he has practically replied, "I am a candidate first and a reformer afterward."

Under Roosevelt.

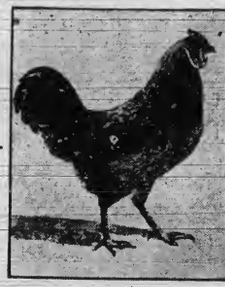
"What is Rooseveltism?" asks an esteemed contemporary. If we followed republican precedent set when Mr. Cleveland was president, we should answer the question as follows: There are 90,000 textile workers on a strike in Philadelphia. There are thousands of men on strike in Chicago. Ninety per cent. of the building operations in New York city are at a standstill. 110,000 workingmen are idle, 5,000 families want food, 20,000 laborers have been driven to other cities on smaller wages, $15,000,000 has been lost in wages alone, and there is $200,000,000 of building capital idle. At Washington the post office department is honeycombed with larceny, bribery, embezzlement and other violations of the law. Throughout the country at least half a million men are engaged in strikes and Theodore Roosevelt is president of the United States. We do not vouch for the propriety of this kind of logic; but we are merely following a republican example. — Memphis Commercial-Appeal.

Iowa's Sound Democracy.

At the state convention held in Des Moines the Iowa democrats repudiated "the body of death" and lined up in favor of a return to the historic principles of the party in 1904. The desire of the last-ditch Bryanites to have the Kansas City platform reaffirmed was voted down in the convention by 464 to 353, after a hot fight. West as well as east, the intention of the democratic party to go into the national campaign with at least a fighting chance is clearly manifest. The government-ownership proposition was also turned down. It was a very sane convention. — N. Y. World.

——Mark Hanna, after a talk with Mr. Roosevelt in Washington, said: "The president has absolute confidence in Postmaster General Payne and has no thought that he will leave the cabinet." If true, as seems likely, this is one reason why the people who do their own thinking have not "absolute confidence" in the president's zeal as a reformer when his own friends or party interests are involved.—N. Y. World.

——Mr. Roosevelt has given us a Payne for almost two years, and he will not find it easy to Wynne our forgiveness.—St. Louis Republic.



Agricultural Hints.

RHODE ISLAND REDS.

As Layers of Dark Brown Eggs, Winter and Summer, This Breed Has No Superior.

The Rhode Island Red is a rich, brilliant red, as deep in shade as may be gotten by keeping out the smut in undercolor, and specimen feathers on my desk from birds that have won prizes at our largest shows indicate that a very rich red may be attained with clear red under-color. Of course, such birds are rare and extremely high-priced, and are no more useful than the common ones on the farm, where the rich, red surface color is about all that is ever considered.

As layers of dark brown eggs, winter and summer, the Reds are peerless. This has been proved by the testimony of every one who has ever bred them. Whether or not the change to a heavier standard of weight, which now reads 8½ pounds for cock and 6½ pounds for hens, will affect the laying qualities remains to be seen. The testimony of my customers from east to west favors the small, active type as the best layers, but my own experience does not coincide with theirs, as I find the large hens on the nest fully as often as the smaller ones.

KING CARDINAL, JR.,
(Typical Ideal Form of Rhode Island Red.)

For dressed fowls I want to say that the local butcher has no eye for beauty of plumage, but actually pays me two cents per pound more for the culls I kill than he pays for common kinds. I asked him why he did so. The answer was: "Plumper, more meat, less bone, nice yellow legs and skin, medium size (three to five pounds). There is the argument in dollars and cents.—Ohio Farmer.

FEEDING FOR COLOR.

It Can Be Done at Small Expense and Without Injuring the Health of the Chickens.

Assuming that the chickens which it is intended to feed for color are the product of well-colored stock birds, there is no reason why their color should not be intensified by direct feeding as canaries are fed; but this must be done more with a view to supplementing the tendency to sound color, than to altering it materially. It is not much use attempting to color feed an adult bird—the experiment must be tried upon chickens, and they must be color fed from the shell. The proper principle to follow is to supply a little color food regularly—a small quantity given in a systematic way, but not spasmodic dosing on a large scale. If the birds be accustomed to it from hatching time upwards, and then when passing through their first or chicken moult they be given a rather more liberal supply, that is all that can be done. After the moult the color, of course, will be determined, and one cannot alter the color of feathers which have already developed—one can only do that during the process of development. When the moult is finished, therefore, and the color is fixed for the time being, the color food may be almost entirely discontinued; but it should not be altogether given up, because fowls are constantly losing feathers, and if the effect of this feather food upon the system be not maintained, by constantly giving small doses of it, there is a possibility that any feathers which may be lost will be replaced by those of a different color. The effect of the color food, therefore, must not be allowed to entirely lapse from the blood. The expense of keeping up color feeding on a limited scale like this is not great, and so it is within reason to do so.—Poultry.

THE FARM IN SUMMER.

Salt the weeds in the sheep pasture; the sheep will then finish them.

Are the drains so made and opened as to save the washings from the highways?

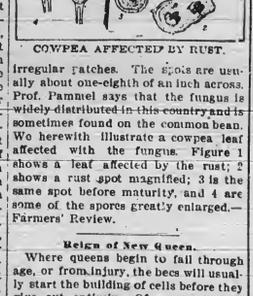
If pastures are seared and dry, and if mowings are a failure, plant some peas and oats, Hungarian, fodder corn or other quick growing green crops to fill the barns for winter feed. Remember these heavy green crops require plenty of plant food.

Sow some catch crop among the corn to keep the ground covered during winter. Crimson clover, mustard and other crops will do. If after the harvest of any crop it was intended to leave the ground bare, don't do it. Sow something; keep the land covered throughout the year.—Farm and Home.

HEED THIS WARNING.

The Farmer Who Tries to Cultivate Too Much Land is Sure to Make a Mess of It.

Perhaps there is no agricultural paper published, or that ever was published, that has not ever and over again advised farmers not to plant more land than they can properly fertilize and cultivate. What good has the advice ever done? The class of farmers who lack judgment enough to know better than to do a deal of work absolutely for nothing, are not likely ever to accept such advice, or maybe even to see it in print. The other class don't need it. But the farmers who overdo planting and underdo tillage, are actually standing right in their own way. Time and again it has been said that the possibilities of an acre of ground have never yet been determined. If a man plants three, five or more acres, to get a crop he might obtain from one highly fertilized acre, the extra labor of plowing, cultivating and harvesting is so much labor lost.



With five acres more miles must be traveled behind the plow and other horse implements than with the single acre. The man who gets as much from one acre as his neighbor does from five, gains a little, just a little, in the matter of hoeing. Every time he hoes his crop, if the plants are a yard apart each way, he has 19,360 less hills to hoe than a five-acre man. When the crop is off, the single acre richly fertilized is in good shape for another crop, while the five acres, partialy fertilized, are left in poor condition.

The number of acres a farmer should plant is the number he can do justice to in every way. As a rule the acres will be few unless he depends on hired labor. Not many men are to be pitied because their farms are so small. The small farmer don't generally shiver when he sees the tax collector coming. In spite of the modern warfare against them, it is greatly to be found that the injurious insects are increasing year by year. The difference between the cost of making an efficient fight against insect foes upon an acre instead of three, five or more, is sufficiently apparent. As it is, the damage caused by insects in large fields, gardens and orchards, in which they are not thoroughly subdued, often cuts off all chances of the profits.—Barnum's Midland Farmer.

NEW PLANT DISEASE.

It Affects the Cowpea and Is Similar to the Rust Appearing on the Common Bean.

Every new plant seems to bring to our notice one or more new diseases. Prof. L. H. Pammel, of the Iowa Agricultural college, has made a report on the rust affecting the cowpea. The professor is inclined to think that this rust is identical with the rust appearing on the common bean. The rust spots that first appear on the leaves are round, but later seem to flow together and form irregular patches. The spots are usually about one-eighth of an inch across. Prof. Pammel says that the fungus is widely distributed in this country and is sometimes found on the common bean. We herewith illustrate a cowpea leaf affected with the fungus. Figure 1 shows a leaf affected by the rust; 2 shows a rust spot magnified; 3 is the same spot before maturity, and 4 are some of the spores greatly enlarged.—Farmers' Review.

Reign of New Queen.

Where queens begin to fail through age, or from injury, the bees will usually start the building of cells before they give out entirely. Of course, it may sometimes happen that before such cell-building begins, the old queen may die. In that event, so long as there is larvae old enough, cells will surely be raised. If they raise cells before she fails, and a young queen is hatched out the two may be allowed to exist in the hive side by side without interference. But this is the exception. As soon as the young queen appears on the scene the old one as a rule steps down and out. Whether mortal combat takes place, resulting in a victory for the young and strong, or whether the bees themselves take matters into their hands and kill the old queen, I cannot say.—Bee Gleanings.

Cheap Plan of Harrowing.

I notice so many western farmers advocating the harrowing of all ground plowed each day, or rather harrowing "what is plowed during the day" before quitting time. Now I will tell you how we work it. We plow right along till we turn and one can look back and see a nice smooth surface and have a full day's work of plowing, remarks a writer in Nebraska Farmer. We take a single section of a harrow and one horse. Tie the horse to the outside of the furrow horse and there you are. We use a tow-bottom gang plow and this one section will harrow the ground twice and that before it has time to dry out. This is a splendid way to exercise that extra horse.

Don't ever steal any crop from the soil. Return thanks in the form of an abundant fertilization.

RUINED THE ECHO.

The College Students Had Been Practicing Their Yell and Had Torn Up the Ground.

"What has become of the splendid echo we could hear from yonder Loch last season?" asked the returned guest of the summer hotel landlord, relates Judge.

"Well, I'll tell you. After you left last fall there was a band of them here college students come, an' one night they got full of love for Alma Mater, or some other woman, so they said, an' was likewise full o' something else, an' they got out here in front o' the hotel, an' all at once an' all together, they got loose with the dashblamedest thing about 'Ran, ran, ran an' a wonle lot more to the same effect, an' that there echo just naturally must 'a' give up the ghost an' quit, for the next morning one o' the hired men was over there on the bluff, an' he said the ground was torn up for a spare o' 50 feet square, an' there seemed to have been a turrible struggle. At any rate, we ain't seen nor heard nothin' o' the echo since."

A Good Story.

Frederika, Ia., July 13th.—Mr. A. S. Grover, of this place, tells an interesting story showing how sick people may regain their health if they will only be guided by the experience of others. He says:

"I had a very bad case of kidney Trouble, which affected my urinary organs so that I had to get up every hour of the night. I could not retain my urine and my feet and limbs began to bloat up. My weight was quickly running down.

"After I had tried many things in vain, I began to use Doan's Kidney Pills, a medicine which had cured some other very bad cases.

"This remedy has done wonders for me. I have gained eight pounds in two months. The bloat has all gone from my feet and legs, and I don't have to get up at night. I took in all about ten boxes before I was all sound."

Those who suffer as did Mr. Grover can make no mistake in taking Doan's Kidney Pills, for they are a sure, safe and permanent cure for all Kidney and urinary disorders.

Charitable Sex.

"Justice is not the proper word, dear," replied her girl friend. "It is really and truly merciful to you."—Chicago Daily News.

Supreme Court Sustains the Foot-Ease Trade-Mark.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Justice Laughlin, in Supreme Court, has granted a permanent injunction, with costs, against Paul B. Hudson and others, of New York City, restraining them from making or selling a foot powder which the court declares is an imitation and infringement on "Foot-Ease," now so largely advertised and sold over the country. The owner of the trade-mark, "Foot-Ease," is Allen S. Olmsted, of Le Roy, N. Y., and the decision in this suit upholds his trade-mark and renders all parties liable who fraudulently attempt to profit by the extensive "Foot-Ease" advertising. Similar suits will be brought against others who are now infringing on the Foot-Ease trade-mark rights.

SUFFERING WOMEN

MRS. EMMA MITCHELL.

Tired, Nervous, Aching, Trembling, Sleepless, Bloodless---Pe-ru-na Renovates, Regulates, Restores---Many Prominent Women Endorse Pe-ru-na.

AMERICA is the land of nervous women.

The great majority of nervous women are so because they are suffering from some form of female disease.

Mrs. Emma Mitchell, 520 Louisiana street, Indianapolis, Ind., writes:

"Peruna has certainly been a blessing in disguise to me, for when I first began taking it for troubles peculiar to the sex and a generally worn out system, I had little faith.

"For the past five years I have rarely been without pain, but Peruna has changed all this, and in a very short time. I think I had only taken two bottles before I began to recuperate very quickly, and seven bottles made me well. I do not have headache or backache any more, and have some interest in life. I give all credit where it is due, and that is to Peruna."—Emma Mitchell.

By far the greatest number of female troubles are caused directly by catarrh. They are catarrh of the organ which is affected. These women despair of recovery. Female trouble is so common, so prevalent, that they accept it as almost inevitable. The greatest obstacle in the way of recovery is that they do not understand that it is catarrh which is the source of their illness. In female complaint, ninety-nine cases out of one hundred are nothing but catarrh. Peruna cures catarrh wherever located.

Chronic invalids who have languished for years on sick beds with some form of female disease begin to improve at once after beginning Dr. Hartman's treatment.

Among the many prominent women who recommend Peruna are:—Belva Lockwood, of Washington, D. C.; Mrs. Col. Hamilton, of Columbus, Ohio; Mrs. F. E. Warren, wife of U. S. Senator Warren, of Wyoming.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

Striking Coincidence.

"I don't suppose he meant anything unkind," said the young woman, "but it was a very startling coincidence."

"What do you mean?"

The Adirondack Mountains.

The lakes and streams in the Adirondack Mountains are full of fish; the woods are inviting, the air is filled with health, and the nights are cool and restful. If you visit this region once, you will go there again. An answer to almost any question in regard to the Adirondacks will be found in No. 20 of the "Four-Track Series." "Her First Run"

NERVE WORN KIDNEYS.

Doan's Kidney Pills make freedom from kidney trouble possible. They carry a kind of medication to the kidneys that brings a bright ray of hope to desperate cases.

Aching backs are eased. Hip, back, and loin pains overcome. Swelling of the limbs and dropsy signs vanish.

LOCK HAVEN, PA.—Mrs. L. W. Ammerman writes: "A few weeks ago I sent for a trial box of Doan's Kidney Pills for myself, and they did all they are said to do. My husband was kicked last fall by a horse and badly hurt—his hip was fractured—and after he recovered he was in such misery that he could hardly walk, and to stoop caused him such distress that he thought he would have to quit work—also, it affected his bladder and he was unable to make his water without so much distress. I insisted on his quitting a box of your pills and trying them, so I went to Mason's Drug Store and got a box. The first box helped him so much that I got the second and also the third, and now he is entirely well."—Mrs. L. W. AMMERMAN, Lock Haven, Pa.

And Dressings of Cuticura the Great Skin Cure

Purest, Sweetest, Most Effective Remedies for Skin, Scalp and Hair.

This treatment at once stops falling hair, removes crusts, scales and dandruff, destroys hair parasites, soothes irritated, itching surfaces, stimulates the hair follicles, loosens the scalp skin, supplies the roots with energy and nourishment, and makes the hair grow upon a sweet, wholesome, healthy scalp when all else fails.

Millions of women now rely on Cuticura Soap assisted by Cuticura Ointment, the great skin cure, for preserving, purifying and beautifying the skin, for cleansing the scalp of crusts, scales and dandruff, and the stopping of falling hair, for softening, whitening and soothing red, rough and sore hands, for baby rashes, itchings and chafings, for annoying irritations, or too free or offensive perspiration, for ulcerative weaknesses, and many sanative, antiseptic purposes which readily suggest themselves, as well as for all the purposes of the toilet and nursery.

Cuticura remedies are the standard skin cures and humour remedies of the world. Bathe the affected parts with hot water and Cuticura Soap, to cleanse the surface of crusts and scales and soften the thickened cuticle. WALTON.

Miss Virginia Graham has returned after speuding a pleasant week with her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Adams, in Cincinnati.

T. Jeff Saunders came out on Sunday, bringing his little daughter, Edith, to visit her grandpa, Geo. W. and her aunt, Miss Alice Laws.

Kirtley Roberts, of Covington, paid us a visit last week. It seems as tho a kind of homesickness brings them to take a run on the old stamping ground once in a while.

Miss Gladys Wilson is having a pleasant time during her school vacation. Last week she was the delighted guest of the Misses Ackman near Bracht and she does not stint her praise of the lovely time she had with her relatives, who have done everything they could to make life pleasant to the orphan child.

Miss Stella Senour has returned from a delightful visit to her aunt, Mrs. H. S. Bradley, of Louisville. She went down for a week's visit and was gone three weeks. Miss Senour brought back with her a little cousin, Marie Bradley, whose stay may be prolonged until the pleasant autumn days shall bring on the fall of the leaves.

Fritz Waltz put in an appearance on Sunday morning, after an absence of some months in Paris, where he had put on the finishing touches to Melvin Lemond's new houses. There is a vague suspicion in the minds of Fritz's friends that his trip to Walton was hastened, as it were, by an item in the Recorder of last week, having reference to the sidewalk in front of the Rice property. He may have wanted to see just how the finish was made. Anyhow he is here frisking about like a lamb after a shower.

The sudden death of Mr. Enoch West by apoplexy, which occurred at his home near the Southern Depot, shocked the whole community. At the time Mr. West was assisting his son, Kirby, who was to leave for Oklahoma that day, in strapping a trunk, when he suddenly pitched forward and was caught in the arms of his son. Dr. Menifee was sent for immediately, and on the way down he met Kirby who informed him that his father was dead. When the doctor reached the house he found life had been extinct for several minutes. Tho he has only resided here for about three years, he had won the respect and esteem of all with whom he came in contact. He was a devoted husband, a kind and indulgent father, and a worthy citizen in all repects, and his taking off is deplored by all and his loss is deeply felt. He leaves a widow, two sons and two daughters. Mrs. West is almost completely prostrated by her deep grief. The funeral Sunday was the largest ever known in Beaver.

LUDLOW.

A few facts as to the way the license ordinance is enforced. A few days ago a farmer walked to Ludlow to consult the supreme officials about hauling a few loads of coal from there. He was told that if he purchased the coal in Ludlow he would have to pay the license, but he could haul it from Covington and use the same streets in Ludlow without paying a license. A gardner stoped the other day at a grocery to sell some vegetables and was promptly informed by the chief of police to drive on, that if he sold or bought anything in Ludlow he would have to pay the license or be arrested. He went on to Covington with his load.

But you must not blame the chief of police. He has to enforce the law and only gets the small sum of twenty-five cents each for directing them to the National Bank, it being the official license collector.

One citizen owed $13 license but compromised with the city officials by paying $5.

A farmer goes there with a few pounds of butter, a dozen of eggs, and a little cheese, to buy enough gingham to make an apron for his wife, and returns home with the sad news that he was held up and had to deposit all he got for his load and twice as much the in the National Bank for a license to breathe, for the only way you can get into Ludlow or out of it in a vehicle is to die—funerals are exempt.

One firm pays license on two wagons use 8 or 10 three ton wagons hauling nuggets from the bank (not the national bank), but the quarrry bank—"if you don't have a pull with the officials just fall in behind."

When Mr. Davis accepted the position with the Ludlow bank he increased the deposits from Boone county about $10,000. Now as one of the bank officials, he has to receipt to those people for an unjust and unlawful license. The business men and citizens of Ludlow could do away with license if they would combine and fight it, but they are leaving that to be done by

POOR FARMERS.

The friends of Miss Lucy Clayton were not a little surprised to hear of her wedding with Mr. Newman, of Henry county. They were married at the residence of the pastor, Rev. Slater, and left immediately for the groom's home.

A disordered stomach may cause no end of trouble. When the stomach fails to perform its functions the bowels become deranged, the liver and kidneys congested, causing numerous diseases, the most fatal of which are painless and therefore the more to be dreaded. The important thing is to restore the stomach and liver to a healthy condition, and for this purpose no better preparation can be used than Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. For Sale by all Druggists.

B. H. Pope and wife, Harry Acra and family, A. B. Acra, Leslie Acra, and Miss Sadie Marshall of Middle creek, and G. T. Rue, and wife of this place, were guests of your reporter and wife, last Sunday.

The Christian church will give its Sunday school a picnic at Middle creek cliffs on Saturday, August 8. One and all are cordially invited to attend, and we especially invite the Editor of the Recorder to be present.

It is with a sad heart that we chronicle the sudden demise of our brother, O. N. Grant, who was born April 22d, 1871, united with the Christian church in August, 1883, and was married to Miss Josie Scott, April 18th, 1894, died July 13th, 1903. He was a kind and affectionate husband, a loving son, a dutiful grandson, and an honored and respected citizen. He was never known to say ought against a friend or neighbor. He filled the position of postmaster to the entire satisfaction of the government and the patrons of the office. He leaves a wife, father and mother and grandparents to mourn his absence, and they have the sympathy of the entire community. The remains were followed to the grave by about 500 relatives and friends on the afternoon of July 14th. Appropriate services by Rev. W. L. Darnell and the Odd-Fellows, of which he was a member, were conducted at the grave.

"Say not good night, but in some bright clime bid me good morning.

Considerable hail fell here last night

Dr. Paris Parker, who formerly lived near Petersburg, died a few days since in a distant land, where he had recently gone to engage in the work of his honorable calling. With a glad heart, ambitious spirit and unquestioned determination, he left all that was near and dear to him—home and friends—to enter that great conflict with disease, and ere he had scarcely doned his armor he was stricken by the enemy. Dr. Parker was a boy of perfect habits, unusual intellectual attainments and undaunted courage. He made a record in the Miami Medical College, of Cincinnati, that anyone might be proud of, and won the respect and admiration of the college faculty through his true, docile efforts and thirst for knowledge. His ardent devotion for his work was his pleasant lot, and his prospects for success in the practice of medicine and surgery, were, indeed, flattering. Lying on a bed of pain and illness, far removed from the tender hearts of home and loved ones, I feign would bear a voice in accents distinct but low:

"O, could I see paternal smiles tonight,
That passed round the hearth-stone when work was o'er;
Could you see in my declining plight,
And call me to the happy fold once more."

Upon the green I hasten to repose,
While the dew-damp softens my weary moan;
With face turned to heaven I think of those,
Who have left me wailing all alone.

Here's a prayer for you all, God bless you dear,
When the moon-beams into the darkness creep;
And still I am left waiting lonely here,
While the night-in-gale sings me off to sleep.

The tears of Dr. Parker's many friends are mingled with those of the bereaved family, and, while that vacant chair can never be filled, yet, it should be a comforting thought to know that he is with God in peace and in rest. DR. JNO. H. WALTON,

Very Remarkable Cure of Diarrhoea.

"About six years ago for the first time in my life I had a sudden and severe attack of diarrhoea," says Mrs. Alice Miller, of Morgan, Texas. "I got temporary relief, but it came back again and again, and for six long years I have suffered more misery and agony than I can tell. It was worse than death. My husband spent hundreds of dollars for physicians' prescriptions and treatment without avail. Finally we moved to Boone county, our present home, and one day I happened to see an advertisement of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera, and Diarrhoea Remedy with a testimonial of a man who had been cured by it. The case was so similar to my own that I concluded to try the remedy. The result was wonderful. I could hardly realize that I was well again, or believe it could be so after having suffered so long, but that one bottle of medicine, costing but a few cents, cured me." For sale by all Drug gists.

It is a beaut, and I will guarantee that is has more vegetables in it than there are in all the gardens in Burlington. Merit's garden looked so nice and clean that it encouraged me to mow mine this morning."

FOR AN OLD MURDER.

A Mob Hangs a White Man at Flemingsburg, Ky.

Flemingsburg, Ky., July 16.—Enraged at the failure of the courts to deal out justice, a mob broke into the Flemingsburg jail Wednesday morning and hanged William Thacker, a white man, who was given a life sentence to the penitentiary for the murder of John Gordon two years ago. Thacker was a well-known character in this neighborhood, and was always considered a dangerous man. In a quarrel with Gordon at Foxport he shot and killed him, and then, with brutal bravado, sat on the body, Winchester in hand, while he smoked his pipe, and dared anyone to attempt to arrest him. At the time he made his escape, but was later arrested and lodged in jail at Flemingsburg. He was given two trials and finally was given a life sentence for the murder, although it was proven that he had no sufficient provocation for the deed, and that Gordon was a good citizen and an inoffensive man. After being sentenced he appealed the case to the court of appeals, and was waiting for it to pass on his case.

Thacker had some money and was able to command the support of some wealthy and influential men, and it was feared that he might escape the punishment of his crime altogether. In order to prevent this a mob gathered, which, it is claimed, was composed of some of the best citizens of the county. They came into town by twos and threes, in order not to arouse suspicion, the fear that resistance might be made by Thacker's friends. When they had completed their arrangements they advanced upon the jail, arriving shortly after midnight. The jailer was aroused, but refused to surrender the keys, whereupon he was overpowered and the keys taken from him. Thacker was hurried to a tree near the jail and was given a moment in which to say his prayers, which he refused to do, but begged for mercy and for his life. To hush his cries he was hit on the head with a rock and his unconscious body strung up until life had become extinct. The mob dispersed, after watching Thacker until it was certain that he was dead.

I feel assured that nothing would be more popular in this country than such a tribute to that great man of English birth, who has done so much for the world's history, not only for the young nation across the sea, but for Great Britain as well."

Archdeacon Sinclair announced that he was authorized to offer a place for the statue in St. Paul's cathedral.

REPUBLICAN TICKET.

Morris B. Belknap, of Louisville, Nominated For Governor.

The Platform Adopted Endorses the Administration of President Roosevelt and Denounces Assassination and Lawlessness.

Louisville, July 16.—The Kentucky republican convention was called to order Wednesday afternoon. The Belknap forces nominated Maj. Wm. C. Owens for temporary chairman and he was elected by a vote of 1,571 to 675 in favor of Charles Blanford.

Ex-Gov. Bradley introduced a resolution endorsing the administration of President Roosevelt, and it was adopted by a standing vote.

The committees on credentials, rules and resolutions were then announced and the convention adjourned until Thursday morning.

Louisville, Ky., July 17.—The republican state convention Thursday evening nominated the following ticket: For governor, Morris B. Belknap, of Louisville, lieutenant governor, J. B. Wilhoit, of Ashland; treasurer, John A. Black, of Barboursville; auditor, Geo. W. Welsh, of Danville; attorney general, W. M. Beckner, of Winchester; secretary of state, J. C. Speight, of Mayfield.

A second day of picturesque political maneuverings in the state convention of the Kentucky republicans failed to culminate in the final grand surprise of a winning dark horse, whose coming had been hinted at and whose followers during Wednesday's sessions set the political managers to guessing. Col. Morris B. Belknap, of Louisville, a wholesale merchant, widely known throughout the country, received the nomination for governor on the first ballot. His delegates, contrary to predictions, stuck to him, though how much of their tenacity can be charged to the announcement by Gov. Wm. O. Bradley that he was not a candidate can only be conjectured. Mr. Belknap was nominated after an enthusiastic supporter of Mr Bradley had placed the former governor in nomination, and the followers of Augustus E. Willson had tacitly withdrawn the man supposed to be Mr. Belknap's nearest competitor, by failing to present his name. The threatened stampede to Bradley was quelled in an emphatic declaration that he would not be a candidate, but for some unknown reason the convention officers called his name during the ballot and he received a greater number of votes than Clifton J. Pratt, who had made an active canvass.

The resolutions which were adopted are in part as follows:

"We congratulate the people of the United States and its new possessions upon the unparalleled prosperity in the nation under policies that have maintained the public honor, fostered industry, stimulated enterprise, extended American commerce, strengthened American influence and ennobled citizenship by giving security of labor and capital alike, and insuring to every man who works a standard of living and an expectation worthy of American civilization and civic sovereignty. We stand for the continuance of existing republican financial and tariff policies.

"We express highest appreciation of the record that President Roosevelt has made in continuing the great work begun by William McKinley and himself dealing with the new problems that he hopes to solve, in his handling of the Philippine question, in his firm management of the Venezuelan crisis; in his wise and courageous course with reference to the anthracite coal strike; in his honest efforts to secure justice to Cuba; in his zeal for the Panama canal; in his vigorous demand for official purity and honesty and punishment of the corrupt and dishonest; in his resolute stand against the closing of the Chinese ports to our trade; in the success achieved by his practical efforts to enforce the law against unlawful combinations and in the encouragement he has given to the laying of a cable across the Pacific, which brings us into closer touch with the Philippines than we were with the Louisiana territory or with California when acquired. He has shown himself a strong executive, as he is an ideal citizen and we heartily and enthusiastically are in favor of his nomination for the presidency in 1904.

"We denounce assassination and lawlessness, whether in Servia or Kentucky, as destructive of civilization, and call upon the enlightened intelligence of the state, through its legislative, executive and judicial agencies, to employ remedies to re-establish order and punish crime within our borders.

"We especially arraign the present state chief executive for so exercising the pardoning power as to subserve political and partisan purposes, with the certain effect of encouraging crime by virtually rendering criminals of democratic political faith immune from punishment."

No reference to the money question was made in the platform.

THE INCIDENT CLOSED.

State Department Makes a Statement in Regard to Jewish Petition.

Washington, July 18.—It is stated by Secretary of State Hay that the incident created by the question of the presentation of the Jewish petition to Russia is closed. The state department Friday made public the correspondence that has taken place respecting the petition. Its substance has already been forecasted in the press dispatches. The correspondence consists of an instruction to Mr. Riddle, United States charge d'affaires at St. Petersburg, reciting in detail the petition, and directing him to present the same to the foreign office if it were willing to receive it. It is stated by Mr. Riddle that the foreign office would not receive it under any circumstances and Secretary Hay so informed the B'nai B'rith committee in a brief telegram.

The official statement of the facts is as follows: The Russian government has declined to receive or to consider the petition in relation to the condition of the Jews in Russia signed by several thousand citizens, and cabled to St. Petersburg by direction of the president.

It is believed that this petition was almost unexampled in the weight and dignity of the signatures attached to it. Among them are:

Andrew D. White and Clifton B. Breckenridge, formerly ministers to Russia, Carl Schurz, Whitelaw Reid, John G. Carlisle, former Postmaster General Thomas L. James, of the United States; Justice Peckham, United States supreme court; Thomas C. Platt, Edward M. Shepherd, William B. Hornblower, Albert B. Shaw, John F. Dillon, Senator Hopkins, of Illinois; Mayor Seth Low, Cornelius N. Bliss, James Stillman, John Claflin, Congressman A. F. Cooper, of Pennsylvania; Congressman John Sharpe Williams, of Mississippi; Judge D. Cady Herrick, New York supreme court; Alden Chester, New York supreme court; Col. John Weber, formerly commissioner of immigration; Henry B. F. MacFarland, president commissioners District of Columbia; Herman Ridder, John G. Brisbanr, Geo. T. Rives, E. M. Grout, the governors of Virginia, Georgia, Mississippi, North Carolina, Louisiana and Nebraska; the the chief justices of all the states which returns are in; a great number of congressmen, publicists, bankers, Protestant and Catholic preachers, mayors of leading cities, prominent educators, leaders of the bar, physicians, scholars and manufacturers.

When the petition reaches Washington the various pages will be bound together in magnificent style in one volume and delivered to Andrew Alen, chief of the bureau of rolls of the state department, for safe keeping.

AN ILLINOIS TORNADO.

Many People Killed and Much Property Destroyed.

Every Thing in its Track Was Leveled to the Ground—Loss Alone at Streator Will Foot Up About $2,000,000.

Streator, Ill., July 18.—A tornado Friday evening killed five persons, injured a score of others, 16 thought to be fatally, and caused a property loss of $2,000,000. All but one of the killed were at the race track. New buildings had just been erected and the races were to have been given week after next. Not a building is left standing. All of the buildings at Electric Park were destroyed and the fence and amphitheater of the ball park were blown away. Stauber's pants factory, a two-story brick building, was blown down and all the stock was ruined.

The Vulcain Western Co.'s plant suffered heavy loss. The Indiana, Illinois & Iowa bridge, costing $1,000,000, is nearly half gone, the hoisting works and buildings at Spring Hill shaft were ruined, many buildings in Kankley, four miles west of Streator, were blown down and several persons were injured.

Many houses were unroofed and otherwise damaged.

The tornado caught a number of small houses, wrecking some, turning others half way round, twisting huge trees, three feet in diameter, and breaking them off at the base. The baseball park, the street railway park and the driving park were in the storm's path. A $15,000 amphitheater was in the course of erection at the driving park. The storm took in these three parks and destroyed buildings, fences and grand stand. At the driving park, about 50 carpenters had just closed work and left. A number of horsemen and fine horses were in the park. Here four persons were killed outright and about 15 injured. Nine horses were also killed. At the dairy farm of A. J. Daugherty, on the edge of the town, a house was blown down and several who were in it at the time were badly injured.

COMING FINANCIER.

Young Napoleon of Finance Found a Way to Realize on Promised Assistance.

A certain member of the stock exchange set his nephew up in business three times, but the young man lacked something essential to success in the line selected for him, and had failed with each effort. Recently, when he came with the fourth request for financial assistance, the uncle demurred.

"You must learn to lean on yourself," he said. "I can't carry you all your life. It would be an unkindness in me to keep supplying you with money to carry on enterprises that invariably end in assignments. I'll tell you what I'll do. You owe a great deal as the result of that last failure. Pitch in on your own hook, and go it alone till you pay off those debts. When you've done that I'll give you a check for all they amount to. Such an experience will do you more good than all the money I could give you now."

Two months later the nephew walked in with every claim receipted in full, and the uncle was so delighted that he gave the promised check.

"Now, that's something like it," he said, "and I'll wager you feel the better for the hard training. How did you manage it, Dick?"

"Borrowed the money."

Now the old gentleman is telling them that there is the making of a great financier in that nephew.

He Feels Good.

Caddo, Ky., July 20th.—"I believe I could climb a mountain without drawing a long breath," is the way William Ball, of this place, describes how he is feeling.

As Mr. Ball has been on the sick list for a long time, this declaration from him comes as quite a surprise.

When asked to explain how he had become so strong in such a short time, he says:

"I did have Kidney Trouble very bad, in fact I had to get up four or five times every night to urinate. I had shortness of breath which distressed me terribly. I was badly used up, and was really of no account for anything.

"I used three boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills, and that's what has made me well. I can sleep all night without having to get up. I feel splendid and as I said before, I believe I could climb a mountain without drawing a long breath. Dodd's Kidney Pills did it all."

A Broad Instanation.

The fat man slid into the only vacant seat just ahead of the woman who was about to take it.

The man standing up was so disgusted that, as the car swayed, he permitted the end of his cane to dig the fat man in the ribs.

The man standing next to the one with the cane leaned over and told him that he was needed at the stockyards.

"Me!" cried the man with the cane, indignantly.

"Yes, you!" replied the other. "That is where they pay good prices for pig stickers."

Then they both looked at the fat man, who acted as if he would like to hit some one.—Chicago Post.

Backache is a forerunner and one of the most common symptoms of kidney trouble and womb displacement.

READ MISS BOLLMAN'S EXPERIENCE.

"Some time ago I was in a very weak condition, my work made me nervous and my back ached frightfully all the time, and I had terrible headaches.

"My mother got a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for me, and it seemed to strengthen my back and help me at once, and I did not get so tired as before. I continued to take it, and it brought health and strength to me, and I want to thank you for the good it has done me."—MISS KATE BOLLMAN, 142nd St. & Wales Ave., New York City.—$5000 forfeit if original of above letter proving genuineness cannot be produced.

THE END IS VERY NEAR.

Closing of Pope's Life is Expected Almost Hourly.

Both the Italian Government and the Authorities of the Vatican Have Made Final Preparations for the Pontiff's Death.

Rome, July 20.—Pope Leo XIII. laid Sunday night in a state of coma, and there are grave doubts in the minds of his doctors whether he will ever completely emerge. His immediate dissolution seems to be only averted by the reliability of the action of his heart. His pulse, though weak, continues steady. Shortly before midnight Dr. Lapponi said to a press correspondent:

"The pope at the present moment is in a state of coma, which may be called the condition preceding the last agony, the duration of which it is impossible to forecast, although everything leads to the belief that his condition can not last. To be more exact, he is still in a state of torpor and stupor, from which, however, he rouses occasionally when he hears sharp sounds, as for instance the insistent voice of one of his familiars calling loudly to him. Left alone, he relapses immediately into a condition of torpor. At intervals he murmurs in his sleep, continuing to have forebodings that he is being abandoned by his valet Centra and myself. These are the symptoms of incipient cerebral anemia and general exhaustion.

"He can no longer turn in his bed without assistance, and is being kept alive by artificial stimulants. During the last 23 hours he has had two injections of camphorated oil, three of caffeine and two hypodermics of salt water, besides drinking stimulants."

Msgr. Bisiotti, master of the pope's chamber, said earlier in the evening that the pulse of his holiness had not yet shown any signs of becoming intermittent; so, despite his extreme weakness and coma, he believed the pope would survive the night and possibly Monday.

Both the Italian government and the authorities of the vatican have made final preparations for the pope's death. The government is rigidly censoring all telegrams and telephonic communication between Italy and the rest of the continent. At this hour but few people remain at the vatican. Dr. Mazzoni and Dr. Rossoni and the cardinals have gone to their homes to await the last urgent summons.

Now that the supreme last moment in the memorable life and reign of Pope Leo is expected almost hourly, the contrast between the quiet within and the excitement without the vatican is most striking. In the vast palace there is a hushed calm of expectation, the only apparent wakeful souls being the Swiss guards. The doctors and attendants of the dying pontiff speak in whispers and move noiselessly about so that from the sick room no sound comes except the heavy breathing of the unconscious pope or his occasional cries for Plo Centra and Dr. Lapponi. His tone is one of fear, as though he felt himself abandoned. In reality sleep is very far from all eyes. No matter at what hour death comes, the whole palace will spring into audden life as though touched by a magician's wand.

In the piazza of St. Peter's, on the contrary, all is movement, there being a regular encampment of journalists before the famous bronze doors, which are now closed in their faces and behind which the regular tramp of the Swiss guards can be heard. Many eyes are glued to the window in the pope's chamber, overlooking the piazza, while the near by cafes, especially those with telephones, are crowded. Bicycles ready for use are piled up outside them and cabs are lingering about in the hope of catching a fare. This strange scene is illuminated by the magnificent starlight while the two grand and celebrated fountains give a kind of spectral grace to the whole.

The Observatore Romano, the chief vatican organ, has received orders to hold a special edition. The only thing wanting to complete the paper is the hour of Pope Leo's death. The staffs of all the other papers are at their posts, ready to issue special editions at any hour of the night.

TWO MEN LYNCHED.

Deputy Sheriff Killed By the Mob's Attack on the Jail.

Red Lodge, Mont., July 20.—Jim Gorman, who killed his brother about a year ago and ran away with his brother's wife, and a man named Walters, who killed a widow named Hoover at the hot springs two years ago because she refused to marry him, were lynched at Basin, Wyo., early Sunday. C. E. Pierce, a deputy sheriff, was killed during the attack on the jail.

A state of lawlessness now prevails in northwestern Wyoming as a result of which all law and order seems to have been abolished. From President Moffett, of the Montana and Wyoming Telephone Co., who is now making a tour of inspection of his company's lines, comes an appeal for help from Sheriff Fenton, of Big Horn county, who has arrested a number of prominent cattle men near Thermopolis and has appealed to the governor of Wyoming for assistance of the militia in getting his prisoners to the basin.

It was reported to Sheriff Fenton last Wednesday morning that a mob was coming up to Basin from Hiattsville and Tonsilp for the purpose of lynching Gorman and Walters. As a measure of protection the sheriff took these two men and a horsethief out of the jail and secreted them in a gully near town under guard of Deputy Sheriffs Felix Alston and C. E. Pierce.

Gorman managed to slip his handcuffs and made his escape. He swam the Big Horn river, an unprecedented feat, and made for the mountains. A posse of seven men quickly organized and Gorman was recaptured early Saturday morning about 50 miles from Basin.

Saturday night a mob of about 50 unmasked men rode up the east bank of the Big Horn and compelled the ferryman to carry them across the river. The mob proceeded at once to the county jail and fired a volley into the jail. Deputy Pierce and Special Deputy Meade were guarding the prisoners at the time. One bullet grazed Meade's shoulder and entered Pierce's heart. Members of the mob then quickly procured two telephone poles and battered the jail doors down. They first came to Walters, who was crouched in his cell piteously begging for mercy. Walters was shot instantly.

The mob next found Gorman, whose body was pierced by five bullets and was left presumably dead. He lingered, however, until Sunday forenoon.

A still more alarming state of affairs is reported from the vicinity of Thermopolis. About six weeks ago, as a result of the range feud that has been so bitterly waged, a sheepman, Ben Minnick, was killed by cattlemen. The sheriff, it is asserted, has captured the murderers, who are all prominent cattlemen and whose names have been withheld owing to threats made against him. Sheriff Fenton is unable to get his prisoners to Basin. It is said the same mob that lynched Gorman and Walters are sympathizers and have declared that Sheriff Fenton will never get out of the locality alive with his prisoners. Sheriff Fenton has wired the governor of Wyoming for permission to use the state militia at Lander, and also has sent a telephone message to Basin and other towns, asking for volunteers to assist him in upholding the law. Everywhere hardy westerners are responding to the call, arming themselves and hastening toward Thermopolis. It is probable that the militia will be ordered to the scene and a bloody battle may be fought. The country about Thermopolis is a wild and lawless one. The last message from Sheriff Fenton, which was received Sunday morning, said he still held the prisoners and that he believed he could hold out until reinforcements came.

Cincinnati, July 20.—Four persons were instantly killed Sunday afternoon near the Avondale suburban station on the Cincinnati, Lebanon & Northern division of the Pennsylvania while walking on the tracks. They were Louis and William Murr, messengers, aged 13 and 11 years, and two unidentified young men. While walking through a deep cut on a curve they got out of the way of [illegible] going excursion train and were struck on the other track by an incoming passenger train, all being ground to pieces.

The Murr boys were the only support of their widowed mother.

The engineer on the incoming train said he did not see the men and boys until he was almost onto them on account of the curve and that they were so attentively watching the picnic party on the other train that they did not hear the whistling. Albert Rosenswipe, who was with the Murr boys, was knocked off the track and escaped injury.

By the sideswiping of trains two excursionists were fatally, four seriously and six badly hurt as they were entering the Union station here Sunday noon. An empty Queen & Crescent train was backing out of the depot as an excursion train on the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern from Vincennes was pulling out of the "Y" in the yards and sideswiped the tenth, eleventh and twelfth coaches that were filled with excursionists. A large mob gathered and was dispersed with great difficulty by the officers.

MUST GO TO THE CHAIR.

The Knapp Jury Brings in a Verdict of First Degree Murder.

Hamilton, O., July 17.—A verdict of murder in the first degree, without recommendation of mercy, which means death in the electric chair, was brought in by the jury in the "Strangler" Knapp case at 7:35 Thursday mornin. The jury had been out since 5:05 Wednesday evening.

The first ballot on Knapp's guilt is said to have stood 11 to 1, the second was 8 to 4, the third 10 to 2, and the next 11 to 1. At midnight the jurors stopped and amused themselves by telling yarns and jokes, and at 4 o'clock they began arguing with the solitary juror, who finally agreed with them at 4:30 Thursday morning.

It is said Juror Warwick was the juror who held out for a recommendation for mercy, but finally agreed with the majority.

Knapp received the verdict coolly, but paled visibly as he heard his doom. The verdict was a complete surprise to him, as he felt sure he would not get a death sentence. Only Wednesday he bet 25 cents with a fellow-prisoner at the jail that he would escape the death sentence.

A motion for a new trial will be made. Knapp was on trial for the murder of his wife, Hannah Knapp.

While the ports to be opened are not yet specified, it is gathered from the communications received that they are Moukden, the principal inland port of Manchuria, and Ta Tung Kao, at the mouth of the Yalu river. The state department is highly gratified at this outcome, feeling that it has secured not only for American commerce, but for the commerce of the world, a very substantial gain.

THE brilliant W. O. Bradley has considerable uncouthness mixed up with his brilliancy.

EVERYTHING indicates that the coming campaign in this State will be a very spirited one.

THE Republican candidate for Governor is said to have a barrel which is very essential in modern politics.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT has mighty good reasons for believing that he will be nominated by his party to succeed himself.

AS soon as W. M. Beckner was nominated for Attorney General at Louisville, he turned his taffy machine lose. he and the colored voters being the principal beneficiaries.

THE State fair which will be held at Owensboro, this year, will be a great big success, if hard and persistent work on the part of the management indicates anything at all.

IN the last half century Boone county has produced only three men who have been recognized in the least in State politics—Hons. L. C. Norman, J. G. Furnish and J. M. Lassing.

ALLIE W. YOUNG is chairman of the Democratic State Committees, but about the only thing he can do is to call the committees together, as his desires are no longer regarded by the committees.

SIMON BOLIVAR BUCKNER succeeded in securing for his son-in-law the Republican nomination for Governor. The old ex-reb and ex-Democrat is a power in the Republican party in Kentucky, he outclasses the great Bradley.

FARMERS are now about through the busiest period of the year. The harvest season is not only the busiest season but the most interesting as well, for then it is that the tillers of the soil can begin to estimate their condition to meet the demands of the coming winter.

JUDGE LASSING is a member of the Democratic State campaign committee, and will look after matters political in this and two other Congressional Districts. The Judge is recognized the State over as about the best organizer in his party, and his counsel is sought in every direction.

THEY do say that ex-Governor Bradley captured the Republican convention with his eloquence in a few minutes after the delegates assembled, but he swept the convention off of its feet when, with clinched fists and his eyes flashing fire, he denounced a member of the convention as a liar.

MR. A. E. Wilson, of Louisville, about the best Republican in Kentucky has another proof that he is not in it a little bit with his party, when he desires a nomination for office. Democrats, who have in their party about the same experience that Mr. Wilson has had in his, turn Republicans and get nominated for office.

THE American Tract Society has made its seventy-eighth annual report, and in this report it is shown that the scriptures have been published in 155 languages or dialects, and that the demand for this literature is greater than it has been for three-fourths of a century. The report says that out of 70,730 families 9.150 were found to be destitute of all religious literature, that 3,150 know nothing of the Bible, and that 12,370 did not participate in religious worship.

THE County Superintendent of Schools, D. M. Snyder, handed us a statement which shows that the public school fund for this county will be $2.32 per capita, notwithstanding the statement of the State Superintendent that it will be $2 60. The decrease from the amount given out by the State official is the result of bringing the small school districts, of which there are several in the county, up to the required amount to entitle them to a school. Of this it will be well for teachers to take notice in making contracts to teach the public schools this fall and winter.

Mr. O'Neal, a Covington attorney, who defended Jett and White, is quoted in a Cincinnati paper as saying:

"The jury was told time and again by attorneys for the prosecution and, at last, by the presiding judge himself, that, if they did not bring in a verdict, hanging the defendants, the members of that body would not be safe on their arrival at their homes."

The probability is that the presiding judge didn't say it, and that Mr. O'Neal didn't say that he said it, but if it is true what becomes of the charge made by Republican papers that if Judge Redwine had only done his duty the result would have been different?—Georgetown Times.

Reports which cover the greater part of the winter wheat belt in the states of Kansas, Oklahoma, Missouri, and Nebraska, give the gratifying assurance that as far as the quality is concerned this year's wheat crop will be much superior to that of the year before. As regards the quantity of the season's production, there is less reason for congratulation. Returns from Kansas vary as to the yield and some reports from the springtime floods are heard. The general result for the State, as far as covered is a fair crop of good wheat. Nebraska and Oklahoma likewise indicate considerable variation on yield but in general a fair return and better. Reports from Missouri comes one unvarying complaint of greatly reduced yield per acre, as against the great crop raised in that state in 1902. Last year the Missouri wheat crop was the largest ever raised and compared with that phenomenal season on this year's may by comparison look to the farmers like a famine, but as compared with an average harvest for that state it does not seem so bad.

The 1903 Burley tobacco crop will probably be a light one says the Western Tobacco Journal. The higher prices now being paid on the breaks and in the country are largely due to this fact. Shippers to the Cincinnati market estimate the acreage to be from 10 to 25 per cent short of last year's which crop was considerably below the average.

It would seem that a large crop was not contemplated by the growers originally, owing to the scarcity of labor and the low prices prevailing, and the acreage was later reduced by unfavorable weather to prepare the ground and set the plants. In most localities plowing was done when the ground was either too wet or too dry. This was unavoidable on account of the long wet and dry spells, which took turns about in keeping the growers from catching up with their spring work.

The prospect for corn is poor, and vegetables are scarcer in the "Burley belt" than they have been for years. At present the crop is backward, but tobacco is a wonderful plant, and what the crop will make is always more or less problematical until it is marketed.

Lovers of horse flesh will be afforded the opportunity at Owensboro the week of September 21st to see the finest horse show ever given under the direction of a State Fair. The premium list for the Kentucky State Fair shows that $4,000 will be hung up in prizes for horses this year. The classification is made up from the lists of up-to date horse shows, and includes premiums for light harness horses for breeding purposes, roadsters, carriage horses, family horses, combined horses gaited saddle horses, walk, trot and canter classes, high steppers and ponies. Also for French Draft, Percheron French and German Coach, Cleveland Bay, Hackney and American Coach in the heavy division. Handsome cups will be offered for the best lady rider, best lady driver, gentlemens' driving classand for team of high actors kept for private use and driven by owner; $100 is offered for the best roadster stallion, any age; $100 for aged roadster mare; $200 for roadster stallion, mare or gelding; $200 for combined stallion, mare or gelding; $100 for saddle stallion, mare or gelding. Catalogue can be secured by addressing Sec. L. B. Shropshire, Room 25, board of Trade, Louisville, Ky.

Not long since W. C. Brown sent a couple of men to Asa Cason's pasture to get an animal, which a few days before he had purchased to be butchered for his trade. The men did not know the animal, but thought it ought to be the best of the several in the field, so they drove up and butchered one of Asa's finest heifers, a proceeding which he did not like a little bit.

The Indiana Farmer has always recognized the fact that standard trotting, pacing and light harness horses occupy an important field of their own, and will always be greatly prized in that field. A writer in the Western Horseman is quite too broad in the use of the phraseology "Farm Journals" in the following criticism of the agricultural press as a whole. There may be some papers to which it applies, however. It says:

"Farm Journals have a great deal to say at this season of the year about the worthlessness of the "trotting bred horse," arguing solely from the standpoint that this type of horse is only useful for racing purposes, losing sight of the fact that the trotting-bred horse is practically the only "all purpose horse" known to man; that this is the only type of horse adapted to saddle and harness, to racing and pleasure, to work upon the farm and on the road; that the trotting-bred horse is the show horse of the future, the carriage horse of yesterday, to-day and to-morrow; the express and cab horse for "all-time" and the greatest all-around horse known since Adam began rounding up and branding his quaggas."

As we have already said, the trotting bred horse has his place in the farm and other economy. But "there are others," and they are quite as highly esteemed in their place. This place is heavy work of the farm and city alike. Express and cab work, heavy hauling and transfer work would look sorry enough and all too inefficient if it had to depend on the light standard bred trotting horses. The markets are better than theory and newspaper opinion on the subject, for they represent the public consensus.

An excellent rain fell here last night, accompanied by wind sufficient to tangle the corn badly where it was reasonably tall. The farmers are feeling better.

Herbert Kirkpatrick saved up enough of the tin tags that come on tobacco, to secure a set of good single harness. This is another illustration of how it pays to take care of small things.

The Boones and Erlanger ball teams will play here next Saturday afternoon, and the Erlanger and Petersburg teams will play at Erlanger Sunday afternoon. Both of these will be good games.

Ten or a dozen members of Burlington K. of P. lodge attended the meeting of Erlanger lodge last Saturday night and participated in the degree work, and took a very active part in dispatching the elegant lunch that was served at the close of the meeting.

Judge Lassing has organized a ball team for next Saturday, when he will tackle what is known as the third nine. He claims that he has some star ball tossers in his aggregation, and when he gets through with his opponents they will know that they have been up against the real thing.

No Pity Shown.

In a few years most of the farmers will have to depend on ponds for a supply of stock water, as one by one of the heretofore never-go-dry springs are failing. Water is now scarce on some farms.

There will be a business meeting of the Alumnia of Boone County Common Schools at Burlington, Thursday, Aug. 6, at 2:30 p. m. All members are urged to be present.

EDGAR C. RILEY, Pres.

James A. Duncan, of this place, and James Thompson, of Petersburg, were busy gathering lambs in this neighborhood, last Monday. They had some that were very fine, calculated to bring the top of the market.

The prospects for corn in this county are very poor. In many fields the stalks have become yellow and hard and will produce nothing. It behooves the farmer to save everything he can with which to feed stock this winter.

The Boones went to Petersburg last Saturday, and were defeated in the presence of a large crowd by a score of 6 to 3, by the team at that place. Following is the score by innings:

J. C. Revill entertained at supper the following young people, last Friday evening, they being his Sunday school class: William Ryle, Stanley Barker, Clyde Barker, Garnett Tolin, Dudley Blyth, Elmore Fowler, Thomas Fowler, Henry Adams, Elmore Goodrich, William Duncan.

Capt. Kotmeyer was sounding the mud at his landing on this side of the river, the other day, and gave it as his opinion that it would be very much in his way when the river gets low. The change in the Kentucky shore at the mouth of Dry creek, has caused the mud to settle badly at the ferry landing.

James H. Lawell, of Bellevue, had a sale of his personal effects last Saturday, and will shortly become a citizen of the capital of the Blue Grass—Lexington, where he has purchased an elegant home in the most fashionable part of that city. We are sorry to see Mr. Lawell leave us, but he wants a home where he can enjoy ease and comfort.

The fine draft stallion owned by William Kelly, of Locust Grove neighborhood, died one day last week, of indigestion. The veterinary who was doctoring the horse warned Mr. Kelly not to allow the horse to drink much water. The horse got out of its stable and went to a spring where it drank until it died. Mr. Kelly paid $900 for the horse last spring.

Cholera Infantum.

This has long been regarded as one of the most dangerous and fatal diseases to which infants are subject. It can be cured, however, when properly treated. All that is necessary is to give Chamberlain's Colic Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and castor oil, as directed with each bottle and a cure is certain. For Sale by all Druggists.

A very large crowd attended the Field Day Exercises of the P. of H. at Harvest Home grounds last Saturday. The speakers were given the best of attention. A bountiful dinner was spread at the proper hour, when genuine Kentucky hospitality prevailed and everybody was glad they were present. After the speaking the devotees of terpsichore were given possession of the large pavilion, where they enjoyed the mazy waltz the remainder of the day.

One afternoon last week Ezra Aylor's little boy crawled under a bed and went to sleep. His mother missed him, and thought he had gone to the field where his father was at work. When the father came in he had seen nothing of the little fellow, and he and the mother became greatly alarmed. The farm bell was rung to call in the neighbors to institute a search, but about the time the neighbors had heard the bell long enough to cause them to commence assembling, the little fellow came forth from under the bed greatly to the joy of the parents who had imagined all kinds of fates for their child.

A Louisville distillery has adopted a new system by which whisky is made "from 10 to 20 years old" in less than 12 hours' time. This is getting things down pretty fine, truly. It is about as hard to find a drink of genuine, good whisky as it is to find an honest man these days. Back in the good old days they made whisky to drink, now they make it to sell, or more properly to kill. Only ten or twelve years ago a fellow could get a fair nip occasionally, which would make him think he owned the earth and the fulness thereof, but today—well, a teaspoonful will make him throw rocks at his great-grandmother. In other words, it used to be a "loving drunk," today it is a "fighting drunk."—Ex.

It is said that good hay weather and good corn weather are antagonistic. The former has prevailed in this locality very much to the detriment of the corn crop. As the hay crop is about saved, it could become more seasonable for corn and hurt nothing.

Following is the line-up of Burlington base ball club organized last Saturday: Earl Smith, Jesse Kirkpatrick, Herbert McKim, Raymond Jackson, Hubert White, Elbert Clore, Clabron Campbell, Lennie Eddins, Newton Sullivan. Subs—Cecil Gaines, Russell Smith.

The colored people had a big religious rally at their house of worship here last Sunday. The congregation was composed of colored people from about every neighborhood in the county. A big dinner was spread at the noon hour. The best of order prevailed throughout the day.

Working Night And Day.

The busiest and mightiest little thing that ever was made is Dr. King's New Life Pills. These pills change weakness into strength, listlessness into energy, brain-flag into mental power. They're wonderful in building up the health. Only 25c per box. Sold by all Druggists.

The Bellevue sluggers came up last Saturday afternoon and took another ball from the Burlington nine, the score being 16 to 10. The Burlington boys have reorganized, and declare that they intend to recover some of the balls which they have furnished the Bellevue team this season, or be found trying most desperately.

Whereas, The Grand Master of the Universe called from labor to refreshment, our beloved brother, Lyman L. Gaines, on March 17, 1903 aged 22, years therefore be it resolved,

1. That in the death of Bro. Lyman L. Gaines, Burlington Lodge No. 264, F. and A. M. has sustained the loss of a bright and lovable member, and the community a valuable citizen.

2. That this lodge extends to the bereaved parents and relatives its sympathy, and mingles its tears of grief with theirs.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be presented the parents and a copy published in the Boone County Recorder.

Committee.—O. S. Watts, Geo. C. McGlasson, W. L. Riddell.

Mrs. Leoti T. Creager, a splandid elocutionist, will give a recital at the court house in Burlington at 8 p. m., August 5th. She will be assisted by Miss Daisey Harding, one of her pupils, and Mrs. Geo. Craven. Read the following testimonials:

Temple Mills, Florida.

To whom it may concern:

Mrs. Leoti F. Creager was engaged by the South Florida Chautauqua at their annual meeting at Mount Dora, Fla. The managers and people were well pleased with her work. I have listened to reciters in many American and European cities, but have never heard one who recites with more grace and naturalness, or who so quickly gains the good will of her audiences than does Mrs. Creager.

REV. WM. SHAW, Temple Mills, Fla.

To whom it may concern:—It has been my pleasure very many times to listen to the readings of Mrs. Leoti F. Creager. I have always found her audience delighted with her naturalness, and the ease with which she puts herself wholly into the characters she represents. Her special training and preparation lately, under the best artists in her profession, make her better prepared, if possible to teach and entertain a cultured audience. Mrs. Creager deserves a cordial reception wherever she may appear. She is always delightfully interesting. Respy., J. P. SHARKEY,

State School Examiner and Superintendent of Eaton, O. Public Schools.

The house on the headwaters of Middle creek, belonged to and was occupied by the late Lawrence Pope was burnt on the afternoon of the 14th inst. It is supposed that the fire was caused by a spark from the kitchen flue. Blanton, son of W. H. Pope, lived in the house, while his father occupied the building immediately across the road, which was saved after a hard fight by several of the neighbors who arrived after it was too late to save the building where the fire originated. Several times it was thought the large barn which was 100 yards or more distant, would burn. Nothing was saved except a couple of beds and a few other small articles, such headway had the flames gained when discovered. Mr. Pope carried $550 insurance in the Boone County Company. The house, a story and a half, was an old time, hewed-log building, weatherboarded and ceiled, and stood a few steps from one of the finest springs in the county, it being the custom, when it was built nearly or quite a century ago, to seek such a location for a residence regardless of other advantages or disadvantages. Mr. Pope's loss is considerable more than the amount for which he was insured. It was only a week and a day before that the residence on the farm of his father-in-law, J. F. Cason, in Idlewild neighborhood, was destroyed by fire. Mr. Cason resides in Covington.

The Delightful Land of Uprightness

There the Best and Sweetest in Life is Realized

Sermon by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher.

(Copyright, 1903, by J. M. Edson.)

Chicago, Sunday, July 12, 1903.

Text—"Teach me to do Thy will; for Thou art my God; Thy Spirit is good; lead me into the Land of Uprightness."—Psalm cxliii:10.

DID you know there was such a land? And would you not like to summer there? There is such a land. The sun shines brighter there; the birds sing more sweetly; the flowers exhale the perfume of Heaven and are tinted with dainty hues which are mixed on the palette of the angels under the guiding eye of God; the grass, how fresh and green! the trees, how joyfully they wave their branches in the swaying breezes, and move their spreading leaves to whispered songs of praise! the lakes, how placid and cool as the boats ride safely upon their bosom and glide hither and thither! the streams, how they sing over the rocks and pebbles and lave the feet as one sits upon the bank! the gurgling springs, how they sparkle as they leap from their cool hidden depths and gain the sunshine and man's need! the insects in the air, from the great dragon flies down to the tiniest speck which microscope reveals as a marvelously perfect little creature of God's handiwork! the tiny creature nesting in the grasses and amongst the leaves, building whole cities and manifesting an activity and industry which is phenomenal! the beasts of field and forest, as they roam at will or serve the needs of man!—all Nature in the Land of Uprightness is fuller, more wonderful, more interesting! Who is there to whom the summer does not come with wooing voice and lure away somewhere into the restful depths of Nature's realm? Who is there who is so dead to the perennial freshness and charm of Dame Nature that there comes no longing to gain a closer intimacy with her during the vacation rest? Man universally delights in the restfulness and freshness of Nature, but nowhere is Nature found with so manifold charms and such sanctifying influences as in the Land of Uprightness. The one who steps from the land of the Natural Self into the Land of Uprightness is heard to exclaim with exultant voice: "I never knew the sun was so glorious, its light so full; the songs of the birds so like Heavenly music, and the rustle of the leaves and the hum of nature so like angels' wings! the grace and beauty and variety of the flowers of the field so evidently betokening the impress of the Divine hand! It's a new world!" Dear friend, did you know there was such a land as the Land of Uprightness, and that in that land old things are passed away and all things become new? Did you know that it was your privilege to walk there, and that until you do you are missing untold joy, and privilege, and blessing? It is only in the Land of Uprightness that you can realize your best and highest. Then let us go into the Land of Uprightness together.

THE other day I noticed in the hands of a young lady sitting opposite to me in the train a transportation folder gotten up in attractive form, describing summer resorts and giving information as to the roads and steamboats leading thereto. She was deeply absorbed, and one did not need to be told that she was planning her vacation outing. The claims of the various places as to attractions and advantages were evidently being carefully considered. She wanted to go to the place where she could have the best time. The location of the place to which she felt she would go was carefully noted on the map, and the route over which she would travel was picked out. It was a matter of the greatest importance to her at that time. She was utterly lost to all about her, so absorbed was she in the thought of going away. When we speak of the Land of Uprightness our first query is as to its location. Where is the Land of Uprightness? We next want to know what attractions and advantages that land has to offer over the land in which we are now dwelling; and then we want to know how to get there. As I sat and looked at that young lady so absorbed in the thought of going away and planning for that outing, I could not help wondering whether she would be as interested in the Land of Uprightness as she was in the resort she contemplated visiting, and would as carefully and eagerly consider the means of getting there as she did in picking out her route to the former place. There is a Land of Uprightness, as the words of our text imply. I wonder if you will be interested in hearing of that land? I wonder if you feel an unsatisfied need of the soul which will make you eager to search out its location? I wonder if you will be willing to make preparation for the journey and to [illegible] over the road which leads to it?

Where is the Land of Uprightness? David said in his haste that all men are liars, and you [illegible] declare that surely [illegible] on this earth—which [illegible] and troubled by [illegible], selfishness [illegible] it could be [illegible] Heaven. [illegible] redeemed [illegible] of Uprightness [illegible] where the soul abides in the will of God and is led by His Spirit. "It is in men's hearts, then," you exclaim. And we reply: Yes and no. It is in men's hearts as an inner experience, and it is all about them in outward, practical contact with the world and the people of the world. One does not need to take Jacob's ladder or borrow Gabriel's wings to scale the heights and gain the borders of the Land of Uprightness. It is not far away from the busy rush of life. It is not on the mountain-top of transfiguration nor in the seventh heaven of Paul's experience. It lies within the confines of the sphere in which you already live and move and have your being. It may be an undiscovered land to you. Oh, how many, many, many people in this world are rushing pell-mell through life to blackness and despair at the end, without ever coming to realize that just at hand is the Land of Uprightness, in which is joy and peace and satisfaction, and true success!

JESUS dwelt in the Land of Uprightness, and that is the reason He was found where the needy multitude gathered. That is why His hand was ever reaching out to help and to save. That is why every leaf and flower, the grass of the field, the waving grain, the lowly sparrow, spoke their lessons to His soul, and were left as enduring messages to the heart of man. Those crude, uncultured fishermen by the Lake of Galilee were found in the Land of the Natural Self. They knew what it was to see the stars at night standing guard over them, while they thrashed the waters with their nets after the darting fish. They were familiar with the grassy slopes of the lake and the flower-decked fields of Galilee. They felt the throb of life all about them, and had to mingle therewith, in order to gain a livelihood. And yet until Jesus met them and led them into the Land of Uprightness, they did not know the beauties of Nature; they did not realize the dignity of life; they did not understand that fishing on the lake of Galilee was the school in which they were to begin their preparation to become fishers of men. It was a new world in which they moved after they met Jesus, and that world was the Land of Uprightness. The entrance into that land did not take them out of the world in which they already were, but it put them into new relations therewith. The Land of Uprightness, then, is not a new place or sphere, but the present place, ruled by the will of God, and where His Spirit is the unerring guide. On the one hand its borders touch the Land of Darkness, and on the other its delightful fields unfold with never a break into the Elysian fields of the Heavenly land.

THE inhabitants of the Land of Uprightness are faithfully described in the First Psalm. They are they who walk not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor stand in the way of sinners, nor sit in the seat of the scornful. Their delight is in the law of the Lord and in His law do they meditate day and night. They are like a tree planted by the rivers of water, that bringeth forth his fruit in his season; his leaf does not wither, and whatsoever he doeth prospereth. Abel dwelt in that land, and when the jealous hand of his brother struck him down, he quickly passed over to the joys and peace of the land where tears are unknown and sorrow and pain have given place to joy of heart and peace of life. Enoch walked with God in the Land of Uprightness, and one day when enjoying the companionship of the dear Lord he wandered over the line, and never came back. Noah lived in the Land of Uprightness, but at that time he was about its only inhabitant. The godless inhabitants of the world were as unconscious of the existence of the Land of Uprightness as the blind fish of Mammoth Cave are ignorant of the blessed sunshine and the glad bird bathing in its light. But notwithstanding that Noah had a pretty lonesome time of it as related to human associations, he found in the end that it paid to dwell there. Abraham was content to abide in the Land of Uprightness, where God's will controlled and His Spirit led, but Lot, who knew the Land of Uprightness, and ought to have remained a resident thereof, lifted up his eyes, and, beholding the glitter and show and surface pleasures of the Land of the Natural Self, he wandered off to its distractions, and God's angels had hard work rescuing him later from the destruction which overtook a portion of that godless land. And we have not space to tell of all the others who dwelt in the Land of Uprightness, as enumerated in the Scriptures. Nor have we time to review the grand army which has passed through this land into the better land since Christ first drew His disciples about Him and commissioned them to go into all the world and tell of this Land of Uprightness, and draw thereto all who would listen to the glad message and turn from the Land of the Natural Self, whose borders are adjacent to the outer darkness of eternal death, and to the edge of the bottomless pit.

"HOW is it, Eliza," asked her mistress, "that you are always so cheerful and contented and happy? I cannot understand it. Your life has been filled with sorrow, and privation and trouble. You lost your parents and brother and sister through the fever epidemic which swept your town; you lost your property because of the avarice of the parties who held the mortgage upon it; your relatives turned against you in the hour of your need, and since then trial and persecution have seemed to follow you. How is it that you are so cheerful and sweet in the face of it all?" And Eliza tried to tell her mistress so she would understand how it was Jesus helped her; how, as she walked in the will of God, all things worked together for her good, even though she could not understand it all. Eliza dwelt in the Land of Uprightness. It was there God was. It was where human experiences were lost in His eternal purposes. It is the only land where true joy and peace and contentment are known. Do you not want to go into that land?

IF IT is such a desirable summer land of the soul, it must be worth the journey to reach it. You do not hesitate to undertake the trip to the summer resort, where you expect to spend your vacation. You do not ask to know all the experiences and delights of the place before you have reached it. You know you must take the journey first before you can prove all the attractions and advantages which have been ascribed to the place. Knowing this, why should you be so unreasonable as to demand that you experience the joy, and peace, and contentment of the Land of Uprightness, before you have taken the journey thereto? You cannot enter the land, you may not prove its charms, until you have traveled from the Land of Natural Self over the route which God has laid out. The first step in the journey is looking into the mirror of God's perfect righteousness, and realizing that you are a sinner in His sight. "For all have sinned and come short of the glory of God." The next step is realization of the lost condition of the soul, "For the soul that sinneth, it shall die." The next step in the journey to the Land of Uprightness is true repentance for sin. "Repent! Bring forth, therefore, fruits meet for repentance." The next step brings one to the cross, where the despairing look of the soul is turned to one of joy as it beholds the Christ bearing its sin in His body upon the tree. As with Bunyan's Christian, the vision loosens the bands which have bound the terrible load of sin to the soul, and it drops out of sight, forever. Then, with the lighter step of faith in the only begotten Son of God, Christ Jesus our Lord, the journey to the Land of Uprightness is quickly completed, and then, and not until then, is the soul prepared to understand or enjoy the blessedness of that wonderful land. Then it is that the sun shines brighter, the birds carol more sweetly, the flowers are arrayed in more gorgeous hues, and all the appearance of the world and the aspect of life are changed.

SOME wonderful things take place as one gets over into the Land of Uprightness. There was that person whom you never could like while you dwelt in the Land of Natural Self. You even hated him for some unkindness or wrong, but when your feet rest within the Land of Uprightness, and your prayer is: "Teach me to do Thy will," then your bitterness is changed to love, and you hear Jesus whisper in your ear: "Love your enemies, do good unto them which despitefully use you." In the town of M. were two merchants in the same line of business. Their stores were within a stone's throw of each other. These two merchants dwelt in the Land of the Natural Self, and great bitterness had sprung up between them, as their rivalry in business gave rise to real or imaginary wrongs heing suffered on the part of each from the other. Each would have been glad to have seen the other swept to bankruptcy and ruin, and each would have done what he could, that was short of the really criminal, to bring this to pass. Thus matters stood, when, by the mercy and Providence of God, one of these merchants traveled the road which led to the Land of Uprightness. And there, after a struggle with his old nature, and the bitterness which had ruled his conduct toward his rival, he found the hatred changed to love, his desire to see his rival ruined changed to a longing to have him saved, too. The story is too long to tell in detail, but the result of it was that from the Land of Uprightness this man dealt with his rival, and won him over at last to the same blessed relationship to God and Jesus Christ. And this is only one of the manifold changes which take place when the soul enters the Land of Uprightness.

AND do those who enter the Land of Uprightness never stray? Yes, sad to say! they do. There are those who "leave the paths of uprightness to walk in the ways of darkness." Faith's vision becomes dimmed, the eyes are taken from the onward, upward look towards God and the Eternal City, whose spires may always be seen from the Land of Uprightness, and, like the backward gaze of Lot's wife, the soul turns toward the things of the world. The "Lust of the eye, the pride of life," are allowed to rule the life, and lead the feet into the ways of darkness. And those who have wandered from the Land of Uprightness, are they left to perish? No. The Lord never forsakes them that are His. He goes out after the wandering sheep, even as the shepherd on the mountain side searches for the sheep or lamb missing from the fold. He searches until He finds the wandering one. He brings it back with him. Dear soul, are you wandering from the Land of Uprightness, which you entered with such joy weeks or months or years ago? Jesus is looking for you this very minute, while you read these words. He is ready to forgive. He will receive you back again. Oh, the Land of Uprightness is the only safe and beautiful and satisfying land! Let us enter it! Let us abide therein!

The Laws of Life.

God helps and perpetuates those who endeavor to learn how to live and to know the laws of life.—Rev. F. O Hall.

SCANDALS ARE THICK.

Every Department of Government Rotten with Grab Games and Looting.

The pickings and stealings that have been partly exposed in the investigation of the post office scandals are but a sample of what has occurred and is taking place in every department of the government. Already an inkling of the corrupt state of affairs has come to light in the agricultural department, and an investigation would doubtless discover much more serious breaches of trust than the short weight of seeds purchased for free distribution and the change from high-priced seeds to those worth much less. The secretary of agriculture and assistant secretary are both responsible for this defalcation, the change having been made on their express order.

In the war department the letting of contracts to favorite bidders has been partly exposed, and involves Gen. Ludington and the quartermaster's department and Congressman Littauer, who President Roosevelt says is his most intimate friend and closest political adviser. This Littauer contract for gloves, with a profit of $90,000, is but a trifle compared to other scandals that will develop when a thorough investigation is had.

The purchase of supplies for the treasury department has so far had no light thrown on it for some years, but it is well known that favored bidders have a pull that outsiders cannot overcome, and the prices paid are far in excess of what the same class of articles can be purchased for in the open market. The contract for ink for use in the bureau of engraving and printing has long been noted as a steal of great magnitude. Secretary Shaw is so occupied with protecting the interests of Wall street with his refunding and other operations, that of course he has no time to give to the minor details of his office, and the looting goes on right under his nose without an attempt to stop it.

The republican members of the appropriation committees of both houses of congress are dined and wined by those interested, and their eyes blinded to the waste and robbery of the vast sums they authorize to be expended.

The republic is in the "commercial" stage of its existence, and officials and the favored few are nearly all interested in the crying evil of the day, making money easily. The get-rich-quick schemes are not confined to those who advertise for dupes in the newspapers, but others are being industriously worked to loot Uncle Sam's treasure box, which is continually kept filled by the taxes that a generous and long-suffering people pay under the contributions that their representatives force from their pockets. In the aggregate one-fourth of all of the money paid for taxes and appropriated by congress is wasted or stolen, and nothing but a reform of the system that has grown up in the past few years will bring about retrenchment and a return to honest government.

COMMENTS OF THE PRESS.

——Senator Allison's Iowa idea is that the republican revisionists in his state are easy.—Binghamton (N. Y.) Leader.

——It is a pity that the face of Washington on the two-cent stamps failed to influence those unblushing falsifiers of the post office department.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

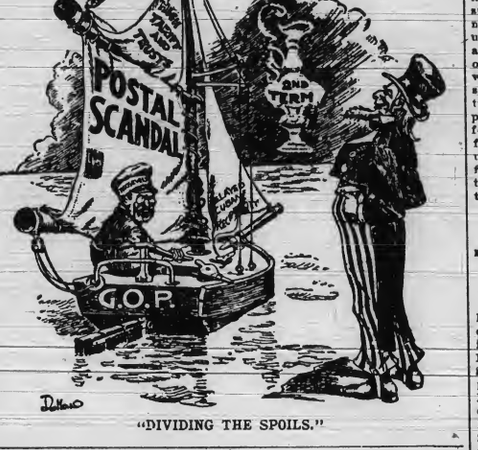
——Manila used to seem an awful long way off, but with the new cable in operation it will be just the same as next door—with some tariff restrictions.—Indianapolis News (Ind.).

——A plea of guilty once made permanently prejudices a case. The prejudice remains, though the plea be withdrawn. The Iowa republicans have confessed that the tariff schedules afford shelter to monopoly. Modification or obliteration of that confession will not diminish its effect upon the country.—Elmira Gazette.

——Postmaster General Payne, it appears, has issued an order to all postal employes, high and low, enjoining "strict secrecy" henceforth concerning past, present and future developments in the department. This order comes rather late. Strict secrecy now would simply confirm public suspicion that the worst is yet to come.—Providence Journal (Rep.).

IOWA ALSO "STANDS PAT."

Republicans of That State Conclude to Let the Trusts Revise the Tariff for Them.



The "Iowa idea" was vanquished on its native heath. The demand of the Iowa republicans made two years ago for a radical revision of all the Dingley schedules that "afford a shelter to monopoly" was whittled down to the vanishing point, says the New York World. The new platform says:

"We reiterate our faith in the historic principle of protection. . . Tariff rates enacted to carry this policy into effect should be just, fair and impartial, equally opposed to foreign control and domestic monopoly, to sectional discrimination and individual favoritism, and must from time to time be changed to meet the varying conditions incident to the progress of our industries and the changing relations in our foreign and domestic commerce. Duties that are too low should be increased and duties that are too high should be reduced."

This eminently "tactful" declaration means anything or nothing, according to the individual interpretation which any Iowa republican chooses to put upon it. That is its obvious purpose. But whatever success it may have in satisfying the republican farmers of Iowa that they can safely trust the monopolies to revise the schedules that shelter them, the country at large will not mistake the meaning of this "compromise."

It completely devitalizes the "Iowa idea." It abandons the brave demand for such a reduction of the Dingley duties as would deprive the trusts of the power to extort prices from 20 to 40 per cent. higher for their products in America than they are selling them for to foreigners.

"Stand pat" is the platform in Iowa as well as in Ohio and all along the line. It is a comprehensive platform and covers all the issues. "Stand pat" for the trust-made tariff and the tariff-made trust. "Stand pat" for colonies where our flag can be carried without our freedom. "Stand pat" for Payne, the practical politician, and his peculiar methods as an investigator of the post office rascality. "Stand pat "for "the statute of limitations." "Stand pat" also for Hanna and Quay and Platt and Addicks. In short, "stand pat" for everybody and everything that will make an easier road for the election to the presidency of Mr. Roosevelt, at one time civil service reformer and moderate protectionist, and self-proclaimed successor to the policies —including reciprocity treaties and a letting-down of the tariff bars—of the late William McKinley.

"DIVIDING THE SPOILS."

THE IDEA NOT REPUBLICAN.

That Protection Fosters Trusts Is Something Republicans Want to Keep Quiet.

The idea that protection is the mother of trusts and a shelter of monopoly is not and never was an idea of Iowa republicans or any other, protectionists. To speak strictly, it never was an idea that they wished the people to get into their heads, says the Chicago Chronicle.

It is not so much an idea as a fact which is perfectly well known to the beneficiaries of protection as it is to free traders, but the former would rather not have the people know it.

Mr. Cummins and some other republican leaders in Iowa saw that the farmers and many others suspected the fact, and turned what they saw to their own and their party's political profit. But they were careful all the while to protest that they were protectionists of the strictest Pennsylvania sect. They were, therefore, in a position to keep the suspicious protectionist farmers in line by pretending to oppose a tariff which sheltered monopoly while, at the same time, magnifying protection.

In short, they have been confidencing the plain republican people of Iowa who were getting their eyes open to the fact that protective tariffs necessarily shelter monopoly and that they are contrived and enacted for no other purpose under heaven.

It is time to stop talking about this as an Iowa republican idea. It is giving the devil ten times his due.

——Uncle Hanna declares that he visited Uncle Morgan in Wall street the other day "entirely for recreation." What a jolly time Uncle Hanna and Uncle Morgan must have had exchanging jokes and funny stories.—Chicago Chronicle.

LEPERS IN BURMAH.

Fine Work Is Being Done for the Victims of the Dread Disease There.

In Burmah one grows callous at the several and ghastly sights, as one sees leprosy in all its worst forms stalking rampant through the streets and thoroughfares. Ascending the steps of a pagoda you rub shoulders with the victims; in the markets, on the streets you jostle against them, and yet you do not seem to feel the repugnance a stranger not used to such sights would feel, says the London Graphic.

Even we, with long experience of Burmah, find much that is new and interesting in the golden city, once the citadel of the lord of the white elephant and the golden throne. But there is one sight, one institution, one enduring memorial, for which we are not indebted to the past. The "Manaw Yaman," the Royal Garden, where St. John's Leper asylum is situated, is the home of many miserable creatures to whom even parental doors are closed; it is the home of the afflicted and the despised, the home of hideous sights and repulsive objects. Almost all the countries of Europe are allied in the work of mercy carried on at this institution; priests and nursing sisters, who have given up home and friends to minister to these most miserable of creatures, are joined in their labor of love.

A visit to the asylum conveys a lesson of self-denial that strikes one speechless. How dreadfully, meanly, selfish one feels! It excites emotions that cannot be imagined—they must be felt. To us, to whom it has not been given to understand such love, the devotion that immolates a life on the altar of self-imposed duty seems madness. What buoys us up in our most difficult tasks and our hardest struggles, the hope of success, is denied to the worker in the cause of the unclean leper. What hope is there of a cure following the patient labors of the devoted attendant? What gain, what profit, does he acquire? Some such thought must assuredly pass through the minds of the unfortunate patients, for naught else can account for the smile of doglike love and affection that breaks over and transfigures for a moment their otherwise disfigured and hideous countenances as they look upon the calm features of their self-appointed attendants.

LAND OF THE FREE.

England's Claim to That Distinction as Good as That of Any Other Country.

It is a fair question nowadays if England be not after all the true land of liberty. I believe it is the present fashion in America to admit it, says President Benjamin Ide Wheeler, in Atlantic. Some estimate in terms of the domestic problem, though England has one, too. But our household mechanism is more complicated and more brittle than the English, and the American housewife is bowing into slavery beneath the cooks and butlers, and city families are fast being driven into hotels and boarding-houses. Others estimate in terms of other slaveries. One is the slavery to publicity. England has spared more refuges for privacy. The garden wall more frequently rebuffs the street, and the homes that count even the telephone a noxious intrusion of the outer world are more the rule than the exception. Again there is the slavery to a something we call opinion, but which is not really the opinion of the great public, so much as a congeries of various sets of opinions publicly set forth, each under the guarantee of some organization or institution. Public opinion has indeed of late years yielded so largely to the organizational form that it becomes difficult to discover what public opinion really is. Every proposal for reform or for standing pat, every phase of view or plan of procedure, must have its organization with pages of officers and honorary councilors. One by one the subjects concerning which a public man may with immunity from organizational attack freely express himself are withdrawn from the open field and lodged behind entrenchments. The result is, naturally, that for the tactful statesman—and tact has of late years been forced high above par—a chief stock in trade has become the cautious list of taboos. I pray you, my promising young man, embroil yourself not in the days of thy youth with those various combinations of initial letters which are nowadays the powers that be; so speaks the voice of carnal wisdom. This is undoubtedly a land of freedom and free speech, but freedom of speech means that one is at perfect liberty to express such of his convictions as he dares to.

Educated Russians.

Every educated Russian knows three languages besides his own, and many of them four. Knowledge of the English, French and German languages is considered necessary to culture. A family having small children employ two to four governesses, from whom the children learn foreign tongues before they are taught the more difficult Russian. This command of languages makes possible the fact that Russians have a better knowledge of the world's affairs than any other people.—Educational Journal.

No Complaints.

"I'm the gas man; just dropped around to see if you need anything; anything out of order; any complaints against the company?"

"No, I don't think I need anything just now, but I've got a complaint. The meter works too hard for the company. My gas bill is entirely too big."

"Oh, we don't call that a complaint. It's only a jolly. Good morning."—N. Y. Press.

CHURNING IN PERSIA.

Nomads in the Shah's Realm Cling to Methods in Use Thousands of Years Ago.

A method so primitive that it is almost unknown elsewhere is still used by the Persian nomads in churning their butter.

In the shelter of the goatskin tent is swung a crusade receptacle, also of goatskin, in which the milk is dumped. Then it is rocked gently by hand until the separation of the fat from the milk is complete, when the resultant oily mass, unsalted, as is all oriental butter, is ready for the consumer.

There are few more interesting people, in these days of rapid progress, than the Persian nomad. His home is where night overtakes him, and he sleeps when weariness suggests that he fall. Ordinarily his roof is heaven's starry dome, but in case of storms he crawls into the shelter of his little goatskin tent, where a surprisingly large family can be made comfortable.

The Persian, like the Moor, does not encourage the establishment of prisons, death being a quicker and less expensive method of punishing criminals. Torture in countless forms is so common a sight as to attract little attention, and when death supervenes the body lies where it falls until taken away by relatives.—Chicago Journal.

APPLES FOR THE COWS.

No Other Green Food Produces as Much Milk or Greater Gain in Healthy Flesh.

There is no better green food than apples for cows, but, of course, it won't do to let them have all they will eat at first, as such a course will be sure to make them sick; I have known it to kill them. Years ago I had a friend who owned a cider mill and kept a large number of cows. He was careful at first in letting cows have but little pomace, but after once accustomed to it he let them run in a field where all the pomace was drawn, and the cows ate all they desired. They gave a large quantity of milk and gained much in flesh during the season. To feed apples or potatoes safely to cattle the same may be fed by placing the cow in a stanchion, having a bar across over her neck so as not to allow her to raise her head up quite level with her body. What causes them to choke is, when the mouth is full they raise the head so high that the round apples or potatoes roll down their throat without being masticated. If to be fed out of doors two stakes or posts may be set into the ground and holes bored through them for a rod or pole, and feed placed in a box so the cow can reach it when placed with neck between stakes. This is very much easier than to take pains to cut or mash the apples.—J. S. Woodward, in Rural New Yorker.

TIMELY DAIRY NOTES.

The rapid milker will get more milk and leave the cow in better condition than the slow milker. The slow milker gets less milk, and dries up the cow.

Nervous cows, like the Jerseys, are sensitive to rough handling. The amount of butter produced is materially affected by the treatment they receive.

Experiments have been made in Germany showing that calves do better on boiled than raw milk, and gained still more in flesh if a portion of salt was added.

Put your farm-produce up attractively and it will more than pay you. Inferior quality attractively put up will sell better than superior quality slovenly put up.

Dehorn, dehorn, dehorn. Cows do better with horns off, and there is no danger. The best way is to stop them from growing on calves by rubbing with caustic potash.

Good cows, good feed and a good separator will not make good butter if you do not thoroughly understand the art of butter-making. If you don't know how, you can learn.—Midland Farmer.

Profitable Cover Crops.

In seasons when the growth of vegetation has been retarded by long drought, it is especially important to sow cover crops in the summer and fall to supply the deficiency of vegetable matter in the soil and to keep a covering on the ground in winter time. This month and next is a good time to sow crimson clover or red clover in corn at the last working and in vine truck or wherever it will grow. On ground from which early crops have been removed cowpeas can be used for the purpose. Turnips may be sown with clover and furnish stock food or sheep pasture. The furnishing of late fall pasture by these crops will save hay and other stored fodder.—Farm Journal.

TREES AMONG STUMPS.

A System of Orchard Cultivation That Is Highly Recommended by Some Authorities.

Mr. Samuel B. Woods, president of the Virginia Horticultural society, writing to the Rural New-Yorker says: I gave the matter of planting orchards in new ground much study some years since. The result was that we planted 34,000 trees and will set 20,000 more this spring, among the stumps. We cut the trees down, saw up what will do for lumber and burn the rest on the ground. Then we plant the trees in rows very regularly laid off, and hoe and bush them thoroughly, going over the ground about four times a season. We are planting rough mountain land from 1,000 to 1,800 feet above the sea level. We bush with blades and mattocks, and we are very anxious to learn what cheap chemical will kill a stump, and the best way and time to apply it, as the cost of work would be much reduced if we did not have to take off so many sprouts from the big stumps. As we kill out the growth we use a colter, putting the land into corn or peas, and will thus eventually give all the orchard cultivation with a plow. I am satisfied that it is a positive advantage to leave the stumps; they carry the moisture deep into the ground, help the drainage and enrich the soil by decay. You may have noticed that a young tree planted by an old oak, hickory or chestnut stump is the best tree in the orchard. I have. At the same time I believe that the more cultivation given to the new ground the better for the trees. Some people fear that the worms always found in decayed wood will attack the growing trees, but there is no danger from that source, as the worm which lives on decayed wood is of a different kind entirely from the worm which attacks growing trees. You might as well expect a dove to eat a hawk's food.

We have in Albemarle county some orchards now in fine bearing raised on above plan. I have been told of a peach orchard, the returns from which have in recent years run up to $25,000 per annum, which was grown among the stumps. I was talking last year to a man who has one of the largest orchards in the state, and who had spent a good deal of money in pulling up stumps and getting the land absolutely cleared, and he stated to me that if he had to do it over again he would leave the stumps, as he regarded their advantages as outweighing their disadvantages and in addition the cost of the work was tremendous. He told me that it cost as much to fill up the hole as it did to pull the stump, which I had not thought of.

REMOVING VINE ROOTS.

A Handy Tool Which Does the Work of Several Men and Does It Neatly, Too.

It is sometimes desirable to pull out a vineyard and use the land for other purposes. I send a sketch of a simple tool which is effective in tearing out the roots. A wire (b), five feet long, is fastened about three feet from the end of a nine-foot pole (a a), or hard wood sapling, and to a single tree. The larger end of the pole should be slightly bent at the bottom so it will scoop under a vine. If vineyard rows are long, begin tearing out vines at center, dump in a pile at each end and burn.—J. B. McDonald, in Farm and Home.

The Variations in Milk.

It is difficult to educate dairymen into the fact that both milk and cream vary widely in fat contents, and that for no reasons that can be given as satisfactory, says Hoard's Dairyman. No cow can be kept in such regular conditions as to food, drink and surroundings that the composition of the milk will not change from day to day and from hour to hour. The action of the nervous system of the cow is beyond measurement by any instrument possessed by the experiment station, and until such instrument is invented the reason why a cow gives 4.5 per cent. milk Monday and 3.5 per cent. milk Tuesday will be beyond explanation. The men who buy sugar beets trust nothing to the theory of averages; they sample and analyze every load of beets; the man who mines gold also samples and analyzes, but the man who produces milk trusts to averages, and only kicks when he finds his returns sometimes below the point that he considers proper.

Oleo Makers Are Active.

The dairyman who thinks that the oleo makers are going to stop coloring oleo without making a vigorous attempt to find a method that the law will not forbid is very much mistaken, says Hoard's Dairyman. Ever since the law was passed all the skill of some of the best chemists in the country has been at work on the question of finding a natural color for oleo. At one time palm oil seemed to furnish what was wanted and a color that the analyst could not identify. But what one chemist puts together another one can usually pull apart, and a method of identifying the palm oil color has been found, and the successful manufacture of colored untaxed oleo is still in the distance.

DEBITS AND CREDITS.

A deed absolute in form is held, in First national bank vs. Sargent (Neb.), 59 L. R. A. 296, to be properly treated as a mortgage when it is given to secure payment of a debt, although the parties may have agreed that upon default of payment the deed shall become absolute.

The entry of a judgment setting aside in favor of creditors a voluntary deed is held, in Steinmeyer vs. Steinmeyer (S. C.), 59 L. R. A., 319, to change the ownership of the grantee from sole and unconditional within the meaning of a policy of insurance in his favor, which is to be void in case he has not such ownership.

Directors of an insolvent manufacturing corporation are held, in Nappanee Canning company vs. Reid, M. & Co. (Ind.), 59 L. R. A. 199, to be entitled to apply its assets to their own unsecured claims against it, and to its obligations upon which they are individually liable, although the result is to deprive persons who have contracted with it of any remedy for breach of its contracts.

Land held by a debtor and his wife by entireties, is held, in Laird vs. Perry (Va.), 59 L. R. A., 340, to pass, except her right of survivorship, by his assignment of all his estate, real and personal, for the benefit of creditors, under statutes making everything pass which might be taken in execution against him, but providing that neither the wife's separate property nor its products shall be liable for his debts.

Great Yarmouth, England, has the narrowest street in the world. It is Kitty Witches, which is only 55 inches wide. You can lean out of your window and shake hands with your neighbor across the street.

Through the carelessness of a workman the valuable collection of busts and skulls—once the property of Gall, the founder of phrenology—in the museum of Baden, near Vienna, has been seriously damaged.

The whole northern part of Asia Minor, according to the treaty between Russia and Turkey, is now placed under such conditions that Russian capitalists have the area open to them to the exclusion of foreign enterprises. A situation analogous is found in Persia, where the entire northern portion is acknowledged to be under the exclusive economic influence of Russia.

The floating gardens in the lakes near the City of Mexico were recently visited by an English naturalist, who reports them a paradise and accounts for their existence. Floating tangles of peat moss, rushes and grass are caught by stakes driven into the soft lake bottom, and upon this mass rich mud from the bottom is thrown. The surface is then transformed into a market garden.

PE-RU-NA IS OF ESPECIAL BENEFIT TO WOMEN

Says Dr. M. C. Gee, of San Francisco.

A CONSTANTLY increasing number of physicians prescribe Peruna in their regular practice.

It has proven its merits so thoroughly that even the doctors have overcome their prejudice against so called patent medicines and recommend it to their patients.

"I Advise Women to Use Pe-ru-na," Says Dr. Gee.

Dr. M. C. Gee is one of the physicians who endorse Peruna. In a letter written from 513 Jones street, San Francisco, Cal., he says:

"There is a general objection on the part of the practicing physician to advocate patent medicines, but when any one medicine cures hundreds of people, it demonstrates its own value and does not need the endorsement of the profession.

"Peruna has performed so many wonderful cures in San Francisco that I am convinced that it is a valuable remedy. I have frequently advised its use for women, as I find it insures regular and painless menstruation, cures leucorrhœa and ovarian troubles, and builds up the entire system. I also consider it one of the finest catarrh remedies I know of. I heartily endorse your medicine."—M. C. Gee, M. D.

Mrs. E. T. Gaddis, Marion, N. C., is one of Dr. Hartman's grateful patients. She consulted him by letter, followed his directions, and is now able to say the following:

"Before I commenced to take Peruna I could not do any hard work without suffering great pain. I took Peruna, and can say with pleasure that it has done more for me than any other medicine I have ever taken. Now I am as well as ever; I do all my own work and it never hurts me at all. I think Peruna is a great medicine for womankind."—Mrs. E. T. Gaddis.

Women are especially liable to pelvic catarrh, female weakness as it is commonly called.

Peruna occupies a unique position in medical science. It is the only internal systemic catarrh remedy known to the medical profession today. Catarrh, as every one will admit, is the cause of one-half the diseases which afflict mankind. Catarrh and catarrhal diseases afflict one-half of the people of the United States.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

REALISTIC FINISH.

Where There Was to Be an Automobile an Ambulance Was Necessary.

"This," said the dramatist, who was elaborating the scenario of his new play to the manager, according to Judge, "is to be a realistic society drama. The heroine makes a thrilling entrance in an auto."

"What does she do then?" asked the manager.

"Why, of course she meets the hero and the villain and the soubrette and the rest, and the play goes on to the usual happy ending."

"Well, you start realistically enough, but you weaken on your finish."

"How's that?" asked the puzzled playwright.

"If she's going to come in on an auto she and a few of the rest ought to make their exit in an ambulance."

The Thousand Islands.

There may be somewhere on the earth a more delightful region than that of the Thousand Islands, but if there is, it has not been discovered. It is the Venice of America, but also has good hotels that can be kept warm if there shall happen to be a cold rainy evening. It is as fine as the Bay of Naples, with 2,000 picturesque Islands scattered along the twenty-five miles of one of the most beautiful rivers in the world. You can find out a great deal regarding it in No. 10 of the "Four-Track Series," "The Thousand Islands." Copy will be mailed free on receipt of a 2-cent stamp by George H. Daniels, General Passenger Agent, Grand Central Station, New York.

KENTUCKY HEMP LEADS

Interesting Feature of World's Fair Exhibit.

FIBRE PLANTS OF THE WORLD.

Display Is One of the Exhibits That Surrounds the Great Five-Acre Map of the United States Showing States In Their Growing Crops.

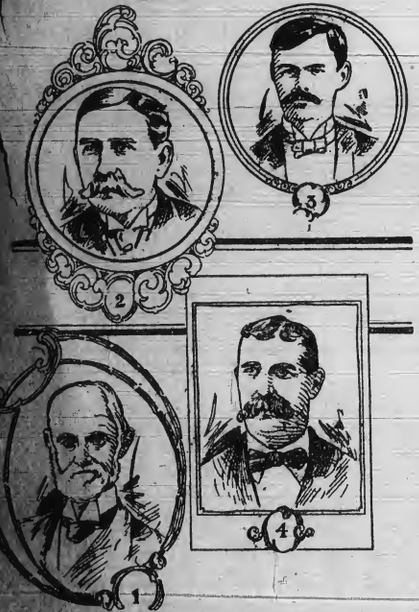
A miniature field of Kentucky hemp is shaded by the mammoth leaves of large banana trees in the fibre plant section of the grounds surrounding the five-acre map of the United States at the World's Fair at St. Louis.

The hemp section is given over to three sections—the Kentucky, Italian and Russian. The varieties are all from the same parent and possess practically the same characteristics.

MAJOR DAVID CASTLEMAN,
Chairman Hemp Exhibit Committee, Kentucky Exhibit Association.

Kentucky is apparently the native home for hemp, for there it attains the nearest perfection.

In the rich valleys the seed is sown broadcast early in March, as soon as danger from severe frost is past. The seed is covered with harrows, and for several weeks the brown fields lie dormant. Then as the seeds have burst and the roots have developed little spears of the light green appear above the brown earth. Every day of sunshine witnesses the green increase and the brown disappear. As the plants grow taller they take a darker shade, and by August, when it is almost time for the reaper, the waving hemp, by this time having attained a height of 8, 10 or 12 feet, is a dark brown, almost the color of the ground when the seed is sown.



So thick grows the hemp that no other living thing can exist in the field. Weeds are throttled and birds can not penetrate the thicket of nettles. The thicker grows the hemp the finer and more valuable the fibre.

Flax, from the fibre of which is produced linen, and from the seed of which is obtained linseed oil, is another interesting section among the fibre plants.

Jute forms another interesting part of the display. This is the most abundant and the cheapest fiber of which anything is known. It comes from India, Japan, Formosa and China. The United States imports annually more of jute than all other fibres combined.

Major David Castleman, of Pleasant Hill, is chairman of the committee on hemp exhibits of the Kentucky Exhibit Association, and is planning both instructive and unique displays of hemp in the Agricultural building, aside from that shown in the plant life map. He proposes to show hemp from the seed to the finished products of the fibre.

Mrs. Bertha Rice and little son, of Bellevue, spent one day last week with her aunt, Mrs. Sarah E. White, of this place, and picked blackberries.

A fine rain fell here last Tuesday night. It was badly needed and was very beneficial to the grass and growing crops. Gunpowder creek got on a rampage that night and washed down corn and did considerable damage along that line.

Uncle Jim's Fishing Club, of Cincinnati, came down as usual, this summer and pitched its tent on S. H. Marshall's place for a week's vacation and sport. The club was composed as follows: Thos. Sherwood, policeman; Edward Sherwood, of the fire department; Robert Sherwood, mechanic; Lon Monor, night watchman; Edward Jones, foreman of a sales stable; Harry Elfers, shoe cutter; Willie Burgoyn, paver; Harry Smith, artist and cook. Mrs. Edward Sherwood and daughter, and Robert Sherwood and Miss Lydia Sherwood lodged and took their meals at S. H. Marshall's. While in camp Mr. and Mrs. Edward Sherwood celebrated the eighth anniversary of their wedding, which occasion was enjoyed with them by quite a number of guests from the surrounding neighborhood. The graphophone and music on the mandolin and guitar assisted in the evening's entertainment, as some of the members of the club are very fine musicians. Each member of the club did all that could be done to make the guests enjoy themselves, and right well did they succeed. Your reporter was shown through the different departments of the camp, the sleeping rooms being the first visited, where everything was neat and clean and in its place. The kitchen was in first-class order with provisions enough on hand to last several days. In the cellar, or refrigerator as some called it, things were kept cool for future reference, such as lemonade, etc., which was served during the evening. Before the visitors took their leave each lady who is the head of a household was given a present. When the guest took their departure they were invited to return one year hence to enjoy the campers' hospitality.

Mr. and Mrs. Elbert Brown and son, Hubert Earl, of Cincinnati, are guests of her father, Robt. Northcutt.

Rev. Adams, of Walton, is conducting a series of meetings at Bank Lick Baptist church. There have been several additions.

Several of our young people attended the party given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Tanner, of Richwood, on the evening of the 25th inst., and report an enjoyable evening.

We are informed that a certain individual has attempted to make the impression that we are a lot of unadulterated nothing. We do not lay claim to infallibility, but we bear the proud title of gentleman, and deem that alone sufficient to refute any malicious rumor instigated by one who, on account of his ignorance and insignificance, is unworthy of our resentment. Figuratively speaking it hurts us to stoop, and in view of this fact we make it a rule that when any gaseous ignoramus attempts to assail us, we like the proverbial boy, when kicked by the donkey, consider the source feeling that we are invulnerable to the attacks of one whose prime qualities are bigotry and ignorance, and realizing that to resent any statement made by such individuals is beneath the dignity of a gentleman.

COMMISSARY.

July 25—We had a root-soaker here Tuesday night.

J. J. Walton's child that has been very sick is improving.

Have your watches and clocks repaired by R. W. Clark in Burlington.

Mrs. T. J. Walton and children, Mrs. Hunt and Mrs. Dr. Williamson were guests of Mrs. J. J. Walton, Tuesday.

Owen Conner and R. A. Brady, called at the Commissary, Friday morning, and were entertained with a few of our World's Fair jokes.

Miss Willie Kenney, a handsome young lady of Owen county, and Miss Lizzie Rogers, of Bellevue, were guests of Misses Artie and Stella Ryle, last Wednesday.

The fire that was seen here Tuesday night after the storm, was caused by the burning of a barn belonging to a Mr. Harris, just above Rising Sun, on the other side of the river.

Lightning struck T. J. Walton's wire fence during Tuesday night's storm, between the Commissary and W. T. Ryle's, and made kindling wood of some of the oak stays.

T. J. Walton will have more hay this season than he had last season. A month or six weeks ago he thought he would have to sell off some of his livestock, but, instead, he will have hay to sell.

A meteor fell south of the Commissary during the storm last Tuesday night. Roy Clutterbuck, of Burlington, who was on the road near here with his merchandise wagon, witnessed the fall.

Harve Smith, who played ball first with the Bellevue team and then with the Burlington team, we are reliably informed, has been released by the latter team, for reasons unknown to our informant. Harve has organized a team of his own, composed principally of country players, and he is ready to cross bats with Burlington or Bellevue.

John Critcher, of Sedamsville, Ohio, bought stock here this week as follows: Of W. I. Rouse and sons, 2 cows and 1 calf for $55, and 3 sows and 12 pigs for $40; of Ed Berkshire, 1 cow and 2 calves, and 1 sow and 8 pigs for $61; from Bert Berkshire 1 sow and pigs—price not known. He bought stock also from Thos. Goodridge, but we did not learn what.

Carl Hunt, of near Ashland, Clark county, Kansas, writes that he run a 6 foot-cut binder during harvest, and cut 14 acres of wheat per day for 10 consecutive days without changing horses. He reports the wheat good, oats never better, and the weather very dry. He says grass is drying up, and if it don't rain in a few days the corn will be short. He says Mrs. Boone Rogers, who is spending the summer with her daughter, Mrs. Williamson, is not well pleased with Kansas.

Persons desiring one or more copies of the illustrated edition of the Recorder to send to absent friends or relatives, can be supplied with same by leaving orders with the Commissary correspondent. Every subscriber who has a friend or relative at a distance should make their heart glad by sending them a copy. It will be something nice—price, 10 cents. We will deliver papers within two miles of the Commissary, and in the towns of Bellevue and McVille.

Brutally Tortured.

A case came to light that for persistent and unmerciful torture has perhaps never been equaled. Joe Golobick of Colusa, Cal. writes, "For 15 years I endured insufferable pain from Rheumatism and nothing relieved me though I tried everything known. I came across Electric Bitters, and its the greatest medicine on earth for that trouble. A few bottles of it completely relieved and cured me." Just as good for Liver and Kidney troubles and general debility. Only 50c. Satisfaction guaranteed by all Druggists.

Have your watches and clocks repaired by R. W. Clark in Burlington.

LUDLOW.

The Supreme Council met last Thursday evening, and a petition was presented, signed by all the business people of the town and several hundred citizens, including many ladies, asking that supreme body to so modify or repeal the license ordinance that farmers can sell their produce here without being required to pay the license. The council gave the petitioners to understand that their request would not be granted, and instructed the chief of police to arrest any and all persons with vehicles, who stop to transact any kind of business in the town, if they refuse to pay the license. If you stop to buy a one cent paper you have to pay a $5 or $10 license. Several country people were in town last week to ask the city officials to allow them to haul a few loads of coal from the elevator at this place. They were informed, promptly, that they would have to pay a ten dollar license or be arrested, but that they can get coal in Covington and haul it through Ludlow without paying the license. This, no doubt, will seem ridiculous and an exaggeration to the readers of the Recorder, but it is true, I am sorry to say, and can be proven, as can also the articles that have appeared in your paper signed, "Poor Farmer," and the sad part of it is that it happens in a town that brags of having the best facilities for education and enlightenment of any town of its size. The only consolation the citizens have is that the term of the present council expires next November and they will see to it that none of them are re-elected.

Mr. Spinks' teams were arrested a year ago for using the streets with 8 or 10 four-ton sand wagons, every day he said he would quit buying sand in Ludlow, by some influence the case was never tried and Spinks still hauls the sand and pays no license, but others using the same streets with a little old country wagon or rubber tire buggy would have to pay license.

One business man undertook to explain to the council the injury it was doing to Ludlow, but they paid no attention to him but exchanged smiling glances at each other as if to say, we have the power and we are going to use it; we work for big corporations, we care nothing for your business, all we care for is to place to sleep.

My husband spent hundreds of dollars for physicians' prescriptions and treatment without avail. Finally we moved to Bosque county, our present home, and one day I happened to see an advertisement of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera, and Diarrhoea Remedy with a testimonial of a man who had been cured by it. The case was so similar to my own that I concluded to try the remedy. The result was wonderful. The Raiment of the Redeemed

Every Thought, Word and Deed Should Be Clothed in the Spirit of Christ

Sermon by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher.

(Copyright, 1903, by J. M. Edson.)

Chicago, Sunday, July 26, 1903.

Text:—"Put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ."—Rom. 13-14.

THE question of dress has been an important one to the human race ever since the guilty pair in the garden sought to cover their nakedness by the fig-leaf aprons. What one wears is to a great extent a guide to one's station in life and to the occupation pursued for a livelihood. The matter of dress and fashion is of supreme importance to vast multitudes of people, and more time is devoted to the subject than to any other one thing. Styles change and the dress of to-day has little to remind one of the garments which were worn by our forefathers. The people of the different nations may be distinguished by their dress. It is supposed that, with the multiplying of the languages of the earth at the tower of Babel and the scattering of the people, there came a change in style of dress, and soon each nation had adapted to its own peculiar tastes the raiment of its people. Scripture employs the term of garment in a figurative sense. The psalmist declares of God: "Thou art clothed with honor and majesty; who coverest Thyself with light as with a garment." In another place he describes the wicked by saying that "violence covereth them as a garment," and in still another place God declares that He will "clothe in shame" the enemies of His children. The priests of the Lord are urged to "be clothed with righteousness," and He gives His promise that He "will also clothe them with salvation." Paul tells us that "as many as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ"—that is theoretically and by outward sign, and then begins the practical experience of putting "off the old man, which is corrupt according to the deceitful lusts," and the putting on "the new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness." The command to the one who has put on Christ in baptism is: "Put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ," by a daily exercise of the will and heart. And then Paul particularizes when he says: "Put on, therefore, as the elect of God, holy and beloved, bowels of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, longsuffering, forbearing one another, and forgiving one another, if any man have a quarrel against any; even as Christ forgave you, so also do ye. And above all these things put on love, which is the bond of perfectness."

THE raiment of the Christian is to be of such a character as to unmistakably identify him with the Lord whom he professes. At the immigrant station at New York it is not difficult to distinguish the nationality of the men and women landed there, by their different styles of dress. The garments they wear are characteristic of the countries from which they have come. It should be so with the Christian. He ought to have so put on Christ as to be easily distinguished from the people of the world. The face should be illuminated with the light and peace of the Christ who sits enthroned within. The eyes should be quick to see the places of need, should be channels through which the good, and never evil, reach the soul. The ears should be keen to hear the cry of distress, should be open to receive the goodly message, but deaf to the impure and vainglorious. The lips should move under Divine inspiration, should speak clean and true, and never be stained with impure, unkind or thoughtless word. The hands should be busy in kindly, loving ministry, for Satan finds mischief for idle hands to do. The feet should be ready to travel in the pathway of duty and not be eager to run in the byways of sin and pleasure. The eyes, the ears, the lips, the hands, the feet would thus all bear the distinctive livery of the Divine Lord. The "put-on" Lord would be the light in the candlestick giving light to all about; it would be the salt of the earth, which, not having lost its savor, would be able to season the unsaved and unsavory masses.

THE beautiful transforming quality of the raiment of the redeemed is that it makes of one all people. No matter of what nationality those who put on Christ may be, they bear a likeness one to the other, and each to Jesus Christ. The Chinaman is easily distinguishable from the Hindoo, and the Russian peasant from the son of sunny Italy, but the Chinaman and the Hindoo, the Russian and the Italian, who have put on Christ, who have clothed themselves in the raiment of the redeemed, all possess Divine graces which mark them as members of the household of God. One has but to read Capt. Cook's graphic accounts of the savagery and licentiousness which distinguished the natives of the South Sea Islands, and then to listen to the testimony of the missionaries as to the transformation which took place when the Gospel as a garment clothed the people, to realize how all peoples are made one in Christ Jesus. The Christian in Asia, in Africa, Europe, in the Americas, or in the isles of the sea, if he wears the livery of the Lord [illegible] were being accused before the sanhedrin.

AND this raiment of the redeemed is something of which the world cannot deprive the soul. It can strip of earthly possessions, it can tear garments with which the body is clothed, but it cannot touch the raiment of the soul. The heartless Roman soldiers could strip Jesus of His raiment and put upon Him a scarlet robe and plat a crown of thorns upon His brow, but they were utterly powerless to take away that sublime faith, that quiet dignity, that matchless grace and love which clothed His presence as with a garment and wrought its influence on all about and made those same soldiers declare in the dark hour of death: "Truly, this man was the Son of God!" They could in avaricious zeal seize upon His raiment and cast lots for His cloak, but they could not rob Him of that inexhaustible mercy which reached out and shortened the sufferings of the dying thief and took him with Him into Paradise. And that which was true of Jesus is true of every one of His disciples. The world may be able to take their silver and their gold, and everything else which they possess of this world's goods, but it can never lay a soiling, defiling hand upon the raiment of the redeemed, which consists of the indwelling Christ manifesting Himself in their every thought and word and deed.

AT the entrance to some of the great coal mines where the fine black dust of the coal settles upon everything with soiling and disfiguring touch, there grows a little white flower which glistens and glows in its spotless purity amidst all the blackness around it. The effect is startling, and you wonder how it is that the pure white of its petals is not soon tarnished and blackened by the ever-setting coal dust. All else about it is dingy, but here is this little white flower which the coal dust seems unable to injure in the least degree. In searching for the reason we find that the little flower has a transparent enamel covering for its white petals which is absolutely impervious to the dust about it. The blackness from the coal mine rolls from its surface and leaves no tell-tale marks behind. The flower is still possessed of its purity and loveliness. It is so with the Christian who abides under the sheltering presence of his Lord. His garments cannot then become tarnished or defiled with the sin dust of the world.

BUT if the world may not rob the Christian of his raiment, or soil or tarnish it, the Christian may soil his own garments. In the message to the church at Sardis we find the charge made that there were not many who had not defiled their garments. Only a few there were who had kept themselves unspotted from the world. The majority had so far forgotten the profession they had made and the name they bore as to share in the sinful pleasures and ambitions of the world. The garments of Christian profession had become soiled with the filth of the world, had become torn by its snares and temptations. Demas, a co-laborer with Paul and about whom Paul sorrowingly had to write: "Demas hath forsaken me, having loved this present world," was one whose garments had become soiled and defiled with the touch of the world. While he stayed with Paul and labored in the Gospel with him he came in contact with the sin spots of the world; he went into the dark and needy and foul places, but it was not then that his garments became defiled. Christ could touch the lepers and not be unclean; He could feel the pressure of the ceremonial unclean woman who was suffering with an incurable ailment and not be defiled; He could lift the sinful woman to her feet and tell her to go and sin no more, and still be spotless and pure; He could eat with publicans and sinners, and still lift up and save, for "He came, not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance." And Demas could go with His Lord and Master into the needy and dark places and be untouched by the sin and dirt of the world, but when he went off by himself into the world, drawn by his own desires and longing for its pleasures, he at once lost that immunity, and the sin and dirt of the world made hideous, disfiguring marks upon the garments of his Christian profession.

"PUT ye on the Lord Jesus," because the garments of the natural self are but filthy rags. God's Word gives us the picture of Joshua, the high priest, standing before the angel of the Lord. The contrast is striking. Joshua is clothed in filthy garments; the angel in robes of spotless white. Joshua has upon him the garments which he himself has secured; the angel has those which God has provided. And the command goes forth: "Take away the filthy garments from him." And a change of raiment was provided for Joshua. He was clothed upon by God. Although it was Joshua, the high priest, who had been ministering for the people before the Lord, still the righteousnesses of the natural self were as but filthy rags in the presence of God. He must receive garments from the hand of God. It is so with the Christian. To put on Christ means more than mere acceptance of Him as a Saviour. It is the putting away of the natural self and allowing Christ [illegible] condition of the natural self and longs to be clothed upon in all fullness by Jesus Christ. There must be a putting off before there can be a putting on. The garment of Christ's presence will not fit over the garments of the natural self. The Christian must put off if he would put on. That is what Paul means when he tells us to "crucify the flesh, with the affections and lusts." The putting off is a painful process, but the putting on of Christ is the reward and blessedness of the change of raiment.

THIS is illustrated by the experience of Augustine, which has made this, our text, memorable. He says: "Thus was I sick and tormented in mind, bitterly accusing myself, and rolling and turning about in my chain, till it might be wholly broken. At length, rushing into the garden, groaning in spirit, all my bones were crying out, soul-sick was I and grievously tormented. I said to myself: 'Be it done now; be it done now.' And a voice said: 'Why standest thou in thyself, and so standest not? Cast thyself upon Him. Fear not; He will not withdraw Himself to let thee fall. He will receive, and will heal thee. Stop thine ears against those unclean members of thine, which are upon earth, that they may be mortified.' Then arose a mighty tempest, bringing a heavy downpour of tears. I cast myself under a fig tree, and gave rein to my tears, and the flood of mine eyes brake forth. Why not now? Why not this hour make an end of my uncleanness? And, lo! from the neighboring house I heard the voice as of a boy or girl, I know not which, singing and oft repeating: 'Take and read; take and read!' Checking the torrent of my tears, I arose, interpreting it to be a Divine command to open the Book and read the first chapter I could find. I seized; I opened, and in silence read the passage on which mine eyes fell: 'Not in rioting and drunkenness, not in chambering and wantonness, not in strife and envying. But PUT YE ON THE LORD JESUS CHRIST, and make not provision for the flesh, to fulfill the lusts thereof.' No further would I read; nor was there need, for instantly all my heart was flooded with a light of peace, all the sadness of doubt melted away!" History's page and his own confessions give us a glimpse of the profligacy of Augustine; and we can understand that it was no easy task for him to put off the old life and nature and put on Christ. But this he did, and we have in the foregoing a vision of what that struggle meant, and the peace and joy which came when he had by faith put on the Christ whom he professed.

THE world expects the professing Christian to wear the raiment of the redeemed. It is constantly looking toward the Christian for help in its distress and need. It knows that Christian profession, if it be genuine, is followed by the outward expression of good works. And, on the other hand, it is able to pick out the Christian, to know him when it sees him by the kindly word or helpful deed. I remember hearing the testimony once of a redeemed drunkard. He had been not only a dissipated man, but a skeptic. He put all Christians down as hypocrites, and refused to believe in the genuineness of religious experiences. All appeals by Christian workers were fruitless. He was untouched and unyielding. But one day a Christian who was clothed with the compassion and love of Jesus came along and found this miserable drunkard and skeptic in the gutter where he had fallen. He saw beneath the dirt and filth and besotted condition the soul which God loved. He went down into the gutter. He put his arm around him. He lifted him up. He took him home. The man was not so drunk but that he knew he was being compassionately cared for. He knew he was having a new experience, that instead of being abused and mistreated by the wicked and thoughtless and shunned by others, he was being delivered from his wretched position. As his brain cleared and he was able to think, the question kept arising in his mind: "Why did he do this?" It was the first thing in his life that ever made him realize that religion was a reality. He said: "I knew he was a Christian. If ever there was one, I wanted to be one, too!" That man who had been denying the reality of the Christian religion was able to identify the Christian by the Christly raiment he was wearing. Does the world have an opportunity of identifying you and me as Christians by the raiment we are wearing? Are we putting on the Lord Jesus Christ in the home, on the street, in business, in the social circle, everywhere and always, in such a way as to be easily identified as a Christian?

AND the people of the world are quick to detect the sham. They may not have light enough to realize their own need; they may never be brought to the place where they know they are lost and need a Saviour, but they do know when the professing Christian is not wearing the livery of his Lord. The shallow-minded, superficial Christian, the worldly-minded Christian, is blind and does not realize that the world can detect any difference between his veneer and the genuine raiment of the redeemed, but the world is keen and observing, and knows just what a Christian ought to be. It can soon penetrate the outward sham and know just the depth of the profession. What a reproach it is to-day to the religion of the Lord Jesus Christ that the Christ is so readily and universally professed, and so little put on. If you profess Christ, the command to you is to "put on the Lord Jesus Christ" in every relation [illegible]

SURPLUS CALLS FOR REVISION.

Injustice of Keeping Such a Large Sum Out of the Channels of Trade.

Notwithstanding the reduction in internal revenues through the repeal of the war taxes and the increase in appropriations the closing day of the fiscal year finds a surplus in the national treasury amounting to $52,710,590; and in available cash balance amounting to $231,545,012.

In repealing the war taxes it was expected that the reduction in internal revenues would be about $75,000,000, whereas the actual loss was only $41,764,846. The story of the government's fiscal operations for the year is briefly told in the following statement of receipts and disbursements:

SOURCES OF REVENUE.

Customs	$283,191,719
Internal revenue	230,115,705
Miscellaneous	44,134,362

EXPENDITURES.

Civil and miscellaneous	$125,004,213
War (including rivers and harbor)	119,540,633
Navy	47,853,357
Indians	13,931,356
Pensions	135,005,648
Interest	19,5.6,618

The fact that the surplus for 1903 is greater than was anticipated by congress is attributable, of course, to the general prosperity of the country. It is noted, for instance, that the customs receipts were greater than those of last year by $29,434,791, owing to the enormous importation of partly manufactured goods. A large increase in miscellaneous internal revenue receipts was due to phenomenal sales of public lands, which reflect unusual prosperity in the west.

That the unexpected surplus is due to increased and widespread industrial activity is, of course, highly gratifying to the country. But when the revenue producing machinery creates such a surplus it is clearly not well fitted to the times, says the Chicago Record-Herald. The showing that is made points unmistakably to a readjustment of the tariff schedules, to the end that the surplus may be reduced and that the impost duties may be more scientifically adapted to present industrial conditions. It is noted that the customs receipts were greater than the internal revenue receipts by over $53,000,000. The chances are that the importation of partly manufactured goods will be even greater during the coming fiscal year. There is no prospect of reduced revenues in that direction under the present laws.

The wisdom of a reduction of the surplus is so plainly obvious as to require no extended argument, and the place where the reduction should be made is equally obvious. On the first point we need only say that it is not just that the government should keep such a large sum out of the channels of trade or that it should raise excessive revenues from the people. Moreover, such a surplus is a constant temptation to extravagant and unnecessary appropriations. As regards the second point it is equally clear that the people will not assent to any further reduction in the internal revenue taxes on beer, whisky and tobacco. The only cure for the surplus is a revision of the tariff.

THE PARAMOUNT ISSUE.

Opinion of James H. Eckels on the Outlook for the Democratic Party.

James H. Eckels, of Chicago, comptroller of the currency under the last administration of President Cleveland, expressed himself the other day regarding the democratic party, but refused to make a prediction as to the men whom the democrats may select as their next candidates.

"I am not interesting myself in politics to any extent," said Mr. Eckels. "Naturally, as a democrat, I am anxious that the party should present a candidate and platform which will command the respect and support of the conservative elements of the country. It has been demonstrated that the conservative elements win presidential elections and that the second sober thought of the people is more to be relied upon than that enthusiasm which finds expression in radical platforms and unbusinesslike suggestions. The democratic party ought to have a useful place in the public affairs of the nation. Neither political organization ought to be so wholly in command as to make it reckless in legislation and extravagant in expenditures, as is always the case when too overwhelmingly in the majority. This is going to be the danger to which the country will be subjected from a weak democratic organization and a strong republican one.

"The democrats ought to make a strong campaign for the reform of the tariff, less extravagance in public expenditure and the conducting of this government in accord with democratic principles of the least government consistent with the proper protection of the rights of persons and of property. They should stand for an indiscriminate and fair enforcement of the laws on the statute books which ought to be there and a repeal of those which are useless and a hindrance to business conditions. The money question is eliminated and the currency question cannot be made a party issue. There is left, therefore only the tariff question. On this the democrats have the right of the issue and ought to stand to it."

"Have you any idea as to a possible candidate of the democratic party?"

"I do not know who will be a candidate," was the reply. "Someone will be found, I have no doubt, and democrats will support him."

BOTH WAYS AT ONCE—A CHARACTERISTIC REPUBLICAN PRODUCT

OVERCONFIDENCE OF HANNA.

The Ohio Republican Boss May Have to Eat His Own Words Before Long.

When Mr. Hanna says he will not accept a nomination for vice president and that the nomination cannot be forced on him, he forgets the wisdom of Napoleon. "Very often I do not say what I know," said the great captain to the Parisian editors who claimed he had predicted that he would be in Milan within a month. "Very often I do not say what I know, but never do I say what will be." Mr. Hanna has said what will be, or rather what will not be, and this always involves risks, says the Detroit Free Press.

Theodore Roosevelt, whose spine is supposed to contain quite as much lime as the Hanna spine, declared that he would not accept a nomination for vice president. Mr. Hanna heartily agreed with the then governor of New York, and gave assurances that Mr. Roosevelt would never get a chance to accept it; but the nomination hunted down the man for all that, and both Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Hanna were powerless to divert it from the line of greatest resistance.

With this object lesson before him, Mr. Hanna should be cautious about saying what he will do or what he will not do. Not so very long ago he said the Ohio republican convention would not indorse Theodore Roosevelt for president. He was just as firm about it as he is about the vice presidency; but the Ohio convention indorsed Mr. Roosevelt for all that, and Mr. Hanna did his best to look pleasant. He may have to eat his words again when the republican national convention has finished the work of nominating a candidate for vice president. It is not so easy to resist conscription when the draft is made by a great political party, and Mr. Hanna should not be too confident. "Never do I say what will be." There is no better motto for a great political leader.

CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE.

They Were Not Thinking of Getting Married, But Everything Seemed to Point That Way.

"A case of almost conclusive circumstantial evidence indicating matrimonial intentions on the part of a bashful young clerk in my division has been causing that young man considerable embarrassment of late," said a chief of a division in the war department the other day to a Washington Star man.

"The other evening the young man in question went out with a young lady to make a call on some of her friends who reside in a certain apartment house in the northwest part of the city. It was a rather new structure and since the young fellow mentioned was unacquainted with its exact location he found considerable difficulty in locating the place. While, together with the young lady, he was wandering along the street keeping his eyes open for the flat a fellow clerk in the department happened along, and the perplexed young man with the young lady sought his friend's aid in the difficulty by inquiring the location of the flat. The proper direction was given and then the passing clerk seemed struck with a sudden bright thought. His face lighted up with the significance of his idea, and grasping the hand of his fellow clerk, he said:

"'And say, old man, there are some fine apartments in that house. Be just the thing for you. I thought you had been unusually preoccupied at the office lately with something besides your work. Congratulations, old man. Don't forget your Uncle Fuller when you issue the pasteboards. Good luck to both of you.'

"And then the enthusiastic and quick-witted friend moved on, leaving the young man and his companion both looking intently at the edge of the pavement, with the color of their faces corresponding to the glow of the setting sun.

"Now, the circumstances in the case all pointed to the marriage of the young clerk as a natural sequence. The young man had recently been admitted to the bar, he was slated for a promotion in the office, he had just applied for his annual leave and had been talking of taking a trip. Then, again, it was known among the boys that he had been saving up his salary for the last few months and had accumulated a little bunch of money in the bank. In the face of these facts, together with the incident of his looking for a flat in company with a handsome young lady, there seemed but one conclusion to be reached in the matter, and the brother clerk reached that conclusion on the run.

"Of course the matter was spread about the office next day, and the bashful young clerk now has an ache in his right arm from shaking hands with the boys, who insist on congratulating him on his coming matrimonial venture, although he denies emphatically that he has any such intention. The boys refuse to accept his explanation of the case and are waiting for the cards."

NO USE TO FIGHT SUIT.

Damage Claim on Railroad Quickly Allowed When Official Saw Woman's Photograph.

Managers of corporations as well as other people appreciate the power of a woman's beauty over a jury of susceptible men, and those who are shrewd compromise all claims for damages brought by such people rather than contest them in the courts. Not long ago several lawyers were seated around a table on which were various bottles and glasses, and the conversation, by some reason or other, had drifted to the subject of actresses, says the Chicago Chronicle.

"A photograph of Fanny Davenport once saved a case for me," said one of the lawyers. "It was when Wayne MacVeagh was counsel for the Pennsylvania Railroad company. A client of mine, a widow, was suing the company for $7,500 damages for the death of her husband. She had a clear case and I thought it was a cinch, when, just a few days before the case was to have come up, she happened into my office and announced that she had married again. I was flabbergasted. 'Good Lord, madam,' I gasped, 'why couldn't you have waited until your case came up? It's next to impossible for me to get damages for you now.' She said she didn't care very much, and went out, seeming very happy.

"Well, it just happened that I had a photograph of Fanny Davenport on my desk and when the next day Wayne MacVeagh happened into my office to discuss quite another matter he picked up the photo and admired it. 'Who's your friend?' he asked. I had a sudden inspiration and I said: 'Why, that's the lady who is suing your company for $7,500.' 'The deuce you say,' said he. 'Handsome woman, isn't she?' 'She is, indeed,' I replied. 'H—m!' he exclaimed, looking at the picture closely. 'A deuced handsome woman, I should say; a deuced handsome woman.' There was a slight pause. 'What'll you take to settle this case?' he asked. I thought of my client's second marriage and I fixed the figure at $5,000. The deal was consummated and the case never came to court."

WIRE FENCE BUILDING.

Durability Depends Altogether Upon the Way in Which the Anchor Posts Are Set.

The amount of time annually consumed in the repair of wire fences combined with the loss in crops and in injured animals due to their being out of repair we are confident would foot up a pretty big total. A little more time expended, however, in the first construction of the fence, so that it may be constructed [illegible] and according to correct principles will very materially reduce these losses. One of the first and most important requisites of a good fence is to have the anchor posts so set that they will stay right where they are placed. The failure to properly set these is perhaps the most prolific source of poor fences and the consequent losses therefrom. There is much less strain on a fence that is kept tight and in proper shape than on one that is not, because there is less effort on the part of the animals to get through than where they can see a more encouraging prospect of success in that direction. Such a condition of fence can be maintained only when the anchor posts are so set as to resist any reasonable amount of strain that may be placed upon them. The accompanying cut represents a very substantial anchor. The anchor post should be large, and the heavier the better, although actual weight is of minor importance. It should be of sufficient length to extend 4½ feet into the ground, where a long stretch of a four or a 4½-foot fence is to be attached thereto, and have a two-inch block, the larger the better, spiked on the rear side at its foot and one on the front side just below the surface of the ground, as shown in cut. If it is a corner post with two stretches of wire attached at right angles to each other there should be two sets of blocks spiked to the post to correspond. The brace post should also have a two-inch piece spiked to its front side just below the surface of the ground. A good heavy brace that will not spring, should be placed against the brace post and supported by a stone or block to keep it out of the ground and prevent decay. The other end of the brace should be placed against the anchor post about midway between the ground and top of fence. It is quite common to see the brace placed against the top of the anchor post, but placed in this manner it acts as a lever to lift the anchor post out of the ground. A wire is next passed round the brace pannel from foot of anchor to top of brace post and twisted as shown in cut. Twelve feet is a very good length for the brace pannel; a longer one requires a heavier brace to secure a given strength and too short a pannel makes the brace too steep. The wires should be drawn up well, but not too tight, as this will injure the texture of the wire. This is especially true in the case of single strand wire. In cable wire the twist will yield to any overstrain. Staples should not be driven tight, as is often done, but left so the wire can have free movement from end to end. If the wire gets a little slack at any time it can then be tightened by hitching on to either end. If an animal runs into such a fence with great force the wires will yield throughout their whole length like a spring, and as the body is thrown back they return to their former position, and may show but little change from their former condition, while the same impact against a fence with staples driven tightly would be sustained by that immediate section of the fence. The wires, if not broken, would be stretched and injured in texture and left hanging so that immediate repairs would be necessary. Even with a mild impact that will do little injury to the wire it is drawn through the staples which are too tight to allow it to return and it hangs there loose and out of condition until repaired.—Prairie Farmer.

Best Time for Caponizing.

The best time to caponize is when the cockerels are about three months old. It is not feasible to do it after a cockerel becomes mature, as the proportion of deaths, culls and slips is much greater than with the younger birds. Capons grow rapidly and mature early, as they are quiet and peaceable. Their flesh remains soft and juicy like that of a young chicken, and as a rule, they bring considerably more per pound than natural birds. They are most in demand from February to June and are not commonly marketed until from ten to fourteen months of age. Capons make more weight for the feed they eat than any other fowls, as their only ambition is to eat and rest, two things which are favorable to the production of fat and growth.—Orange Judd Farmer.

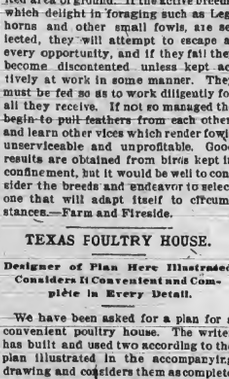
PROFITS AND BREEDS.



Further Discussion of a Subject That Is of Perennial Interest to Poultry Raisers.

The best way to enjoy keeping fowls is to have a small book in which to insert all the receipts and expenses. It is an excellent mode of learning what can be done and how to economize. A large profit can be made with a very small flock—that is, while the receipts may not be large, yet the comparative profits on capital invested will be surprising. A small flock pays because it consumes much waste material that would otherwise give no return, while a home market always exists as long as eggs are used in the household; and it may be added, fresh eggs will be had instead of the candied stock usually sold as such. There is also much pleasure derived from managing a small flock, and all the members of the family [illegible] interested. The enjoyment will be greater if some pure-bred variety is used, the aim being to excel in all the requirements of the breed. Children make pets of the fowls and chicks, and that is a point in favor of the flock which should not be overlooked. Some breeds can endure close confinement without injury, as they have been bred for that purpose. The Brahmas and Cochins may be mentioned as examples. They have small wings and heavy bodies, cannot fly over a low fence, and are contented on a limited area of ground. If the active breeds, which delight in foraging such as Leghorns and other small fowls, are selected, they will attempt to escape at every opportunity, and if they fail they become discontented unless kept actively at work in some manner. They must be fed so as to work diligently for all they receive. If not so managed the begin to pull feathers from each other, and learn other vices which render fowls unserviceable and unprofitable. Good results are obtained from birds kept in confinement, but it would be well to consider the breeds and endeavor to select one that will adapt itself to circumstances.—Farm and Fireside.

TEXAS POULTRY HOUSE.

Designer of Plan Here Illustrated Considers It Convenient and Complete in Every Detail.

We have been asked for a plan for a convenient poultry house. The writer has built and used two according to the plan illustrated in the accompanying drawing and considers them as complete and convenient as can be designed. The building is 9 by 18 feet, eight feet high in front and six feet at back. As will be seen, the hither end is open. This was done to show the interior arrangement. Attached at this open end is an extension of four feet, separated from the part shown by a latticed partition as a storage room for feed opening into the main part of the house. mounted at a height of five inches by a three-inch perch, with legs five inches high and eight inches apart, to prevent crowding. Back of the dropping board is a partition of wire netting, separating the house into two compartments, one for roosting and laying 5 by 14 feet and one for sitting hens 4 by 14. The nest boxes marked N completely fill the space under the dropping board. When a hen is done laying and wants to sit, give her the eggs and push the box back until it opens into the sitting compartment. She is then confined and safe from intrusion by other fowls.

The cut shows one nest box thus pushed back. This house should front south, and the front side should be closed with four-inch strips three inches apart and have a door opening into the house and small door opening thence into the feedroom. The north side and ends are boarded up and the joints covered with four-inch strips.—Farm and Ranch.

Poultry Needed on Farms.

The more poultry on a farm the fewer insects and grubs. If it were not for the fowls worms would take the place. No one has an idea how many one hen will consume in a day. If hens were not shut out of the garden so rigidly at certain times of the year, there would be more currants and gooseberries. Ducks can soon rid a cabbage patch of worms. In tobacco fields in the south as high as 300 turkeys have been seen in one field cleaning out the tobacco worms. The Leghorns and other light-footed breeds keep trees clean of grubs as far as they can reach or jump. The poultry are well worth their keep in this capacity alone.—Midland Farmer.

Clipping the Queen's Wings.

Some beekeepers practice clipping one wing of their queens. This is done by holding the queen by the thorax between the thumb and finger and cutting a part of one of her wings. Be careful to avoid cutting the frame work of the wing. The reason for clipping queens is to prevent them from going with the bees at swarming time. When a swarm issues, the queen will be found hopping about in front of the hive. She can then be picked up and caged. A new hive is placed on the old stand and the queen is allowed to run in with the returning bees.—F. G. Herman in Orange Judd Farmer.

IS RUINING SOCIETY.

Whitelaw Reid Declares Divorce Is Working Dreadful Havoc.

Tells the Girls of Vassar College That the Educated Woman Can Do Much to Check the Present Tendency Towards Evil.

The alarming social conditions brought about by the numerous divorces in society, and the great good which can be done by the influence of the college women were discussed by Whitelaw Reid in the annual address before the Phi Beta Kappa society of Vassar college. In the course of his address, Mr. Reid said:

"Outside the immediate and inestimable effect on the family, the conservative power of educated women naturally will show its influence on social life.

"They surely will help to check its degradation. They certainly will correct the prevalent vicious conception of its real scope. From this degrading conception comes the constant craze for newspaper publicity and every other form of publicity.

"If the conduct of the so-called inner circles of society has sometimes seemed to justify this brazen uproar at their gates, so much greater the demand for the conservative influence and the real refinement that come from the higher training of the superior woman.

"When higher ideals do return, the powerful influence of educated women surely will array, as never before, the best of their sex in compact, relentless phalanx against a social evil, alarming, degrading, or demoralizing, which steadily has become almost too common to provoke surprise—the transformation of marriage from a sacrament of God into a thoughtless and heedless business or social arrangement to be dissolved almost at pleasure. Six hundred and fifty-four thousand persons divorced in this country in the last 20 years! Such is the deplorable record on which Roman Catholic and Protestant clergy are already appealing for a union of all moral agencies to resist this downward rush of the multitude.

"Perhaps the influence may throw down the powerfully intrenched citadels—those of evils that come from the ill-judged excesses of the best of people. It may possibly infuse moderation into our new and admirable devotion to athletics, and rescue us from those vagaries of sport run mad that have made the football teacher more important in our universities than the professor of chemistry or of philosophy; and the record of the cinder track the essential thing, rather than the baccalaureate degree.

"Harder task yet, it may restore sanity to our charity run mad, may teach us the infinite harm that lurks in our lazy way of ridding ourselves from each casual beggar with a careless quarter, instead of a careful inquiry, and may even after a time stop the premium we put upon crime and crankiness when we build palaces for our lunatics and our criminals, and sustain them in these establishments in comfort, and even luxury, far beyond the average of what the taxpayers who must meet the bills can afford for themselves.

"Under your guidance the moderate conclusion may in fact be reached that even for sweet charity's sake the upright, industrious New York farmer, machinist or shopkeeper is not bound to house and feed the crank and the criminal better than he can the children of his loins and the wife of his bosom."

MADE MERRY TOO SOON.

Woful Tale of the Man Whose Wife Was Going Away But Missed Her Train.

"What's the matter, old fellow?" he said, as they met the morning after, telltale Lorem Ipsum.

"I feel blue."

"But you're right you were the jolliest member of the party.

"I felt jolly."

"You acted like a boy just let out of school."

"I felt like one."

"You said your wife had gone away for the first time in three years, and there wasn't anyone to say a word if you went home and kicked over the mantle clock."

"I remember it."

"You said that if you stayed out until four o'clock there was no one to look at you reproachfully and sigh and make you feel small."

"Yes, and I stayed out until four o'clock, didn't I?"

"You certainly did."

"And I gave a war-whoop on the doorstep?"

"Yes; and then you sang a verse from a comic opera song and tried to dance a jig."

"Yes; and my wife had missed the train. Now go away and leave me. I want to look myself a little more after not taking the precaution to get an affidavit from the guard that she went with the train."

And he gave himself several bangs on the ears and then, took himself till his hair began to fall out.

Found a Friend.

Valley City, N. Dak., July 27th.—Mrs. Matilda M. Boucher of this place tells how she found a friend in the following words:

"For years I suffered with a dizziness in my head and could get nothing to cure me till about two years ago when I was advised to take Doan's Kidney Pills. These pills cured me before I had used the whole of the first box, and I haven't been troubled since.

"In January of this year I had an attack of Sciatica that made me almost helpless, and remembering how much Doan's Kidney Pills had done for me before, I sent and got some and began to take them at once.

"In three weeks I was well, and not a trace of the Sciatica left, and I have been well ever since.

"Doan's Kidney Pills have certainly been of great benefit to me. I have found them a friend in time of sickness, and I will always recommend them to every one suffering with the troubles that bothered me."

Modern Conveniences.

The Alpena Democrat tells of a man who stepped over night off a small town near there and registered at the hotel pointed out to him by the conductor as the first in town. In the morning he wanted to take a bath and mentioned the proprietor about it. The proprietor shouted back to the rear: "Here, Tom, this here gent wants to take a bath. Bring the fixin's." Tom soon appeared, carrying a cake of yellow soap, a towel and a rock. "What's the pick for?" asked the guest. "Why," said the proprietor, "you'll have to dam up the creek."—Kansas City Star.

The Usual Thing.

"I would like to know," asked the parent, who had a notion in need of some further education, "what is the course in your college?"

"The usual half-mile course of cinders and all that sort of thing, you know," absentmindedly replied the president of the great institution.—Philadelphia Press.

CURE FOR INDIGESTION.

Mrs. F. Wright, of Oelwein, Iowa, is another one of the million women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Overshadowing indeed is the success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound — compared with it, all other medicines for women are experiments.

Why has it the greatest record for absolute cures of any female medicine in the world? Why has it lived and thrived and done its glorious work among women for a quarter of a century? Simply because of its sterling worth. The reason that no other medicine has ever reached its success is because there is no other medicine so successful in curing woman's ills. Remember these important facts when a druggist tries to sell you something which he says is just as good.

A Young New York Lady Tells of a Wonderful Cure:—

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—My trouble was with the ovaries; I am tall, and the doctor said I grew too fast for my strength. I suffered dreadfully from inflammation and doctored continually, but got no help. I suffered from terrible dragging sensations with the most awful pains low down in the side and pains in the back, and the most agonizing headaches. No one knows what I endured. Often I was sick to the stomach, and every little while I would be too sick to go to work for three or four days; I work in a large store, and I suppose standing on my feet all day made me worse.

"At the suggestion of a friend of my mother's I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it is simply wonderful. I felt better after the first two or three doses; it seemed as though a weight was taken off my shoulders; I continued its use until now I can truthfully say I am entirely cured. Young girls who are always paying doctor's bills without getting any help as I did, ought to take your medicine. It costs so much less, and it is sure to cure them.—Yours truly, Adelaide Prahl, 174 St. Ann's Ave., New York City."

Women should not fail to profit by Miss Adelaide Prahl's experiences; just as surely as she was cured of the troubles enumeratcd in her letter, just so certainly will Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cure others who suffer from womb troubles, inflammation of the ovarics, kidney troubles, nervous excitability, and nervous prostration; remember that it is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that is curing women, and don't allow any druggist to sell you anything else in its place.

If there is anything in your case about which you would like special advice, write freely to Mrs. Pinkham. She can surely help you, for no person in America has such a wide experience in treating female ills as she has had. Address is Lynn, Mass.; her advice is free and alway helpful.

$5000 FORFEIT if we cannot forthwith produce the original letter and signature of above testimonial, which will prove its absolute genuineness.

W. L. RIDDELL, - - Publisher.

THE trial of Jett and White for the assassination of Attorney Marcum, at Jackson, Breathitt county, will be held at Cynthiana, this week.

Political economists are going to Oyster Bay to discuss finance with the President. The detail has heretofore been left to the Campaign Committee.

THE Covington and Kenton county Democratic politicians are keeping things hot among themselves. The two factions there cannot agree upon anything it seems.

There are 30,000 negro voters in New York, 21,000 in New Jersey, 3,000 in Rhode Island, 8,000 in Delaware, 60,000 in Maryland, 15,000 in West Virginia, 18,000 in Indiana and 14,000 in Kansas.

LEXINGTON had a double hanging at 8.10 o'clock, last Friday morning. O'Brian and Whitney, the two youthful murderers who killed merchant Chinn while trying to rob his house several months since, were the victims of the gallows.

JUDGE REDWINE'S charge to the Breathitt county grand jury brought results in short order, and indictments for attempt to bribe and for arson were returned without delay. It looks very much like Judge Redwine intends to do his part towards suppressing lawlessness in Breathitt county.

"Gentlemen has it come to this? Even under that law that you and I have denounced as the Goeble law, the officers of election have the right to ask every man that comes to register what his politics are and even under that law, when they come to select officers of election, they have the right to ascertain the politics of the men and divide the officers of election equally and yet while we denounce the Goeble law that gives us an equal division of these officers, you are asked to sustain the ruling of this committee which denies to us anything in the neighborhood of an equal number of officers."—From ex-governor Bradley's speech before the Louisville convention.

And the ruling of the committee was sustained with a whoop.

More than thirty million dollars' worth of diamonds and other precious stones were brought into the United States in the fiscal year just ended. The Department of Commerce and Labor through its bureau of Statistics statements show that the total importations of diamonds and other precious stones, in the eleven months ending with May, amounted to over twenty-eight million dollars in value and as the figures for the month of May alone were about three million dollars, it is evident that the June figures will bring the grand total of diamonds and other precious stones up to a full thirty million dollars for the fiscal year ending with June 30th, 1903. This is the largest importation of diamonds and other precious stones ever shown in a single year of our commerce.

ALTHOUGH the precise statistics for the last fiscal year have not yet been tabulated the data at hand go to show that the pay roll of pensioners on account of the war with Spain now approximates $2,700,000. Compared with the grand total of $137,000,000 that roughly represents the annual disbursements of pensions on account of all wars, this seems an insignificant sum. But when it is remembered that the Civil War alone engaged the military services of more than 2,213,000 who survived the close of hostilities, whereas the war with Spain engaged fewer than 275,000 and the losses by death fell short of 3,000, the proportion of pensioners for the less bloody contest at arms assumes a larger importance. The war with Spain is not yet five years past. At a corresponding distance from the close of the Civil War the disbursements for pensions were a little more than $29,351,000, and this included the pensioners of the Revolution and all the other wars through which the country had passed.—Harper's Weekly.

An instance was related the other day of the value of stock raising and incidental clover [illegible] herds of cattle were driven to the Washington market from northern Virginia farms. These farms were then models of fertility. The rotation was wheat, corn and clover, and little if any commercial fertilizer was used. The beef produced was of the finest. When Chicago beef began to be shipped everywhere these farmers did not find it so profitable to raise steers and drive them to Washington. They dropped off their live stock growing and in a few years had to begin the use of commercial fertilizer. These farm lands have since steadily decreased in productive capacity until now most of them are worn out and will not produce 12 bushels of wheat to the acre.

At all times parents should set their children the example of erect posture, for an erect bodily posture is of vastly more importance to health than most people generally imagine. Crooked bodily positions maintained for any length of time are always injurious, whether in the sitting, standing, or lying. To sit with the body leaning forward on the stomach, or to one side, or with the heels elevated on a level with the head, is not only in bad taste, but exceedingly detrimental to health. These postures cramp the stomach; press the vital organs, interrupt the free motions of the chest, and enfeeble the functions of the abdominal and thoracic organs; and, in fact, unbalance the whole muscular system. Many children become slightly humpbacked or severely high-shouldered by sleeping with the head on a high pillow. When any person finds it easier to sit, or stand, or walk, or sleep in a crooked position then a straight one, such person may be sure his muscular system is badly deranged, and the more careful he is to preserve a straight or upright position and get back to nature again the better.—Exchange.

A year ago pessimists were predicting the disappearance of clover as a profitable crop. A previous dry summer followed by a hard winter had practically killed old seedings and also those of 1901. Farmers, after spending a mint of money in clover seed that failed to result in a stand, had come to regard the great legume as permanently enrolled on the "has been" list. But this spring another tale is being told. King Clover is himself again. All over the land he is doing well. Hundreds of thousands of acres of clover hay will be cut this year where last season there was none. The area in clover in 1902 was unusually large. Much of the crop was ruined by a wet harvest season, but the catch of clover was all that could be desired. This summer there will be a large decrease in oat acreage, but a vast increase in clover. Thus even the disadvantages of a water-logged season have their offset. This year's crop of clover will have a feeding value not easily estimated, and its effect in restoring fertility will have a perceptible influence. It is a significant fact that alfalfa sown last year in the corn belt invariably made a good catch; more proof positive that conditions under which clover will do well are admirably suited to its relative, alfalfa.—Live Stock World.

The last quarterly report of the United States Corporation shows net earning for March of about $9,500,000. The annual report shows the cash on hand to be about $50,000,000 to say nothing of the proceeds of $250,000,000 worth of second-mortgage bonds which are now authorized and will soon be issued. To appreciate the magnitude of such resources, we must compare them with those of the federal government itself. It has been asserted and not contradicted, that the cash in the federal treasury now available for immediate payments does not much exceed $70 000,000. Then, again, the gross earnings of the United States Steel Corporation for 1902 have been computed at some $500,000,000. Now the average trade balance in favor of the United States during recent years has not much exceeded the aggregate just named. There is thus far no other combination of capital in the United States which can figure in the same tank, although the Northern Securities Company and the Pennsylvania Railroad are not far behind. It is a fact less generally recognized that the total assets of three life insurance companies, namely, the Mutual, the Equitable, and the New York Life, represent about a billion dollars. Nothing approaching such aggregation of private capital [illegible]

It seems that six is to be the limit of outside pupils admitted to the public school here this fall and winter. If it is the desire to build up a school here, and Mr. Hughes proves to be the proper person for principal, it would appear that more than six pupils should be taken in from outside of the district even as a starter.

The statement in the RECORDER a few weeks since that silver dollars coined in 1894 are good for free trips to the World's Fair next year turns out to be a hoax of the rankest sort. The article was noticed going the rounds of the press and was published by the Recorder in absolute good faith. The Board of Managers of the Fair have issued a statement declaring the report to be false, and they say they are at a loss to understand how the report started. Some one has evidently taken advantage of his position to send broadcast over the country an article that has produced a sensation everywhere it has been published. The item set everybody to watching for the 1894 silver dollar, and a great many of them had been found by readers of this paper, which regrets that it was imposed upon, like many of its exchanges in giving out such information. The article was published in the RECORDER in good faith.

The East Enterprise Fair.

Under the entire new management, with a determination to make the popular old Switzerland and Ohio counties' fair the best of the year, the officers ask the public patronage. It will be held August 18th, 19th, 20th and 21st at East Enterprise, Ind. The purses in the trotting, pacing and running races have been greatly increased, and several attractions have been added, one particularly being a balloon ascension every day, a triple parachute leap from the balloon in mid air by Prof. Mack, Madamoiselle Mack and their trick dog. Also slack wire and high trapaze performance and the dog will make a dive from an elevation of seventy-five feet into a tank or pool of water. These are very attractive features, and ordinarily such a show would cost fifty cents admission yet the fair management has not increased the old rate of 25 cents admission, which includes all. Two balloon ascensions on Thursday, Aug. 20th, morning and afternoon. The East Enterprise fair is an old time country fair and there is no fair where a day can be more pleasantly spent. Thomas Carver, Florence, Ind., is the president, and Scott Thompson, of Rising Sun, Indiana, is the secretary.

The Hebron and Ludlow teams will play on the grounds at Hebron next Saturday afternoon.

The Boones and the Erlanger team will play on the grounds at Burlington next Saturday afternoon. It will be a good game.

If the Erlanger boys use the same batting eyes here next Saturday in the game with the Boones that they used in the game with Petersburg, the Boones will have to do better stick work than they have recorded so far this season to beat them out.

The Boones journeyed to Coal City, Ohio, last Saturday where they left another ball. Score—8 to 5 in favor of Coal City. The boys say they had a nice game and were never treated better anywhere. The Coal City team will play here on the afternoon of August 8th.

The Burlington base ball club went to Bellevue, last Saturday afternoon, where with its usual generosity, it presented the McVille team with a new ball. The Burlington teams ought to buy balls by the gross, as they could then secure dealers' rates. Score—9 to 4 in favor of McVille. The Burlington club will play Ashby Fork next Saturday on their grounds.

The game between the Erlanger and Petersburg teams was very much one-sided until the 5th inning, when the Erlanger boys struck a batting ralley that came very near proving disastrous to Petersburg. With three men on bases, Alonzo Victor, who had been piling up errors at third, lined out a home run. Singles, doubles and tripples followed in the succeeding innings until at the close of the game Erlanger had scored 9 runs in a game the first innings of which looked like an easy shutout. Score—11 to 9 in favor of Petersburg.

Broke His Neck.

Edward Underhill, son of Benjamin Underhill, went to Bloomington, Illinois, last spring, where he was engaged to work as a carpenter, and last Friday he fell off of a large elevator on which he was at work and broke his neck. The remains arrived at Erlanger, last Sunday morning, and were taken to Big Bone church cemetery, where they were interred. Edward Underhill was a quiet, unassuming young man, liked by all with whom he was acquainted. He was a grandson of the late Rev. John Underhill, who lived a few miles south of Burlington.

A. C. Kelly Dead.

Just as we go to press this morning Al Rogers, of Bellevue, telephones us of the very sudden death of Albert C. Kelly, of Locust Grove neighborhood, last night. Mr. Kelley was in Bellevue yesterday, and was, apparently, in his usual good health. He was in the fifties and had never been married, and was a son of the late Jesse Kelly. Having known Mr. Kelly from his childhood, we can testify to his being an honest man and a gentleman in every walk of life, and the county has lost another most excellent citizen. He was a member of the Odd-Fellows' lodge at Bellevue.

GEN. C. M. CLAY DEAD.

Was Ambassador to Russia During Lincoln's Administration.

He Was a Member of the Harrison Whig Convention in 1840, Which Nominated Gen. Wm. H. Harrison For the Presidency.

Lexington, Ky., July 23.—Gen. Cassius Marcellus Clay, ambassador to Russia under Lincoln, noted abolitionist and author, died at his home at Whitehall, Madison county, Wednesday night at 9:10 o'clock. Gen. Clay was born October 19, 1810, in Madison county. He was the son of Gen. Green Clay. He graduated at Transylvania university and later studied law at Yale. He served in the Kentucky legislature in 1824, being re-elected, representing Madison county. He then moved to this county and served another term as Fayette's representative. Radical views on slavery led to his defeat on offering for re-election.

He was a member of the Harrison whig convention in 1840 which nominated Gen. William H. Harrison for president. He denounced the proposed annexation of Texas as a scheme to protect and extend slavery. June 8, 1845, he issued the first number of his abolition paper, "The True American," which was published here. His advocacy of abolition was so bitter that citizens threatened to mob him. He made an arsenal of his office, providing iron doors and procured two brass cannon, which were loaded with shot and nails. Mexican lances and guns with a quantity of ammunition were also provided and a keg of powder was kept ready so that if finally overpowered he could destroy the building.

He was taken ill and a mob seized the plant and shipped it to Cincinnati. There he resumed publication of the paper. He was an ardent supporter of Henry Clay, his kinsman, for the presidency, and campaigned in northern states in his behalf.

When war with Mexico was declared in 1846 he enlisted as captain in a volunteer company that had won distinction at Tippecanoe in 1811. While in the van he was taken prisoner at Encarnacion along with 71 others. He was in captivity several months and on one occasion by his bravery saved the lives of his companions. When he returned a sword was presented to him by the citizens of Fayette.

In 1848 he carried Kentucky for Taylor. In 1849 he left the whig party and called a convention of emancipationists at Frankfort. In 1850 he became anti-slavery candidate for governor. He fought several noted duels during the canvass. He always carried a large bowie knife and revolvers in saddle bags. He supported Fremont in 1856 and Lincoln in 1860.

In 1861 he was appointed minister to Russia. When he returned in 1862 he was made major general, succeeding Gen. Lew Wallace. He was reappointed minister to Russia in '63 and served under Lincoln, Johnson and Grant.

He was president of the Cuban Aid society in 1870, supporting the Cuban revolutionary movement. In a speech at the St. Louis fair in 1871 he attacked Grant's administration. He supported his old friend, Horace Greely, but later joined forces with the democratic party. He supported Tilden, but was for Blaine in 1884. In 1848 a volume of his speeches was edited by Horace Greely.

Memoirs, Writings and Speeches of Cassius Marcellus Clay in two volumes was published by the author in 1886.

A life full of turbulence began to tell on Gen. Clay in late life. He believed that a conspiracy to assassinate him had been formed and some years ago fortified his home at Whitehall, and entered a life of seclusion that ended only a few weeks ago when the court appointed a committee to take charge of him and his effects.

He was found desperately ill and has had every care since then.

Children long estranged by reason of his eccentricities were again able to be with him and were at the bedside when death ensued, which was due to general exhaustion. Surviving children are: Brutus J. Clay, prominent in national politics, of Richmond; Miss Laura Clay, noted as an exponent of woman suffrage, Lexington; Mrs. Dabney Grenshaw, Richmond, Va.; Mrs. Mary Barr Clay and Mrs. James Bennett, of Richmond, Ky.

ATHLETIC SPORTS.

The Naval Service is to Be Made as Attractive as Possible.

Washington, July 25.—With a view of making the naval service as attractive as possible to enlisted men and lessening visits to dives and desertions, the navigation bureau is now working on a scheme for the establishment of recruiting halls and grounds in navy yards and stations. One of the most complete projects so far unfolded within reasonable price came from the Norfolk navy yard. This plan makes provision for a football grounds, baseball diamond, grand stand, cinder track, swimming pools, recruiting hall costing $35,000, with gymnasium and library, dance hall and smoking room. It is probable that where sufficient ground can be secured these Norfolk plans will be adopted as a type for other yards. An appropriation for the purpose will be requested at the next session of congress.

DAYLIGHT ROBBERIES.

One of the Most Daring in the History of the City of Lincoln.

Lincoln, Neb., July 25.—One of the most daring robberies in the history of the city occurred Friday when a man robbed two Lincoln business houses of $45, using a revolver to terrorize the victims. He first entered the rooms over the restaurant of O. E. Houck, where the latter was taking a bath. He commanded Houck to make no outcry and rifled his pockets of $7.50. The thief then went to Rehlander's drug store and broke in the rear door while the clerks were watching a circus parade, opened the safe and got $38. A clerk was standing behind the soda water fountain at the time but the robbery was not discovered until ten minutes later, when the robber had disappeared.

TO THE CATHOLIC CHURCH.

All the Municipal Rights in Church Buildings Ceded.

San Juan, P. R., July 25.—All the municipal rights in the church buildings at Guayama, Arroya and Salinas have been ceded by the municipal authorities of those towns to the Catholic church. The question of the ownership of the Catholic church buildings has been disputed ever since the United States took over the island, Spain, under the old regime, claiming title to the edifices, which, however, were maintained out of the municipal funds. The action taken by the municipal authorities of these three towns follows the lines recommended by Gov. Hunt, and it is believed that the same policy will prevail throughout the island, thus settling this disturbing question.

DISPUTE OVER AN ACCOUNT.

Two Men Were Killed and Another One is Dying.

Knoxville, Tenn., July 25.—Jerry Jarnagin, a collector for the East Tennessee brewery of this city, was shot and killed at Lafollette, Tenn., Friday afternoon by John L. Smith, who was shot by Jarnagin and is now dying. Taylor Smith, a son of John L. Smith, was shot and killed by Deputy Sheriff Peterson, who was trying to arrest him. The trouble was caused by a misunderstanding in regard to a settlement between the East Tennessee Brewing Co. and Smith, who was the agent of the company at Lafollette. Jarnagin was sent out to effect a settlement.

FORMER MAYOR AMES.

He Has Made Application For Pension From the Government.

Minneapolis, Minn., July 25.—Dr. A. A. Ames, former mayor of this city, now under indictment for bribery, has made application for pension on account of disabilities received during the civil war. Application was based on a maisdy dating back to the time when the doctor was surgeon major of the Seventh Minnesota infantry. In the 38 years that have intervened Dr. Ames has made no attempt to secure aid from the government. He says he is in financial straits and needs the money.

The Canal Treaty.

Panama, July 25.—A strong reaction in favor of the ratification of the canal treaty seems to be occurring throughout Colombia. From all the principal cities and from Cauca, the largest department of the republic, prominent citizens have telegraphed congress requesting that the treaty be ratified. Communication with Bogota is only possible by mail. The land telegraph lines are in bad condition and the cable is broken.

THE MEN INDICTED.

Tharp and Crawford Held For Arson at Jackson, Ky.

Plummer Indicted For Alleged Bribery —The Case of the Assassination of Town Marshal Jas. Cockrill Taken Under Consideration.

Jackson, Ky., July 22.—The grand jury Tuesday night returned indictments against Edward Tharp and Joseph Crawford, teamsters for the Hargis brothers. They were already held on the charge of setting fire to Ewen's hotel last month.

An indictment was also returned against Gardner Plummer for attempting to bribe a witness. It is charged that he offered B. J. Ewen $5,000 to leave town so that he could not testify in the trial of Curtis Jett and Thomas Walte.

Jackson, Ky., July 23.—The grand jury devoted the entire day to investigating the shooting affray on Cane creek Tuesday between Mack Howard and the two Barrett Negroes. Indictments were returned Thursday against all three.

Gardner Plummer appeared in court and gave bond for $1,000. His trial was set for the second day of the November term of Breathitt county circuit court. Joe Crawford and Ed Tharp, indicted for the alleged burning of the home of Capt. Ewen, were released on bond of $2,000 each. John Howard was on the bond of Crawford and S. H. Frazer for Tharp. Commonwealth Attorney Byrd Wednesday morning filed a petition asking for a change of venue in the case. The petition sets forth the existence of such a state of lawlessness in this county, as in the opinion of the commonwealth attorney, would preclude the commonwealth getting a fair trial of these alleged offenders. Judge Redwine read the petition carefully and promptly granted the change, transferring the case to the Estill circuit court.

Police Judge Cardwell issued warrants for the arrest of Will Britton, a deputy sheriff, and Asbury Spicer, a kinsman of Ed Callahan, charging them with the murder of Town Marshal Jim Cockrill over a year ago. The men were arrested by details of soldiers sent to their houses.

Charles Green, of Lexington, an exile because of knowledge that he had of the killing of Cockrill, who was brought here under escort of soldiers as a witness, testified before the grand jury Thursday afternoon that he saw Jett and two others shoot Cockrill from the second story window of the courthouse. He was standing on the street talking to Cockrill. He claimed that he did not know the names of Jett's companions, but could identify them.

Jackson, Ky., July 25.—It was stated Friday night that threats have been made against Charles Green and that he was intimidated so that he failed to identify the alleged assassins of James Cockrill before the grand jury Friday. It is now charged that the pending investigation of the grand jury has been interrupted by intimidating some witnesses and preventing the appearance of others.

By a vote of eight to four the grand jury refused to indict Deputy Sheriff William Britton on the charge of murdering Jim Cockrill. It was divided throughout the afternoon session and finally recessed until Saturday when adjournment will be taken. The jury also failed to indict Asbury Spicer. Witness Green testified that he recognized two men whose names he did not know with Curtis Jett when the three shot Cockrill from the courthouse window. On the strength of this Britton and Spicer were arrested but Green's failure to identify them as the murderers so weakened the evidence against the men that the grand jury refused to indict. Green was brought and kept here under duress and has been in a state of terror since he came. Some believe that he fears to tell all he knows.

As Riley Coldiron came from the grand jury room he was arrested by Sheriff Callahan for perjury. Coldiron testified that Britton and Spicer were with Curtis Jett when Town Marshal James Cockrill was killed last summer.

Ex-Senator Alex Hargis testified before the grand jury for the indictment of Coldiron for perjury and County Attorney Blanton opposed the indictment, insisting that the prosecution should have been pushed further in the Cockrill case instead of persecuting the witnesses. The grand jury refused to indict Coldiron and ordered his release as well as that of Spicer and Britton because of insufficient evidence.

FOR TWENTY-YEARS MAJOR MARS SUFFERED FROM CATARRH OF THE KIDNEYS.

DANGEROUS KIDNEY DISEASES CURED

Peruna Creating a National Sensation in the Cure of Chronic Ailments of the Kidneys.

Major T. H. Mars, of the First Wisconsin Cavalry regiment, writes from 1425 Dunning street, Chicago, Ill., the following letter:

"For years I suffered with catarrh of the kidneys contracted in the army. Medicine did not help me any until a comrade who had been helped by Peruna advised me to try it. I bought some at once, and soon found blessed relief. I kept taking it four months, and am now well and strong and feel better than I have done for the past twenty years, thanks to Peruna."
—T. H. Mars.

At the appearance of the first symptom of Kidney trouble, Peruna should be taken. This remedy strikes at once the very root of the disease. It at once relieves the catarrhal kidneys of the stagnant blood, preventing the escape of serum from the blood. Peruna stimulates the kidneys to excrete from the blood the accumulating poison, and thus prevents the convulsions which are sure to follow if the poisons are allowed to remain. It gives great vigor to the heart's action and digestive system, both of which are apt to fail rapidly in this disease.

Peruna cures catarrh of the kidneys simply because it cures catarrh wherever located.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Washington Book Binders Object to Foreman Miller.

Was Expelled From Union and Dismissed By the Public Printer—President Roosevelt Directed That He Be Re-Employed.

Washington, July 25.—A committee of the Bookbinders' union Friday filed with the civil service commission a copy of their protest against Miller, former superintendent of the government book bindery. This protest is a duplicate of the one filed with Secretary Cortelyou and Public Printer Palmer. Prior to the filing of the protest Commissioner Proctor said to a reporter that it was a useless action on the part of the men to see the civil service commission and protest to it. The men, he said, already proceeded about the matter in the correct way by filing with the public printer their protest, and the matter was now out of the hands of the civil service commission. The commission could not interfere in the case any more than if it concerned a private employer and his factory, but the members of the committee were listened to respectfully when they came.

The local branch of the International Bookbinders' union held a largely attended meeting at Odd Fellows' hall Friday night to consider what action should be taken in the event that W. A. Miller, the assistant foreman of the bindery at the government printing office, returns to duty, as he has expressed the intention of doing, Saturday morning. The meeting discussed the matter for three hours and then adjourned subject to the call of the arbitration committee of the union. There were many speeches and apparently a number of votes but just what they were about no one who attended the meeting was willing to say. It has been said that members of the union would walk out of the printing office if Miller, who has been expelled from membership from the union and dismissed by the public printer, should return to work Saturday, but President Barrett Friday night was noncommunicative on the subject. He would not give the least intimation of what was done at the meeting.

It is said that the union decided to take no definite action one way or the other for at least three days. It is also said that this is partly due to the prospective visit of the executive committee of the International union, whose advice and assistance have been sought in the matter. President Tatem and the other two members of the committee are said to be now on their way from Chicago.

After Mr. Miller had been expelled from the union and dismissed from the government printing office, he made an appeal to the administration claiming that he had violated no rules of the civil service and asked to be reinstated. When the matter was laid before President Roosevelt and after due consideration, the president ordered the reinstatement of the discharged assistant foreman.

PRINCE FERDINAND.

It Is Believed He Has Fled From Bulgaria Until Excitement Subsides.

Berlin, July 25.—Notwithstanding the semi-official denial that Prince Ferdinand's departure from Bulgaria amounts to flight, the Vossiche Zeitung says it believes that the rumors of the prince's flight have some basis and regards it as probable that he has left the country until the existing excitement subsides. It prints Friday a special dispatch from Sofia saying it is openly asserted there that an attempt against Prince Ferdinand's throne is not improbable, Servia's example having had a profound influence on the prince's enemies.

ANOTHER RACE RIOT.

Two Killed and Twenty-Two Wounded at Danville, Ill.

One Negro Was Lynched and His Body Burned—A Bitter Feeling Between the Two Races Has Existed For a Long Time.

Danville, Ill., July 27.—James Wilson, colored, was arrested charged with brutally assaulting Mrs. Thomas Burgess, wife of a farmer, at Alvon, just north of here, Saturday. He confessed when placed in jail. A mob of 600 men started for the county jail clamoring for his life.

On the way a Negro named John D. Metcalfe, said to be a fugitive from Evansville, Ind., became involved in an altercation with some of the mob. They started for him and he pulled a gun and fired. Henry Gatterman, a young butcher, fell mortally wounded, expiring a few seconds later. The Negro was arrested by the officers, but the mob soon took him away from the officers and hanged him to a telegraph pole. His body was later cut down and taken to the square in front of the jail and burned.

The mob then made an attack on the jail in a vain effort to get Mrs. Burgess' assailant. A battering ram was improvised and an assault made on the jail and the sheriff and the guards resisted and finally fired into the crowd. Twenty-two persons were wounded and the riot commenced.

The police station was wrecked and the county jail had almost all its windows shattered.

The city is now in the hands of the state troops and a feeling of uncasiness and dread prevails everywhere.

After daylight appeared Sunday morning there were restless crowds on the streets. Hundreds of farmers poured into the city and each surrounding town contributed to swell the crowd. There were many miners seen on the streets.

Great unrest and a threatening attitude was reported from Westville, five miles away. Early in the morning Wilson, the Negro assailant of Mrs. Burgess, was secretly taken from the county jail but was returned shortly after 5 o'clock Sunday morning to the jail.

Four companies of militia arrived at 8:30 Sunday morning from Springfield. Companies A, I, B and H, of the Seventh Illinois infantry, were sent in reply to urgent requests sent at midnight to state officials The troops marched to the market house opposite the jail and camped. Streets were cleared and the threatening attitude of the crowds disappeared. There were sullen threats heard, but no attempt at an outbreak was manifest during the day. Sunday night 100 sentinels were patroling the streets in the immediate vicinity of the jail. Each soldier carries 40 rounds of ammunition.

Sheriff Whitlock said Sunday in giving his version of the shooting into the mob: "After I saw from the jail that the mob was determined to attack, I went to the veranda and attempted to talk to the maddened men. As I stepped into view of the crowd two bullets were fired, one striking the wall back of me. I fired two shots into the air. Some one shouted that I was only bluffing and was shooting blank cartridges. I warned the mob I would resist an attack on the jail with powder and lead. There was another shot from the mob and it surged forward. I then fired a shot from my shotgun into their legs. This drove them back but they returned a moment later to the attack of the front door. I was alarmed for the safety of my wife and children. My wife took a gun and said she would stand by me. I got her and the children out of the way and then, seeing the leaders coming with the rail to batter down the walls, I shot down the rail to make them drop it. This accounts for so many being shot in the hands and arms. I fired eight or ten shots in all."

Sheriff Whitlock had four deputies and three constables with him in the jail guarding the prisoners. He says none fired into the mob but himself.

Leading citizens say the outbreak has been expected by them for a long time, as bitter feeling has existed for several years between the Negroes and a certain class of white persons. A number of miners' outbreaks have occurred during the past year.

The feeling against the soldiers is noticeable. The commissary department Sunday had much trouble getting restaurants to serve meals. Many refused to feed the soldiers. There was one clash between the guard and a miner named Ed Liggett, who began abusing the guard. The soldier leveled his bayonet and Liggett was arrested and fined $100.

RAILWAY WRECKS.

Four People Killed in Minnesota and Three in Illinois.

St. Paul, Minn., July 27.—Two trains met in a head-on collision on the Chicago Great Western railroad early Sunday and the result was four men dead and about 25 or 30 passengers injured.

The two trains were the Twin City limited and a fast freight. The limited was running as a first section from Oelwein, Ia., to Minneapolis. The second section consisted of an excursion train running from Des Moines to Minneapolis and was three hours behind time.

The fast freight, south bound, received an order at Dodge Center reading that the second section of the passenger train was three hours late and the crew evidently misread the order and attempted to make Vlasaty siding between Dodge Center and Hastings, Minn., thinking that it was the limited that was late.

That the two trains came together with terrific force was evidenced by the fact that both engines were badly damaged, but they remained standing upright on the tracks. The baggage and buffet cars were completely wrecked. The baggage car struck a small building and one end went through the side of the structure.

East St. Louis, Ill., July 27.—An accommodation train on the Vandalia road en route to St. Louis ran into a well filled electric car on the East St. Louis and Suburban street railway near Lansdowne, three miles north of here, Sunday, killing three persons and injuring a score.

The crash of the collision was terrific and was heard a long distance The accommodation train was drawn by an engine which was backing, and was running at a good rate of speed when suddenly the tender of the engine crashed into the trolley car at the street crossing. The car was hurled from its track a mass of wreckage. The impact caused the coaches to break loose from the engine and they did not leave the track, but the engine left the rails, ran about 200 feet over the ties, and turned over on its side. Engineer Roy and Fireman Higgins stuck to the engine and were buried in its wreckage. After being removed Engineer Roy died at the hospital. Fireman Higgins is so badly injured that he can not live. The two were pinioned under a jet of scalding steam and their screams were agonizing. Nothing could be done until Jackscrews were secured and the engine raised. Roy and Higgins begged to be killed outright that they might not suffer the torture they were undergoing. When they were finally taken out both were literally parboiled. Beattie and Lenharth, the two other men who were killed, were standing on the platform of the street car when the crash came. They were hurled almost 30 feet and were picked up dead.

HURLED TO THEIR DEATHS.

Father, Mother and Infant Killed by a Train on the Crossing.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., July 27.—Joshua Butler, wife and infant child, were struck by the eastbound Black Diamond express on the Lehigh Valley railroad late Sunday afternoon, while driving across the track at Port Bowkley, six miles from here, and all three are dead. The horse was also killed and the carriage demolished. The occupants were hurled fully 150 feet, the woman's death being instantaneous; the babe was tossed over the locomotive and was found lying in the tender on top of the coal. It was still alive but died a few moments later.

Mr. Butler was found in a field near the track. He was not killed outright, but died within an hour after the accident. Mr. Butler was a truck farmer, 32 years of age. His wife was 23, and the babe was one year old.

An Attempt to Assassinate Riley Coldiron at Jackson, Ky.

Jackson, Ky., July 27.—There was much excitement here Sunday over an attempt to assassinate Riley Coldiron Saturday night. POPE LEO LAID TO REST

Solemn and Impressive Obsequies in St. Peter's.

Cardinal Gibbons Arrived in Rome Sunday—Drove to the Vatican and Paid His Respects to Cardinal Oreglia, the Camerlingo.

Rome, July 27.—The body of Pope Leo was buried in St. Peter's Saturday night. At sundown the most important and most solemn of all the obsequies took place. The front doors of the basilica were closed, and the vast church, except for a row of lights at the shrine of St. Peter, the candles about the bier and these persons who had quietly and with the utmost reverence gathered there, appeared deserted.

The monsignors of the basilica, aided by the noble guard, laid all that was mortal of Leo XIII. in a cypress coffin lined with red satin and bearing on the cover an inlaid cross. The entire sacred college and Prince Colonna rising to their feet as a last tribute and sign of respect.

When the body had been carefully put in the coffin it was entirely concealed with the red velvet covering which before had been on the bier. The major domo put beside the body two silk purses containing coins of silver and a bronze medal, struck during Leo's pontificate.

When all had been arranged the supreme prayer was said and the last benediction given, all present joining in. Half suppressed sobs were heard on all sides.

The second coffin was of lead and very heavy. On the cover, at the head, was a cross, just below which was a skull and crossbones, while below these were the arms of the late pope, with the triple crown, but without the keys, signifying living victory.

These two coffins were then enclosed in a third casket of polished walnut without decorations.

When the last supreme moment came, the heavy coffins, weighing in all 1,322 pounds, were rolled out of the chapel, preceded by mace bearers and choirs, singing as they went, and followed by all the cardinals. Pulleys were attached to the coffin, and soon, to the strains of the "Benedictus Dominus Deus Israel," it was hoisted into the stone sarcophagus above the door, where it will remain until the grateful cardinals created by the late pontiff shall erect a suitable tomb in the basilica of St. John Lateran, which was chosen by the pope himself as his final resting place.

At the sixth meeting of the congregation of cardinals held Sunday 45 cardinals were present. Cardinal Della Volpe, voicing also the opinions of some of his colleagues, criticized the ceremonies in connection with the interment of Leo XIII. Saturday night because the cardinals did not participate in the entire procession and complained generally of the lack of order. Cardinal Oreglia replied that he had already noticed this and that he would punish those who were responsible.

The ceremonial of the conclave established by Gregory XV. is to be followed at the coming meeting. The cardinals have decided during the conclave to eat in common in order to facilitate their work. A local paper quotes the response of Cardinal Svampa to a question as to whether he believed the conclave would be of lengthy duration, as follows: "On the contrary, I think it will be very short. I believe that two days will suffice to reach an agreement."

Cardinal Gibbons arrived here Sunday, accompanied by Father Garvan, his secretary. He was received at the station by Mgr. Kennedy, rector of the American college at Rome, and Father Hertzog, procurator general of the order of Sulpicians. They drove to the Sulpician house, where mass was celebrated. Being tired and the hour being late, Cardinal Gibbons did not attend the meeting of the cardinals Sunday morning. In the afternoon he drove to the vatican and paid his respects to Cardinal Oreglia, who received him most cordially. He had a conversation with the latter in which the camerlingo informed Cardinal Gibbons of the leading decisions made by the congregation with reference to the conclave. Cardinal Gibbons will receive no one except cardinals until after the conclave.

JUVENILE MURDERERS HANGED.

Earl Whitney and Claude O'Brien Launched Into Eternity.

Lexington, Ky., July 25.—Earl Whitney and Claude O'Brien paid the death penalty for the murder of A. B. Chinn. The necks of both were broken by the fall. As the clock struck 8 Friday morning Whitney and O'Brien were led to the scaffold by Deputy Sheriffs Kit Wilkerson and Ben Freckman. They were proceeded on the scaffold by Fathers Cunningham and Bouldin, the Catholic priests. They came from the jail smiling, and Whitney shook hands with a number of friends in the crowd. The sun was just beaming over the jail from the opposite side and their heads were almost in the sunlight, representing a crown of light over them. On the platform were Circuit Clerk James Rogers and Deputy Sheriff McElroy, who adjusted the nooses. Other officers tied the feet and hands and two men adjusted the caps. The priests administered the last sad rites, and each of them kissed the cross just before the cap was slipped over their heads. Neither made a statement or spoke a word after reaching the scaffold, but continued to smile, and both were perfectly cool, not a muscle twitching.

Whitney died hard, expiring at 8:22, while O'Brien died at 8:21. Deputy Sheriff Ben Freckman cut the men down, and Undertaker Weihl took charge of the remains and shipped them to their friends in Memphis and Nashville.

FAMOUS HORSE KILLED.

John E. Madden's Loss By Lightning Was $100,000.

Lexington, Ky., July 22.—Lightning struck the large barn at John E. Madden's Hamburg place Tuesday night, burning the barn and killing three horses, including the famous thoroughbred stallion, imp. Mirthful, sire of Aceful, Skillful, Jackful, Mexican, Witful, etc., and inflicting a loss of probably $100,000. The barn cost $20,000, and was insured for $15,000. In it were $7,000 worth of feed and traps. Two youngsters burned—a colt by Mirthful and a filly by Plaudit—valued at $5,000. A lightning bolt struck a telephone wire and ran directly to the stall of imp. Mirthful. The noted stallion was paralyzed, and his groom and assistants, who reached his stall, could not get him on his feet. There were 64 horses in the barn, and all were saved except three. Manager Steele was in bed at his home, a half mile from the barn, and was stunned by lightning, which ran into his house by the same telephone wire. The scores of men employed on the place turned out and rendered valuable service in saving the stock. Madden and Mrs. Madden are at Saratoga and could not hear of the disaster until Wednesday morning.

Lightning also struck the large feed barn on the farm of Thomas H. Stokens, in this county, destroying two horses. The loss is estimated at $6,000.

M. Harlan, of Washington; Maj. R. S. Bullock, of Lexington, and C. M. Clay, jr., of Denver, Col.

The child bride of Gen. Cassius M. Clay is devised a goodly portion of the fortune which examined him at his death, by his will, which is dated May 12, 1900. His children by his first wife are left nothing except the estate of 2,023½ acres, which was set aside for them in 1870, after the separation of Gen. Clay and his wife. At that time it was the agreement that this partition of real estate should satisfy all their claims against the estate.

A LIGHTNING BOLT.

It Severed the Head of Henry Clay's Monument in Lexington, Ky.

Lexington, Ky., July 23.—During the violent thunderstorm early Wednesday morning the monument of the great commoner, Henry Clay, which occupied a prominent position in the Lexington cemetery, was partially destroyed. Lightning struck the shaft and severed the head from the figure which fell to the ground, where it lies imbedded in the soil to the depth of eight inches. It is marred probably beyond repair. It was carved by John Hailey, of Frankfort, in 1861, when $10,000 was appropriate by the Kentucky legislature to pay the cost of the monument.

It is now suggested that the legislature be asked for another appropriation to repair the damage done a monument of Kentucky's most illustrious son.

Change in the Taxation Laws Would Bring Them.

SO THINKS WILLIAM A. ROBINSON.

Makes a Plain, Business-Like Talk Before State Commercial Convention, Urging Amendment to Constitution Regarding Local Taxation—To Be Voted on Next November.

It has long been conceded that taxation plays an important part in the development of the products and resources of any State and those who attended the recent State Commercial Convention at Louisville had a striking example of this brought to their attention in the speech of Mr. William A. Robinson, of Louisville, on the subject of local taxation, in view of the proposed amendment to Section 181 of the State Constitution to be voted on the next November election. Judge S. S. Savage, of Ashland, presided over the meeting and is Chairman of the State Committee that is seeking to set the people right on this amendment. Mr. Robinson's speech in part was as follows:

In the first place, I would remark, that taxation is a subject in which every good citizen is interested more or less, either directly or indirectly. The Constitution of 1891, the present Constitution under which we are governed, was the first of the four Constitutions of the State of Kentucky to fix an inflexible system in the organic law as to local taxation, and it was a complete revolution in regard to taxation on the industrial interests of our Kentucky cities. It was a radical measure, and, as I believe, with all the intelligent study I have been able to give it, it was a great mistake in policy, and I believe it is wrong in principle. It is contrary to the great American doctrine of home rule and local self-government, especially on that most vital question of local taxation for local government. It substituted a so-called uniform ad valorem system for the license system on business enterprises. It made every merchant and every manufacturer his own assessor, and I believe you will bear me out, those of you who have observed the working of this law, that it is as ununiform and as variable as the inequability of a man's conscience, his judgment, or his sense of right. It is necessarily unequal, ununiform, and therefore, unfair and unjust. The change led to litigation which has gone on down for ten years, there being many cases yet in the Court of Appeals unsettled.

This amendment which is now proposed simply places us back practically in the matter of local taxation to where we were before under the former Constitution. It applies to all cities, not to cities of the first class only, as is often stated in our papers, but to all cities, every city in the State of Kentucky, the right under the general act of the Legislature, to fix its own assessment, its own system of taxation on all other property except real estate. They will have the right to tax by license or otherwise. It lodges the power with the local government, subject to our State Legislature, composed of the representatives of the people of the State.

Now, bear in mind that it makes no changes whatever in the system of taxation, for either State or county. Remember also that it bears upon all the cities of the State, not upon cities of the first-class, but of any other class, but ALL the cities of the State. No city and no town is to adopt this plan unless they choose to. It is optional with the local authorities, with the people who are to be taxed. The representatives of the people to be taxed may under which system they wish to be taxed, and the Legislature, by general law, may authorize the cities that choose to adopt that plan to adopt it. So that it is purely local matter, left to the people of each city, and I submit to you whether Louisville or Paducah have not a perfect right to say how they shall pay their bills, how they shall pay their fire department, how they shall build their streets, how they shall build their sewers, without the interference of the general State Government at Frankfort.

I have faith that when it is properly understood and brought before the people of the State it will receive a large majority of the votes next November. I believe it is much to the interest of the State as well as to any city, because as you build up great cities you certainly add to the revenue of your State. You add to the wealth, and you add to the population. Bear in mind that it only requires a majority of the votes cast on this question, and not a majority of all the voters of the State. We have prompt action now, because if [illegible] fails to receive such a majority in November, under the Constitution of 1891 the matter cannot be brought up again for five years.

The farmers are as much interested in this matter as any of our people. It is a fact [illegible] that the farmer is handicapped as you make [illegible] consumer at home for his product [illegible] the loss of the [illegible] interests of the [illegible] served as you [illegible] pensation. Heb Scott and mother entertained, last Sunday, Captain Joe Lillard, Jas. Botts, Will Rogers, and Sebe Scott, and their wives, and Wilber Scott, Mrs. O. N. Grant, Will Arnold and sister, Miss Flo. The entertainment was given in honor of Ott Scott, who was here on a visit.

Harve Smith's ball team is as follows: Louis Slayback pitcher; Poda Spelling, catcher; Ray Botts, first base; Wm. Kelly, second base; Henry Rares third base; Tom Rice, short stop; Harve Smith, right field; Pres. West, center field; Wm. Sachel, left field. Harve is captain, and challenges any second nine in the county.

There is something brewing in McVille in the way of an entertainment. When it is known that it will be a sure go we will be notified, and will give it to the public through the Recorder. If it's a go it will be a success; because when Colonel Aikins takes hold of, or is interested in a thing it is an assured success.

The picnic at the Commissary was a success. Everything passed off nicely, and all enjoyed themselves. The colored people certainly enjoy themselves dancing. The dancing was the best we ever witnessed. Dick Utz was the champion jaugher. There was so many good dancers it is difficult to decide who was champion. Quite a number of white people was present during the day and night.

Some say the Commissary was afraid of his proposed contest if he won the watch, and when he won it took it without giving the correspondents a chance to accept his proposition. We tried to get an expression from the correspondents in regard to the matter, but received nothing definite from any except Flickertown. We think they have given all the chance they could ask. If there was any fear it was on the part of the correspondents. I supposed they were unwilling to enter the contest and because of this I took the watch, not because I was afraid to enter it. I believe such a contest would be a good thing, and made the proposition in the interest of the Recorder, the people and correspondents.

Mr. Lahman is an Ohio man and says that he cannot understand Kentucky laws. He thought Ludlow was in the U. S. before he moved here.

It has been said that the Council will at its next meeting, advertize for bids for a lawful barbed wire fence to be placed around the town, as the chief of police is being overworked trying to keep the trespassers out. It is to be horse high, bull strong and pig tight.

There is some talk of the Eastern Lunatic Asylum establishing a branch here. We will certainly patronize it. We believe in patronizing home institutions.

One of the head bank officials was heard instructing the police the other day about not making certain parties pay the license as they deposit their money there. "You must not push them for the license," was the remark.

Malchus Souther paid his license, the next trip he sent his wife and little boy, but forgot to put the license tag on the wagon. The police arrested her and detained her some time, but she finally begged off and was allowed to go. Mr. Souther is secretary of the Boone Co. Insurance Co., and does business at the Boone Co. Not Over-Wise.

There is an old allegorical picture of a girl scared at a grass-hopper, but in the act of heedlessly treading on a snake. This is paralled by the man who spends a large sum of money building a cyclone cellar, but neglects to provide his family with a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy as a safeguard against bowel complaints, whose victims outnumber those of the cyclone a hundred to one. This remedy is everywhere recognized as the most prompt and reliable medicine in use for these diseases. For sale by All Druggists.

The Boone County Teachers' Institute convened in the court house, last Monday morning, and was called to order by County Superintendent D. M. Snyder. Miss Lillian Corbin was chosen secretary, after which the several committees were appointed, when the Institute adjourned until after noon.

Sproles, who insisted that the laws of hygiene be taught in our schools, emphasizing the importance of proper food and cleanliness and impressing upon the teachers the injurious effects of stimulants and narcotics.

Prof. Dickey introduced the subject of composition, insisting that the pupils be taught to express their thoughts in writing in clear, concise and correct English. He was followed in his remarks by Miss Chambers, Mr. Gaines, and Mr. Northcutt. Miss Wood gave an interesting incident of the composition writing of one of her pupils. Mr. Hughes insists that pupils be required to write upon subjects with which they are familiar. Several points in the school law was discussed by the Superintendent and Messrs. Dysentery Cured Without the Aid of a Doctor.

"I am just up from a hard spell of the flux" (dysentery) says Mr. T. A. Pinner, a well known merchant of Drummond, Tenn., "I used one small bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera, and Diarrhoea Remedy and was cured without having a doctor. I consider it the best cholera medicine in the world." There is no need of employing a doctor when this remedy is used, for no doctor can prescribe a better medicine for bowel compiaint in any form either for children or adults. THE POSTAL SCANDALS

Seven Indictments For Alleged Conspiracy and Bribery.

Other Indictments Are Expected Later On, Possibly Within a Week or Two—The Grand Jury is Still Probing the Charges.

Washington, Aug. 1.—The post office investigation developed more excitement Friday, the federal grand jury returning seven indictments, involving nine persons for alleged conspiracy and bribery in connection with postal affairs. August W. Machen, for many years the head of the free delivery service, was named jointly with others in four of the indictments. The other men were William Gordon Crawford, who was deputy auditor for the post office department from June 12, 1893, to September 15, 1897, and is a member of one of the exclusive clubs of Washington; Leopold J. Stern, of Baltimore; George E. Lorenz, of Toledo, formerly a prominent government official, and Martha E. Lorenz, his wife; John T. Cupper, mayor of Lock Haven, Pa.; William C. Long, an Ohio man, who has spent much time in Washington in recent years and who is an intimate friend of Machen; Maurice Runkel, of New York city, and Thomas W. McGregor, a protege of Machen, who was a messenger at the beginning of Machen's administration of the free delivery service and in recent years has been in charge of the supplies for the rural free delivery service.

Crawford voluntarily appeared in court soon after the indictments were returned and furnished $10,000 bail, and McGregor likewise gave $5,000 bail.

Long was arrested at his home, where Deputy Marshal Springman found him in bed. He was released on $10,000 bonds. His was the only case in which a bench warrant was issued, owing to the voluntary action of the others indicted. Machen was not rearrested under the new indictment, as he gave bonds in $20,000 under his indictment several weeks ago and the authorities felt this was sufficient security to secure his appearance.

Warrants have been issued for the out-of-town parties indicted, and their arrest is expected within the next 24 hours. The grand jury has not completed the work laid before it by the postal investigators, and other indictments may be expected later on, possibly within a week or two. It is understood that two additional cases against one of the parties indicted Friday, a former prominent bureau official, are being inquired into by the grand jury, and the acts of another former high official of the post office department already under indictment by the Brooklyn grand jury are being investigated.

Machen was in consultation with his counsel Friday afternoon, and the demurrer to the previous indictments probably will be filed Saturday.

Walter S. Mayer, a veteran postal inspector and for many years previously a special pension examiner, has done a large part of the work on Friday's cases, aided by other inspectors. It was Mr. Mayer who traced the checks which figured in the previous indictments of Machen, and in weaving the evidence which he placed before the grand jury, he visited New York and other cities. Most of the last of the few weeks he has spent working up lines of evidence and assisting the prosecuting officials in the presentation to the grand jury. Postmaster General Payne returned to this city Friday night from his trip of about a fortnight on the revenue cutter Onandaga, which was making it cruise along the Atlantic coast.

Chicago Diamond Robbery.

Chicago, Aug. 1.—While the jewelry store of Louis Weber, at Clarke and Harrison streets, was full of customers Friday night robbers entered the basement of the place, and, cutting holes through the floor and raised platform between the outer and inner show windows, stole two trays of diamonds valued at $5,000. Gaining access to the basement through a vacant store in the rear, the thieves sawed a hole in the floor back of the show window large enough to permit a hand to be passed upward where the jewels lay.

RAZORS WERE USED.

Disturbance at Booker T. Washington's Meeting in Boston.

Boston, July 31.—An attempt on the part of half a dozen Negroes who are opposed to Booker T. Washington, president of Tuskogee institute, to ask questions at a meeting which he was addressing Thursday night at the Zion church, almost resulted in a riot and 25 policemen were called to quell the disturbance.

Several arrests were made, one policeman was stabbed with a hat pin while a man, said to be one of those opposed to Mr. Washington, was cut several times with a razor and was taken to a hospital. After the arrests Mr. Washington was allowed to proceed and spoke for nearly two hours.

Both factions at the close of the meeting issued statements. Mr. Washington said in his statement that the Negroes of Boston should not be held responsible for a few riotous individuals, while Wm. Munroe Trotter, one of those who was arrested, said that the cause of the rioting was the ruling of the chairman, Mr. Lewis, in ordering the arrest and ejection of any person who hissed or manifested any objection to the speaker of the evening.

It is said that the disturbance was pre-arranged. After the meeting Trotter and his friends admitted that they went there with the idea of asking Mr. Washington a number of questions and to resent any attack that might be made on the New England representatives to the recent Afro-American council at Louisville.

The meeting was held under the auspices of the Colored Business Men's association of Boston, and Wm. H. Lewis, a United States assistant district attorney, presided.

There was very little money on The Abbott, the odds being at $25 to $5.

This will will be offered for probate Monday. There will be a bitter contest as the attorneys for Dora Clay Brock are determined to fight every inch of ground. The later will is without witnesses.

The other will, which will also be offered for probate Monday, was made May 12, 1900, duly witnessed and attested, and leaves Dora $10,000 and one-fourth interest in the mines, as does the last will, but it makes other bequests, notably among which are $2,000 to build a Methodist church within one half mile of Dora Brock's home, $3,000 to John Cabell Chenault, and unstipulated amounts to the Filson club, of Louisville.

What Was It?

Fairpoint, Miss., Aug. 3rd.—One of the strangest cases ever reported occurred here recently. The son of Mr. G. L. Butler was very ill. The doctor said he had some disease of the spinal cord, and treated him for two months, but he grew worse all the time, and finally the doctor told Mr. Butler that he did not know what was the trouble.

The boy would wake up in the night and say that he was dying. He would be nervous and trembling and want to run out of the house, saying he saw ugly things which frightened him.

His father was very much discouraged till one day he saw a new remedy called Dodd's Kidney Pills advertised, and he at once bought some and began to give them to his boy.

He used altogether eight boxes before he was entirely cured. He has not been troubled since. Mr. Butler says:

"I feel it my duty to tell what Dodd's Kidney Pills have done for my boy. All this remedy needs is a fair chance and it will speak for itself."

Another club woman, Mrs. Haule, of Edgerton, Wis., tells how she was cured of irregularities and uterine trouble, terrible pains and backache by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"A while ago my health began to fail because of female troubles. The doctor did not help me. I remembered that my mother had used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound on many occasions for irregularities and uterine troubles, and I felt sure that it could not harm me at any rate to give it a trial.

"I was certainly glad to find that within a week I felt much better, the terrible pains in my back and side were beginning to cease, and at the time of menstruation I did not have nearly as serious a time as heretofore, so I continued its use for two months, and at the end of that time I was like a new woman. I really have never felt better in my life, have not had a sick headache since, and weigh 20 pounds more than I ever did, so I unhesitatingly recommend Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. MAY HAULE, Edgerton, Wis., President Household Economics Club. — $5000 forfeit if original of above letter proving genuineness cannot be produced.

Women should remember there is one tried and true remedy for all female ills, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Refuse to buy any other medicine, you need the best.

THE MARCUM MURDER.

His Father-in-Law and Two Sisters Gave Their Testimony.

Members of the Family Knew of a Conspiracy to Murder the Attorney For Over a Year Before His Assassination.

Cynthiana, Ky., July 31.—In the trial of the cases of the Kentucky feudists court opened at 8:30 Thursday morning. S. S. Taulbee, county clerk of Breathitt county, was placed on the stand and testified that he was standing on the corner by Hargis' store, looking toward the courthouse and saw J. B. Marcum and B. Ewen standing in the door of the courthouse.

The next witness called was Hezekiah Combs, who is a new witness introduced by the prosecution. He made a strong witness for the prosecution, testifying that he saw John Nohie, Curt Jett and Tom White together a short time before the shooting. He engaged in a short conversation with Nohie; saw White beckon Jett and they went toward the side door of the courthouse. He went on down the street and in a few minutes heard a shot and some one cry, "Oh, Lordy." He looked back and saw Ewen run, looking back as he ran. On being cross-examined, he was not confused in his testimony.

Cynthiana, Ky., Aug. 1.—When court convened Friday afternoon Judge Osborne sent the jury to its room and stated that he had heard that weapons had been drawn on witnesses on the street and he wanted any one having information regarding such incidents report the same to him.

Alexander H. Smith, another new witness, testified to seeing Jett, White, Ewen, Marcum and others at the time of the shooting, corroborating the testimony of Ewen and others.

Marcum's father-in-law and his two sisters testified during the afternoon. Mr. Hurst, the father-in-law, testified that Jett came to him the afternoon of the murder and wanted to talk with him. White was with Jett at all times on the three occasions that they met after the death of Marcum. Hurst testified that members of the family knew of a conspiracy to murder Marcum for over a year before his death.

Mrs. Hord, a sister of J. B. Marcum, testified that when her brother came into her house on the Sunday afternoon previous to his murder that both Jett and White followed him into the house and walked about in the different rooms of her home. She finally insisted that they leave, and they did so.

Mrs. Mary Johnson, another sister of Marcum, testified that armed men were frequently seen about the house where her brother lived. She had lived at her brother's home for a year previous to his murder, and the family was frequently warned that Marcum was to be murdered. She testified that she saw Thomas White and three other men in a stone quarry about 200 yards from her brother's house; that her brother intended taking a train, and sent her out to see if any one was lying in wait for him. When she returned and told her brother about White and three others being in the stone quarry he did not go to the depot. She testified that she saw both Jett and White after her brother was killed and that she asked Jett directly about it and accused him of it, and that he replied, "Hargis' money killed him, but I fired the shot." Mrs. Johnson testified that she also asked Tom White about the shooting, and accused him of helping to kill her brother, to which he replied, "Go and ask Ewen who killed him. He saw who did it, and will tell you he knows who did it."

THE MOB BAFFLED.

Futile Attempt to Take Two Negro Prisoners From a Train.

Huntington, W. Va., Aug. 1.—A Chesapeake & Ohio train was held up by a mob of 200 men near Clifton Forge late Thursday night and a desperate effort was made to take two Negro prisoners from the train. Over a hundred shots were fired by the mob and when the train reached Huntington 20 bullets were buried in the woodwork of the smoking car and all of the window glass had been shot out.

At Clifton Forge the Negro prisoners were taken on board to be brought to Covington, Va., for safe-keeping.

The train was flagged soon after leaving Clifton Forge, and when the train came to a standstill the mob surrounded the locomotive and ordered Engineer James Hall not to move his train under penalty of death. The mob then began to climb aboard.

Conductor Hall, who had anticipated trouble when he saw the train flagged, was prepared for the mob, and as they made a rush for the coaches, he ordered all the doors of the cars locked. The men, finding that it would be impossible for them to enter and obtain the Negroes, began to gather around the smoking car in which the Negroes were under guard. As Conductor Hall ran through the train calling on the passengers to lie flat on the floor, the mob began to fire into the windows of the smoking car, while the passengers scrambled from their seats to places of safety from the flying bullets. The firing was kept up for several minutes, and bullets whistled through the car windows. While women screamed, the mob outside continued their clamoring for the two Negro prisoners. Not a passenger or trainman was injured. Engineer Peck, during the firing, stayed in his cab, covered with revolvers. At last the main body of the mob had almost exhausted their supply of bullets, and those who had been guarding the engineer had left, going toward the smoking car, leaving Peck unguarded.

Suddenly he opened the throttle and the train shot forward, leaving the mob behind. They fired a few farewell shots into the windows as the train moved off.

The Negroes for whom the train was held up are from Lynchburg, Va., and are believed to be the men who shot and seriously injured a white brakeman, Edward Hite, on a C. & O. excursion between Clifton Forge and Lynchburg a few days ago.

INSURANCE IN WISCONSIN.

Companies Must Distribute Surplus Among the Policy Holders.

Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 1.—Insurance Commissioner Zeno M. Host Friday decided that mutual life insurance companies doing business in Wisconsin must distribute their surplus among policy holders at least once in five years. The decision affects many companies in this country and involves some $500,000,000 which has been withheld by companies doing business in Wisconsin.

That the stand of Mr. Host will be fought by the insurance companies there is no doubt, and eventually it will reach the highest courts. The outcome of the case has been watched for months by every company in the country. If the commission is sustained by the courts, it will make it possible for heirs of dead people to claim surpluses and compound interests that have been withheld, according to an insurance man, and endless litigation is probable.

POPE LEO'S SUCCESSOR

No One Has Been Chosen and the Cardinals Are Deadlocked.

A Large Quantity of Provisions Was Sent Into the Conclave Through the Wicket Gate Sunday, Indicating a Long Contest.

Rome, Aug. 3.—No successor to Leo XIII. has yet been chosen. From the smoke which issued from the little chimney on the Sistine chapel Sunday night, a vast multitude gathered around St. Peter's learned that the second day of the conclave had finished fruitless. The conclusion is drawn that the strength of the leading candidate remains unbroken and that no compromise candidate has appeared. And there is no indication of how long this condition of affairs will continue. The prolongation of the contest has aroused tremendous public interest, if indeed, it can not be called excitement. Every trace of that apathy which followed the death of the late pope has vanished and instead there now exists a burning interest in everything pertaining to the election of his successor.

This culminated Sunday night in the appearance of a great crowd which packed the great square of St. Peter's and presented a spectacle seldom seen even at the site of so many historic ceremonies. The impenetrable seclusion which shrouds those engaged in determining who shall be at the head of the Catholic church heightens the feverish curiosity of those who await their decision. Princes, princesses, archbishops, bishops, monsignors, priests, well to do business people, in short, people from every walk in life, from that of nobleman to street beggar, talked of nothing but La Fumata (the signal smoke). Both Sunday morning and Sunday evening this was the lodestone which drew tens of thousands to the square of St. Peter's. There for hours with strained ears and craned necks they waited in the hope of seeing a tiny little stream of smoke so insignificant that it was almost impossible to realize that a great issue was involved in its fleeting appearance.

The scene at St. Peter's Sunday night was by far the most impressive that has occurred in Rome since the late pope became ill. After the fruitless morning ballot, a belief spread that a new pontiff would surely be elected Sunday evening. All roads during the afternoon, therefore, led to the vatican.

A great quantity of provisions was sent into the conclave Sunday through the wicket gate, including 300 chickens, 500 newly laid eggs, many litres of milk, crates of fruit, etc. All the provisions were thoroughly examined before being allowed to pass through the wicket. Forty of the chickens were cut open to see that they did not contain contraband matter.

INTERURBAN CARS COLLIDE.

Over Thirty Persons Were Injured, Two of Whom May Die.

Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 3.—Behind time and running at a high rate of speed, car No. 105, south-bound, on the Indianapolis and Martinsville interurban road, crashed into a north-bound car three miles south of Mooresville Sunday morning injuring over 30 people, two of whom will probably die.

The south-bound car was heavily loaded with passengers bound for Bethany Park. The north-bound car had only a few passengers and, with the exception of the motorman, Frank Easterday, none was injured. Both cars were specials and met on a curve.

The accident happened in a grove remote from town or farm houses and it was impossible to secure aid until another car arrived from Martinsville, when the injured were removed to Bethany Park and medical aid summoned.

Bethany Park is the summer assembly of the Christian church and the passengers were going to the park to attend services. The women at the park joined in preparing bandages and in aiding the physicians. All the injured were removed to their homes. The cause of the accident, it is said, was due to the telephone system not being in good working order and the crew not being able to get orders.

DEATH ON THE RAIL.

Three Trainmen Were Killed on the Queen & Crescent Railway.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Aug. 3.—A head-on collision between two freight trains, each drawn by two engines, resulting in the death of three trainmen, occurred Saturday night on the Queen & Crescent railroad, about 168 miles from Chattanooga.

The dead are: Fireman D. A. Phillips, Fireman J. Walters, Fireman J. Price, all of Somerset, Ky.

The injured: Engineers T. S. Duke and N. S. Fitzgerald, both of Somerset.

The trains met at a dip in the road while going at a high rate of speed and the crash was heard for miles. The collision is attributed to the failure of the dispatcher to deliver orders to the south-bound train for the meeting point. The engines and a number of cars were badly damaged.

PLOT TO KIDNAP THE SULTAN.

Three Hundred of the Conspirators Were Hacked to Pieces.

The plot failed because of the vigilance of Pasha Ali-Mohamet, who watches over the sultan's sleep. The Albanian guard surrounded the conspirators and cut them to pieces. The number of bodies carried away clandestinely is said to have been more than 300.

A REMARKABLE CASE.

Young Girl Dies After Sneezing For Four Weeks.

Harrisburg, Ky., July 30.—Twenty weeks of incessant sneezing has caused the death of a daughter of Benjamin Ball, residing near Dix river hottoms.

On the second day of last March the young lady, who was just 16, robust and large for her years, began to sneeze, and kept is up constantly for four weeks, the longest interval between any two sneezes being about one minute.

At the expiration of the four weeks the sneezing stopped, and it was hoped that she would not again he troubled.

Three weeks later, however, she was again attacked with sneezing, and, notwithstanding that she had the best of medical attention, kept it up constantly until death relieved her this week.

During the first attack the girl remained in her usual good health, but during the last spell she suffered excruciating pain and wasted away.

The body was buried in the Christopher graveyard, and every night since the interment the broken-hearted father has pillowed his head on the mound that covers his girl, with a shotgun by his side, for fear her grave may be disturbed in the interest of medical science.

STATE NEWS PICK-UPS

TO BUILD LARGE SHOPS.

Illinois Central Secures Option on Land at Louisville.

Louisville, Ky., July 31.—The Illinois Central has secured an option on 80 acres of ground just outside of the southern part of the city and it has been definitely intimated to the city officials that the building of large shops is under consideration. Certain concessions are necessary and if these can be secured it is reasonably certain that the option will be closed and the shops built. Agents for the road have been inquiring into labor conditions in Louisville and the report they made was extremely satisfactory to the management of the road. In Chicago disputes between labor and capital are so frequent that all the large corporations lose every year thousands of dollars from this cause.

This question is said to enter largely into the consideration, in addition to the fact that shops to supply the demands of the territory south of the Ohio are needed.

The oat crop of Oklahoma will be the largest ever yet harvested. Seventy-five to one hundred bushels to the acre is the yield indicated in some of the newer portions of the territory.

There are about half a dozen boys in this town who are acquiring the habit of disturbing entertainments at the court house by assembling in the hall where they make all the noise they can, and when invited to leave the building they continue their unbecoming conduct on the street in front of the court house. It is well enough for boys to enjoy themselves, but in doing so they should respect the rights of other people.

While engaged in digging a post hole in Andy Wepler's livery stable, at the northeast corner of Fifth and Green streets, yesterday morning two negro workmen struck a large iron box which contained over $4,000 in Spanish coins—$3,500 in gold and the remainder in silver. In the center of the stable, buried eight feet deep in a rusty iron box, the immense treasure was brought to light. In fear of finding some ghastly relic, the negro workmen shrunk from the test of opening it. Mr. Wepler, himself, summoned to the scene, threw open the iron lid and feasted his eyes on the gold and silver coins.—C. J. July 31.

Missouri has begun the work of educating her young people in the principles of agriculture and horticulture in good earnest. Last year more than 5,000 children in different counties of the State received such education and the number will be largely increased this year. The agricultural college of Missouri is the first institution in the country to offer these courses to teachers, and the number of those who have taken advantage of the offer has been a surprise to those interested. More than 500 of them have already taken the course. The result in a few years will be that the State will take a much higher rank as an agricultural State than she has enjoyed heretofore, and more in accord with her superior natural resources.

The 1903 Burley tobacco crop will probably be a light one, says the Western Tobacco Journal. The higher prices now being paid on the breaks and in the country are largely due to this fact. Shippers to the Cincinnati market estimate the acreage to be from 10 to 25 per cent short of last year, and last year's crop was considerably below the average. It would seem that a large crop was not contemplated by the growers originally, owing to the scarcity of labor and the low prices prevailing, and the acreage was later reduced by unfavorable weather to prepare the ground and set the plants. In most localities plowing was done when the ground was either too wet or too dry. This was unavoidable on account of the long wet and dry spells, which took turns about in keeping the growers from catching up with their spring work.

The post-office department is constantly in receipt of requests from the issue of a mourning stamp for use on black edged stationery. Persons in all grades of life assert that there is no harmony or appropriateness in an envelop with a black edge and a red stamp. The department has given much consideration to the subject, but has been unable to comply with the requests on account of the rules of the Universal Postal Union, which prescribe that our lowest values stamp shall be green; that the stamp used for domestic use shall be red, and the stamp carrying foreign mail—five cent—shall be blue. In view of these restrictions, it has not appeared possible to meet the requirements for a mourning stamp as the department does not deem it advisable to print a stamp in red and also in black. However, the suggestion has been made that the three cent stamp now printed in purple, might be issued in black, so that persons desiring to use a black stamp upon their mourning envelop might do so by paying the additional cent. The department may take up this suggestion later and act upon it.

The Lancaster Record tells a wonderful snake story about one of the L. & N. engineers, Johnnie Clark, who sometimes takes the afternoon train of Capt. Groves from Paris to Rowland. Here is the meat of the story:

"Monday night No. 11 was running at a lively clip to make up time. Just as the engine emerged from the tunnel, a rattlesnake fell from the rocks and landed in the cab. The frightened reptile ran up the reverse lever, and before Clark saw it it ran on his left arm, quickly coiling about it. As do all good engineers, Clark first thought of the lives of passengers. He knew that a battle was on, and to quit his post meant the wrecking of the train and sure death to many people, so grabbing the snake just back of its head with his right hand, he used his left to close the throttle, reverse the engine and turn the emergency air. The train quickly came to a standstill. The fireman took to his heels and Clark was left standing in the cab with the immense rattler twined about his left arm. He held fast to its head, however, with his right hand.

"Being trained to think and act quickly, he opened a guage cock with his left hand, and by holding the snake's head thereunder, scalded it to death. Our readers can judge the strength of the reptile by its size, having measured three feet and six inches, and having eight 'rattles.' Mr. Clark took it back to Cincinnati, where it will be skinned, mounted and hung in Superintendent's Hood's office. He will have the rattles made into a watch charm."

THE DAIRY.

Milk of different temperatures should never be mixed.

With cows long in milk, the butter will come slowly.

A little too much churning injures the butter by destroying the grain.

Any impurities in the drinking water are readily absorbed by the milk.

In profitable buttermaking it is all important to suit your customers.

A little feed will often save a good deal of time in milking a restless cow.

The growth of the heifer is so much deducted from what should go to milk production.

A great point of value in a dairy cow is to have the milking habit firmly established.

Dairy farming, if rightly managed, may be the means of greatly improving the land.

It is useless to expect a great flow of milk from a cow that has only enough feed to live upon.

Care should be taken never to overwork butter, so that the grain and texture may be preserved.

The fact that a cow gives a large mess of milk need not interfere with her bringing a good calf.

The colder butter can be churned the better, and the better it will stand after it has been churned.

A good dairy cow should always have her good qualities perpetuated by raising her heifer calves.

A stunted heifer will never make a breeder of thrifty, quick-maturing stock and will prove a failure.

The churn should never be filled more than half full, and then if the temperature is right the butter will come.

Stone or cement troughs are better than wooden ones for setting the milk cans in because they are easily kept clean.

Churning at too high a temperature or churning too long will produce greasy butter in which the grain is injured.

When cows have been long in milk, churning is difficult, because the milk has become glutinous and the fat globules will not adhere.

A Sure Cure for Diarrhoea.

Coming as it does, in the busiest season, when a man can least afford to lose time, a sure and quick cure for diarrhoea is very desirable. Anyone who has given it a trial will tell you that the quickest, surest and most pleasant remedy in use for this disease is Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. There is no loss of time when it is used, as one or two doses of it will cure any ordinary attack. It never fails, not even in the most severe and dangerous cases. For Sale by All Druggists.

The American Society of Equity, which was incorporated recently in Indiana to organize the farmers of the country to secure $1 wheat, met at Indianapolis, a few days since. Jas. A. Everitt, of Indianapolis, President, says branch organizations are being established in every State, and that the society in its short existence has secured 100,000 members. The plan is to get enough farmers into a close agreement to not only demand $1 as the minimum price for wheat, but to demand and secure higher prices for all agricultural products. Prominent grain dealers at Indianapolis pretend to think the society has hatched a will-o-wisp scheme that will never amount to anything, but Everitt and his associates say they will soon see differently.

If Pierpont Morgan owned the world instead of only a part of it he would be worth about $400,000,000,000. If he owned the United States his wealth would amount to about $94,300,000,000. The United States has the greatest total wealth and the smallest debt of any of the world's great powers, but on a per capita basis Great Britain is the richest. While the property and money of that mighty nation amount to only $59,000,000,000 as against our $54,800,000,000, its wealth amounts to $1,442 per person, while in the United States the wealth amounts to only $1,235 per capita. The second richest nation in Europe is France, which has wealth aggregating $48,000,000,000, or $1,257 per capita. Germany's wealth foots up $40,000,000,000, or $709 per capita. In addition she has $800,000,000 lent or invested abroad. Russia, with its immense territory and population, has wealth amounting to only $32,000,000,000.—Nashville American.

A novel idea is suggested from the Department of Agriculture to inoculate land for growing alfalfa. An acre of land under the former plan of inoculation required 1,500 pounds of infected earth from alfalfa fields. It is now said that the Department of Agriculture has discovered that the bacteria for this purpose may be dried and thus preserved for use when desired, and restored to use by hot water, and thus the fields may be inoculated by spraying the liquid over the field. The bacteria thus preserved in small cakes may be shipped in any quantity desired, and when dissolved in hot water be ready for spraying over the field where ready for sowing alfalfa seed.

The Death Penalty.

A little thing sometimes results in death. Thus a mere scratch, insignificant cuts or puny boils have paid the death penalty. It is wise to have Bucklen's Arnica Salve ever handy. It's the best Salve on earth and will prevent fatality, when Burns, Sores, Ulcers and Piles threaten. Only 25c, at all Drug Stores.

A Good Man Gone to Rest.

Albert C. Kelly, whose death was mentioned in this column last week was buried in the family cemetery on the Kelly homestead, last Thursday at eleven o'clock, in the presence of a very large crowd of friends and relatives assembled to pay their last, sad respects to a most worthy citizen, whose sudden death was a great shock to the entire neighborhood. Though a robust man, apparently, and a picture of health, Albert Kelly was not a stout man as most of his acquaintances supposed. He had been annoyed with both heart and stomach troubles for some time, and from remarks he had made to friends it was evident that he realized the seriousness of his physical troubles. He had just past the half century mark in life and was the youngest of a family of thirteen children, five girls and eight boys. Eight of the family survive him. He lived with his three sisters on the old homestead, where he spent his entire life, during which, by industry and prudence, he acquired considerable of this world's goods. He was a quiet, companionable gentleman, every ready to respond to the demands of charity, it being said that he never failed to assist in any laudable undertaking that was presented to him. He was a bachelor, and a prominent and beloved member of the Odd-Fellows' lodge at Bellevue, and representatives of that brotherhood from Rising Sun, Burlington and Bellevue to a large number bore his remains to their last resting place in which they were tenderly deposited during the beautiful and affecting burial ceremony of that order. Six of his nephews, three Kellys and three Clores, each an Odd Fellow, were the pall-bearers. The floral offerings were beautiful and numerous. A good man has gone to rest. Peace be to his ashes.

The East Enterprise Fair.

We mean the east Enterprise fair, Aug. 18th to 21st, which will be the best ever held on the grounds. New management has taken hold and no pains or expenses is being spared to make it the best fair of the season. Two new races have been added and the purses have been increased from $110 to $150 in the trotting and pacing races. As an additional attraction Prof. Mack, of Tennessee, has been engaged to give a balloon ascension each day of the fair and there will be a triple parachute jump, Prof. Mack, Mademoiselle Mack and their trick dog leaping from balloon in mid air each coming down in a parachute. There will be a slack wire performance, high trapeze, and the dog will dive from an elevation of 75 feet into a pool of water. Two balloon ascensions Thursday, Aug. 20th, morning and evening. The fair grounds at East Enterprise, Indiana, are beautiful in every respect, comprising a grove of lofty trees that furnish fine shade. 25 cents covers all costs of admission and the balloon ascension is worth more than that. Thos. Carver, of Florence, Ind., is the presidents and Scott Thompson of Rising Sun, Ind., the County Treasurer of Ohio County, is the secretary. Send for premium list. Remember it will be August 18th, 19th, 20th and 21st, at a time when the farmer can spare a day off.

Other than dry weather has had to do with the unfavorable condition of the corn in this part of the country. Much of the land was too wet when broken in the spring, destroying some of the soil properties necessary to produce a healthy growth in the corn. Half a crop of corn will be about the limit this year, and this not because of a protracted drought.

Bondsmen Sued.

C. C. Roberts has sued on Elmer Beall's bond as sheriff of Boone county for $2805 57 subject to a credit of $2,000. Mr. Roberts alleges that the balance of $805 57 is due him on his salary and claims allowed him by the fiscal court on salary, and claims presented while county judge. He also claims a penalty of 15 per cent on the $805-57. The bondsmen against whom the suit is brought are Harrison Clore, D. Beall, Mike Clore, John Cloud, C. T. Davis, J. C. Hankins, B. A. Floyd, Holland Goodridge, J. A. Riddell and W. L. Riddell.

Burlington Ball Park.

BOONES vs HOME CITY } SATURDAY, Aug. 8th.

Games called at 2 p. m.

Bellevue defeated McVille, last Saturday, 9 to 8.

Home City beat Petersburg, last Saturday 10 to 8.

The Home city, Ohio team will be here next Saturday afternoon.

The Burlington team will play Erlanger next Saturday on their grounds.

The Burlington team defeated the Ashby Fork aggregation, last Saturday afternoon on the latter's grounds, 23 to 1.

The Erlanger ball team, very much strengthened, especially in the box and behind the bat, came over last Saturday, and defeated the Boones 8 to 6. The Erlanger boys played some sloppy ball, but the Boones were not to be outclassed in that particular and put up an inferior game at every point. Pass balls, muffed balls and overthrows were the features of the game on the part of the Boones. Lentz, who pitched for Erlanger, let the Boones down with five scattering hits, three of which were to the credit of Roy Clutterbuck. In the matter of men struck out he made a great record, 15 of the Boones not being able to connect with his curves. While the score shows 8 to 6 it ought to have been about 3 to 1 in favor of the visitors. Following is the score by innings:

Boones	1	0	0	0	2	0	3	0	0	—6
Erlanger	0	2	0	4	0	0	2	0	0	—8

Struck out—By Lentz 15; by Houston, 8.

Base Hits—Clutterbuck, 2, Ranz, 2, Hughes, Houston, Kennedy, Geiger.

Two base hits—Kennedy.

Three base hits—Clutterbuck, Geiger.

The Boones must wake up and begin business or all interest will be lost in the club. They should put more life in the game—play ball from start to finish. Don't come in from the field and lie down and forget you are engaged in a game and not know the batting order. Winning ball cannot be played by a team while sleeping.

The entertainment at the courthouse last night was enjoyed very much by all who attended.

There will be no preaching in the Burlington Baptist church Sunday morning, August 9th, the pastor being in attendance at the all day meeting at Woolper school house. The usual services at night, commencing at 7:45.

Jailer Sam Adams went Sunday to see his brother Lute, who is very ill of typhoid fever at his brother Walter's, over on Laughery creek, in Indiana. He reports Lute improving slowly. His mother, who had been over there for several days, returned home with him.

Lost—A light jacket trimmad in white silk medallions and lined with blue silk, somewhere between the Union pike and Big Bone Springs. The finder will please return the jacket to Mr. John Bradford's or to Mr. Charles Allen's and receive reward. GRACE E. RUSSELL.

The refreshment privileges for the fair were rented publicy on the grounds at Florence, last Saturday, as follows: Stands 1, 3, 4, to Clore Bros., for $225; No. 2 to Eckles Bros. for $177; basket room to A. C. Souther, $50; orange cider privilege to Clore Bros. for $10; watermelon privilege to F. Bauers, for $12; feed room to O. P. Vaughn for $7.

The hay crop as a whole is bound to prove short; stocks of old hay are much reduced, and in many sections exhausted. Farmers should realize these important facts at the outset, and with the near approach of harvest insist on reasonable prices for their crops. True, large areas of the west and southwest have had rain and to spare; but equally wide territory eastward from Chicago, including parts of Illinois and into New England, suffered severely thru drought, grass was at a standstill, through much of April and May. Generous distribution of moisture and sunshine from now on would do something to relieve the situation in central and eastern hay states, but the uniform trend of all testimony is toward a scant crop in many leading areas.

The Sinking Sinner and the Saving Lord

Thrilling Incident From the Life of the Apostle Peter

Sermon by the "Highway and Byway" Preacher.

(Copyright, 1903, by J. M. Edson.)

Chicago, Sunday, August 2, 1903.

Text:—"But when he (Peter) saw the wind boisterous, he was afraid; and beginning to sink, he cried, saying, Lord, save me! And immediately Jesus stretched forth His hand and caught him, and said unto him, O thou of little faith, wherefore didst thou doubt?"—Matt. 14:30-31.

NEVER was more agonized cry than that which split the stillness of the night air on Galilee's lake. A man was sinking, sinking, sinking! The boisterous waves leaped up as if eager to claim another victim. They wrapped their cold waters about the sinking feet of Peter and reached higher and higher in seeming endeavor to still his voice forever. Oh, the agony of soul as one realizes that but an instant of time separates it from eternity! The awful blackness of death is just ahead, and as one feels the feet sinking into the abyss, the cry is wrung from the lips: "Help! Help!" Hardly a day passes but the news columns of the papers tell of some such sad scene as this. Hardly a summer resort on sea or inland lake or river, during the summer, but hears the dread cry and is stricken with the palsy of fear and horror before the impending tragedy. Only a few days ago at a Wisconsin lake resort a young woman perished in the sight of her friends, powerless to help. Way out in the grasp of the waves, for she was a good swimmer, her strength gave out and with no hand near to save, she sank out of sight, while the cry for help went up in despairing wail. Oh, what intense agony in that cry! All the strength of that perishing soul was thrown into the last appeal for aid. The friends who stood upon the bank and witnessed the awful sight will never forget it, that awful cry will haunt them during their waking and sleeping hours. No one can stand unmoved before such a scene, whether the sinking one is friend or loved one or only a stranger. It stirs the soul in a way never to be forgotten. It unnerves and shocks. Why? Because the soul cannot stand in the presence of death unmoved. Eternity seems so far away during the even, pleasant course of life, but suddenly, when it opens up and swallows another soul while the despairing cry breaks forth, man pauses in the mad rush of life and for a moment thinks.

WHAT a picture we have here in this incident surrounding our text. The frail bark tossed and pounded by the boisterous waves, while the despairing men in the boat tug almost helplessly at the oars and seem to make no headway. The night is dark, and the scurrying clouds overhead give the sky an angry look and the stars blink with cold and distant unconcern as they look through the rifts upon the scene below. It is a night to make men's hearts quail. With anxious forebodings and rising fears, they struggle on. Conscience, ever at work in the moments when the soul is brought face to face with itself and its condition, begins to throw upon memory's canvas the mistakes and failures and sins of the past life. There is a nervous tension which makes them start at every swish of the waves and every moan of the wind as though they were accusing voices. No wonder that, as the dark object in the distance skimming over the surface of the rolling waters draws nearer and nearer, it is taken for a spirit. They know not that it is the Lord. The terrors of the wind and waves are increased by this supernatural manifestation. The fear that had been silently tugging at their hearts breaks the fetters of the tightshut lips, and the cry of terror mingles with the rushing wind. It is the cry of despair, of desperate need. But while the bark trembles in the teeth of the storm and the men within quail and quake, the voice of Jesus is heard above the rush of the wind and the swish of the waves: "Be of good cheer; it is I; be not afraid!"

PETER is the first to recover control of himself, and he cries: "Lord, if it be Thou, bid me come unto Thee on the water!" Oh, that the soul might always in the time of distress and danger be as eager to reach the side of its Lord! And Jesus never says nay, but His reply is always: "Come." Peter's eager obedience takes him over the side of the boat, and he starts bravely for his Lord, but "when he saw the wind boisterous, he was afraid," and he began to sink. What a moment of intense suspense that must have been! The terror-stricken men in the boat as they beheld their comrade sinking into the black waters! The cry of despair and appeal for help! I wonder if any of them ever forgot that experience? And while Peter sinks and cries for help, while the others look on in mute terror, or shriek in helpless fright, Jesus stands calmly and compassionately looking on. And with the first cry and first despairing look, Jesus "stretched forth His hand and caught him." Peter was safe! Rescued from the death that was closing in upon him. But the disciples in the boat were still tossed by the waves. They were still in peril. "How Long" (Jesus and Peter) were come into the ship, the wind ceased." With Jesus in the boat they were safe. What a picture this is for needy, sinsick souls to look upon.

THERE are striking lessons here for both the unsaved sinner and the believing disciple. Primarily this incident concerns the latter. The disciples have been associated with their Lord in the blessed work of feeding that great multitude of people. The five loaves and two fishes under the miraculous touch of Christ have proved adequate for the needs of the five thousand men, besides women and children, and twelve baskets of fragments have been gathered after all have eaten to the full. As the evening draws on Jesus urges His disciples to leave Him while He dismisses the multitude and goes up into the mountain to pray. Not long after the boat of the disciples has pushed out into the lake and been lost to view from the shore, the tempestuous wind swoops down upon them and they with great difficulty keep the prow of their little craft pointed into the teeth of the storm. This trying and perilous experience following so closely upon the glorious victories and service of the previous afternoon is illustrative of the way the Lord nearly always deals with His disciples. Fresh testing follows victory and success. Lest the disciple rest in the glory and satisfaction of the work accomplished, instead of in the Lord who has wrought the work; lest he magnify his part in the work, instead of giving God all the glory and rejoicing in His power, the Lord wisely sends the disciple out upon the sea of difficulty, where he may discover his utter weakness, his dire peril, his absolute dependence upon the Lord to save and help, and then comes a new revelation of the blessed Lord. In the moment of greatest darkness and doubt and peril, He comes walking above the trial which has engulfed the struggling soul. He comes with His "be of good cheer; it is I; be not afraid!"

AND what infinite comfort there is in the picture which Scripture gives us of the praying Lord on the mountain top, faithfully and tenderly watching the disciples struggling amidst the raging winds and waves. He Who could still the tempest with a spoken word! Why did He not hid the rushing wind to cease and the tossing waves to subside into a placid sea? Why did He send them out into such a storm? Ah, how often the Christian asks these questions! Ah, how he frets under the discipline of his Lord! Do I hear those disciples talking among themselves and charging their Lord with having deserted them? Do I hear them contrasting the glory of service of the previous afternoon with their present trying condition, and beginning to doubt and question the reality of the former, and to lose faith and hope in the present time of darkness and peril? If they did they were no different from many Christians today. We are to-day up on the mountain side in exalted and glorious service with our Lord, and to-morrow brings its storm and difficulty, when the Lord seems far away, and we lose faith and hope. Why has the Lord sent us away into such stress of trouble? Surely He has forgotten us! Surely He is indifferent to our condition! And all the time the Lord is watching us from afar and waiting lovingly and longingly until we are in a condition where He may come to us riding above the crest of the wave and bringing us cheering message and safety at His side. And then we think we will never doubt or be discouraged again; but, oh! we learn so slowly! Our hearts are so hard they take but slowly the imprint of the Divine discipline. They are not plastic in His hands, there is not that patient waiting and abiding faith which keeps the life stayed upon the Christ, though the storm does blow and the Lord seems far away. He is watching! He will come! He is preparing you for further and better service! The next morning the disciples landed with Jesus in the land of Gennesaret, where the man possessed with the legion of devils had on a previous occasion been healed and the inhabitants had driven Christ away. But now in the providence of God the way has been prepared for this visit of Christ and His disciples, and they do a blessed work there of healing and saving. And this lake experience of the disciples is but preparation for that service.

AND Peter! How much quick, impulsive, failing Peter can teach us! Of all the disciples in the boat, he is the first to recognize his Lord and to greet Him. His faith with a bound carries him to bold entreaty. "Lord, I believe it is Thou! Bid me come to Thee." Faith can carry the disciple to Jesus even when He is treading the uncertain waters. No limits to faith! How bold seems the request of Peter! How rash seems his quick response! And yet what a revelation of the power of faith and God's recognition of that faith as Peter's feet rest on the rolling waves and he draws near to his Lord. Here we have the sublime heights to which human faith may rise! But how soon the faith-inspired Peter, walking on the water to meet his Lord, is changed to the sinking Peter, who, seeing the boisterous wind and the rolling waves, takes his eyes off Jesus. But somehow I am glad we have this picture of sinking Peter. It is so human. It brings encouragement to the failing heart. For it shows us the arm of Jesus outstretched to save. Never does the cry go up from the human heart: "Lord, save me!" but that Jesus is there to hear and ready to clasp in His strong arms the sinking form. It was lack of faith which was dragging Peter beneath the dark waters upon which he had but just been walking. It is always lack of faith which carries the Christian beneath the waves of surrounding circumstances. But he need not sink hopelessly and helplessly! Let the cry go up, even while he is thanking himself for his lack of faith, and know he deserves no help, and Jesus' saving hand is felt drawing to His blessed side, where are shelter and safety.

BUT we believe there is in this incident a blessed message for the unsaved soul. If Jesus' hand is outstretched to save the sinking Christian, how much more, think you, is He eager to snatch from the bottomless pit and eternal death those who are sinking therein, for that is His mission to the world! He came to seek and to save that which was lost." And if Peter, the disciple, was in danger of sinking, what think you is the peril of the one who is a stranger to Christ, who has not yet believed upon Him to salvation? There are three elements in the picture which our text brings before us: The sinking man, the helpless companions, the saving Lord. Here in miniature is a picture of the perishing world. People everywhere sinking beneath the waves of sin into eternal death; human hands unable to save, but Jesus standing ready to respond to the cry for help and salvation. The sinking sinner! Every sinner is a sinking sinner, whether he is conscious of it or not, and unless the cry for mercy and salvation goes up before death's waters close over his head forever, he is lost! What sad words are those: "He is lost!" We know the anguish which tears the heart as we bow before the dead loved one. What a scene was that over the lifeless form of that girl who perished in Wisconsin the other day. She had gone down underneath the dark waters, and no human voice could call her back to life again, no human hand could raise her up. She was dead! Oh, the agony of those moments which witnessed her last struggles! How desperate was her condition! But, oh! the condition of the sinking sinner is infinitely worse. The death of the soul is as much more terrible than the death of the body as eternity is greater than time. If the drowning girl needed help, the sinking sinner needs help.

AND Jesus is the only One Who can save. The last thing the soul is willing to give up is confidence in itself. The world to-day is blindly groping about for help from its growing ills. The waves of sin are rolling higher and higher, and human hands are being extended to lift up, to save. But the hope of the world is not in itself. It is in Christ. But as in the day of Noah so it is to-day. The world is blind to its peril. No human power could save from the ever-rising waters, and no human power to-day can save the world perishing in its sins. Noah, as he looked from the windows of the ark and saw the destruction of all about him, could but lift his heart to God and thank Him for his own deliverance. For it was God Who had warned him; it was God Who had showed him how to build the ark. And as he saw the unrepentant and unbelieving people of the world sinking to death in the waters of the rising flood, he must have said over and over again: "They might have been saved! They might have been saved!" And so they might if they had not rejected God's message to them, if they had not trusted in their own strength, in their own resources. And as in the days of Noah there was salvation only in the ark which God caused to be built, so to-day there is salvation in no other name under Heaven, except in the name of Jesus. Jesus is the only ark of safety in which the sinking inhabitants of the world may take refuge from the death waters of sin. The ark of Noah's time was a type of the Christ who was to come. And in the fullness of time God sent His Son into the world that He might save the world.

THERE Jesus stands. Look, sinner, look! There He stands while the surging waters of sin, like a flood, are swallowing up hundreds and thousands, and bearing them to eternal death. He stands and waits, O, sinking ones! His ear is open to hear the cry for help. He does not want anyone to perish. He purchased by His life's blood the right to become the Saviour of the lost human race. And never a soul goes down to death if the cry only goes out to Him: "Lord, save me!". The dying thief felt the hideous waters of sin rising about him, but just before his voice was stilled forever, with his expiring breath, he cried unto Jesus, and immediately Jesus stretched forth His hand and caught him and bore him to Paradise with Him. Jesus, with outstretched hand, stands patiently waiting. How long He will wait, Scripture does not tell us. But some day the cry of the foolish virgins will break in anguish over the world: "Too late! Too late!" God says He will not always chide, neither will He withhold His wrath forever. Oh, sinking sinner, how long will you test the patience and mercy of God? How long will you turn from the outstretched hand of Jesus to the voice of the siren of the world's pleasures and ambitions? No hapless sailor ever returned alive who listened to the sirens who sang off the shores of Italy, and no soul today who turns from Jesus and listens to the hum and music of the world can escape soul death. "The wages of sin is death," is the dark side; but the bright side is where Jesus stands ready to save, for the gift of God is Eternal Life."

REVIVAL OF TARIFF ISSUE.

Little Likelihood of Relief for the People from Trust Prices and Extortion.

The last congress refused to pass the bill to reduce the tariff rates on importation from the Philippine islands, and all the protectionists were in a great state of glee about it. Although the flag waves over the unfortunate islands, they are treated by the republican leaders as a foreign country. Gov. Taft on the Fourth of July sent a message to President Roosevelt in answer to his independence day congratulations, making a plea for concessions in the Philippine tariff schedules, thus rebuking the republican leaders who have determined to "stand pat" on the tariff issue until after the presidential election. Now Judge Taft is too wise a politician to make this effort for tariff reform a leading issue and press the matter on President Roosevelt, unless he feared the result except the reform of the tariff was accomplished before the election of 1904. He knew his message would receive the widest publicity and create a public demand for tariff concessions to the Philippines, such as congress would not dare to ignore.

The republican leaders have been comforting themselves that all danger from the tariff agitation was postponed when the Iowa idea was laid to sleep by Senator Allison, and this fire from the rear is very disconcerting to them. If the Philippine tariff issue is opened up in congress, the democrats will demand that trust productions be added to the free list, or the protection they now enjoy vastly diminished. A record vote on such a proposition would be disastrous to a number of congressmen from close districts and would lead to trouble in some of the western states where tariff reform and trust control are demanded by a large percentage of the republican voters.

Many of the favored monopolies do not want the tariff, even with the Philippines, touched at all. They opposed the reduction of the Porto Rican duties and are still fighting reciprocity with Cuba. If the Philippine tariff is abolished, it will be under whip and spur, a procedure by no means desirable to the republican party on the eve of a presidential election. There is no doubt that President Roosevelt, in his message to the coming special session of congress, will urge Cuban reciprocity on that body, and he may suggest that the Philippine tariff be abolished. But will the republican leaders, the ultra protectionists who control congress, adopt his recommendations? President Roosevelt also knows that our home tariff should be revised, to take from the trusts the monopoly it now gives many of them, and thus reduce the price of trust productions. But will he have "the nerve" to recommend it? Such a political move would be vastly popular with the people, but would be denounced by the trusts and their accomplices, the republican politicians. The president's next message to congress will be scanned with more than usual interest, and the action of that body will be watched by the great majority of the voters with anxious solicitude to see if any relief will be granted from trust extortions. Congress may be forced to give reciprocity to Cuba and free trade to the Philippines, but the republican leaders will not permit the sacred tariff that robs our own people, to be molested. They look to the trusts that are making millions out of tariff protection to liberally supply the campaign funds to defeat the will of the people.

——Many of the men in charge of the public business, even as public service is now limited or defined, rarely do their work promptly, efficiently and impartially. Even in the post office department, the boast of the advocate of government ownership, the service costs almost twice as much as it could be done for, and men in high places peddle contracts, work their "grafts" and cumber the salary list with the names of idle relatives and women. The public business of the country is still on the party of spoils basis, in spite of all the efforts of reformers and the costly experience of the people who feed the spoilsmen.—Houson (Tex.) Post.

——The "stand-patters" are missing connections with the markets. While the politicians are standing pat the markets are not, and it is of course essential to the stand-pat policy that the markets should stand pat. For it is upon the theory that the markets will not stand pat unless the politicians do, that the stand-pat policy rests. If that theory does not hold good then the whole stand-pat policy is shown to be a delusion and a snare. —Springfield Republican (Ind.).

DIPLOMACY AND NERVE.

Roosevelt and Hay in Their Great Act of Doing the Strenuous Strain.

The state department gives out the official information that the Russian government refuses to receive the Kishineff petition on the ground that Russia considers the persecution of Jews in concerning her own sovereignty alone. On the same day Secretary of State Hay informs an anxious public that China promises two open ports in Manchuria and that Russia assents thereto. This latter concession is supposed to offset the slap in the face to President Roosevelt in refusing to receive the petition of the Jews, which the president had promised to forward to the czar, but who now refuses to receive it. Justice David J. Brewer, of the United States supreme court, in a speech at Milwaukee on July 15, the day before the above events happened, said: "The eyes of the entire world are upon President Roosevelt to see if he has the nerve (and I want to tell you he has) to send to the government at St. Petersburg the Jewish petition of protest against the atrocities perpetrated at Kishineff." The official information that the president has backed down and accepted the promise of China and the assent of Russia to open two ports in Manchuria," is decidedly refreshing. President Roosevelt may change his mind and persist in sending the petition for the unfortunate Jews, but if he does it will be in defiance of the advice of his secretary of state, and may bring about a state of affairs that may lead to war with Russia. War would require a vast deal of "nerve" in all of us, and war with Russia would be a much more arduous undertaking than with decrepid Spain. But what about the compensation we are "promised" in return for the lack of nerve? Russia has promised to retire from Manchuria in September, and in that case the "promise" of China to open two ports to the trade of the world might be consummated. But if Russia does not withdraw her troops, China cannot keep her promise, and Russia can easily find an excuse for not opening the ports. The cables from the east say that Russia is pouring troops into Manchuria and evidently preparing to hold that country at all hazzard.

It appears very much that President Roosevelt, with "his nerve" and his secretary of state, with his diplomacy, had been handed out a gold brick by China and Russia, and it will be a long time, if ever, that the door will be open in Manchuria.

POINTS AND OPINIONS.

——Postal deficit this year, $5,000,000; last year, $2,000,000.—Atlanta Constitution.

——Perhaps, if Uncle Mark Hanna would promise to give just as much to the campaign, anyhow, there would be no further effort to foist the vice presidential nomination upon him.—The Commoner.

——There should be no further displacing of honorable and veteran army officers for Gen. Leonard Wood's benefit until the whole truth is known about his previous successes as a displacer.—N. Y. Sun (rep.).

——The great advantage of "reform within the party" is being illustrated in the post office scandal. Those who revealed the existence of the machine ring, and the irregularities of his predecessor, are being "quietly dropped."—Delaware Gazette.

——It is unkind for a New York newspaper to insinuate that President Roosevelt is rated as a statesman among cowboys and as a cowboy among statesmen. That's what a man gets, though, for achieving a Rough Rider reputation at the outlay of almost incalculable strenuosity.—St. Louis Republican.

——Speaking of the situation in the post office department, the Troy, N. Y., Times, a good republican paper, says: "The republican administration is not hunting for democrats. It is looking for rascals." This is true, of course, but probably the Times would have stated the case differently if it had taken a second thought.—Charleston News-Courier.

——An exchange observes that Senator Allison has sent the "Iowa idea" romping all over the country. This is because the sage of the republican side of the senate was called on to doctor the "idea" too often. People have got to wondering why it takes an expert to handle the matter. They ask why a plain proposition in politics and government cannot be considered in a plain way. Even Brother Allison cannot be expected to forever keep the popular thinking apparatus in the background.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

ONE'S ACQUAINTANCES.

The List Is Probably Much Smaller Than the Generality of People Suppose.

"How many acquaintances have you? Did you ever stop to think?" asked C. G. Rawlins, of New York, of a Washington Star man. "If you haven't you will find it quite an interesting question when you have nothing else to think of. Incidentally you will be surprised at the very small number of persons in this large world of many souls that you can count among your acquaintances. You will get a fairly good idea of the truth if you stop to reflect upon the relatively small number of persons you know in a city where you are reasonably well acquainted. Out of the vast number of persons you meet every day, how many do you know? Very few. You are, relatively speaking, a stranger in the city, where your acquaintance is most extensive. Of course, there is no exact way of telling how many persons one can call acquaintances. It would be difficult to hit upon any method having that exactitude required in a scientific calculation. Indeed, it is quite impossible to do more than roughly approximate an answer to the question, 'How many acquaintances have you?'

"Men and women vary in the number of acquaintances they make. Some are distant and retiring in temperament. So many persons will have many acquaintances; others will have very few. Take a man whose acquaintance is reasonably broad, a traveling man, for instance, who makes his living by getting acquainted with people. How many traveling men do you suppose can boast of an acquaintance of 100,000 persons? That may sound like a small estimate. I can assure you that it is not. I made a little experiment, and you can try it when you have time. My plan was very simple: I would write down so many names every night, say 100, and this would give me a chance to recover, trace the association and follow suggested lines from the names of men, places and things. At first writing down 100 names was an easy matter. I kept this up until I got to about 1,600 names, and it became a squeeze for me to think of 100 persons whose names I had not already jotted down. I began to fail under the limit in a remarkably short period of time. The nightly number had tapered down until I simply couldn't think of another human being whose name I could put among those of my acquaintance. All told I had less than 2,000 names. Of course, this test is not final, and is not to be accepted as an average of a man's acquaintance. Still it is a side light of some value and shows that the statement that 100,000 acquaintances is probably a very rare possession is not to be laughed out of court. How many persons do you know? Make an estimate just for luck some time, for you will find it both amusing and profitable."

FALSE TEETH REMOVED.

Wigs Also Are an Object of Deep Concern to Sleeping Car Travelers.

False teeth, although apparently containing fewer potentialities of danger, are, according to the same authority, treated with more respect by their owners. Travelers who depend upon the dentist for their grinders display a good deal of caution about creeping into a berth with their teeth in their mouths, and they tuck them under the pillow and in valises, and even hand them over to the porter for safekeeping, rather than take chances on swallowing them in the night, says the Philadelphia Ledger.

Wigs are another thing about which sleepers have peculiar notions. Very few people like to sleep in a wig on account of the difficulty of combing it properly the next morning, but the porter tells the story of one man who had the wig habit developed to an extraordinary degree.

"He, too, was a frequent traveler over my line," said the porter. "I had had many a nice little chat with him, and thought him one of the most sensible fellows I ever knew. He was quite bald from his forehead back past the crown of his head, and we often joked about it being excess of brains that had pushed his hair over. After I found out about that wig business I wanted to take back everything I had said about his brilliant mind. I found it out by accident.

"One evening I had occasion to look into the old gentleman's berth after he was made up for the night. To my utter amazement I saw him togged out in a wig that spread over the pillow like a monstrous mop of auburn curls.

"'Excuse me,' said I. 'Have I made a mistake? I thought this was Mr. M——'s berth.'

"The old fellow laughed. 'Sh-sh-sh,' he said. 'This is me, all right. Don't say anything about it. It is a fad of mine. All my life long I have wished for a fine head of curly auburn hair. Nature denied me that boon. She gave me nothing but sparse black locks to start with. Now she has seen fit to take even those away, and I have concluded that since she played me such a scurvy trick, I am justified in getting back at her by wearing any old kind of hair I please. Hence this red wig. On account of the inevitable uncharitable remarks of my friends I couldn't blossom out in a brand-new suit of hair in the daytime, but I have made a practice of wearing it at night, and it gives me the greatest comfort imaginable.'"

AGRICULTURAL HINTS.

HILLSIDE CULTIVATION.

An Idea from Switzerland That Might Be Modified for Use in This Country.

The cut, reproduced from a Swiss horticultural paper, shows how cultivation is accomplished in Alpine vineyards where the land is stacked up on its edges. The anchoring machine is the main feature illustrated. The horse goes back and forth along the ridge and the man at the cultivator has only to guide his implement without the bother of driving. Of course two men are needed in this one-horse affair, and the cultivator goes back empty every time, but labor is relatively cheaper in the interior of Europe than here. A boy could manage the motive power, and otherwise inaccessible slopes of land, highly suitable for special crops can be well cultivated. The horse is considerable of a nuisance anyway on land closely planted with valuable fruit crops, however necessary he may be for extended agricultural operations, and it is possible to imagine some such contrivance, utilizing the power of a gasoline or other easily managed engine, as a great convenience in the intensive culture of choice, closely planted crops, in level places as well as hillsides. The horse takes a good deal of room, he is not careful of valuable plants, and the packing of the soil by his feet is not always beneficial. Many truckers and growers of high-grade fruits would doubtless welcome a practical device that would dispense with a horse in the row while utilizing horse-power tools for cultivation.—Rural New Yorker.

HOW TO GET GOOD ROADS.

Enemies of Mud Should Unite in a Campaign for a Principle, Not for Details.

One great reason for the prevalence of bad roads throughout the United States is lack of agreement and united action among the advocates of improvement. Everybody prefers goods roads to bad. Everybody knows that the roads can be improved only by the expenditure of money and labor. But here the agreement ends. There is a great variety of ideas and schemes for securing the desired object. There is no end of discussion, but very little is accomplished. Some people would rather travel through mud than to have the roads improved by any other plan than their own "pet scheme." Thus road reformers themselves sometimes actually hinder the cause to which they are devoted.

If the roads of the country are to be made good within the lifetime of the present generation, it is high time the advocates of good roads should unite in support of a few general propositions, and go to work in favor of a general plan. If a national good roads movement ever gets started, nothing can stop it. It will sweep everything before it. But the difficulty is to get it started.

One great advantage possessed by the national aid plan, which is now becoming so popular, is that it is general instead of sectional or local. It is as broad as the whole country. It can bring into harmonious united action the friends of good roads in every state, and it is the only plan yet proposed that can do this.

The friends of national aid will make a mistake if they undertake to work out details in advance. They will disagree among themselves and give objections every advantage. They should go to work for the general principle and leave details to be worked out later. This was the plan of action adopted by Gladstone. When his opponents asked for details of any great reform which he advocated, Gladstone would answer: "There will be time enough to work out the details when we get the power." The advocates of national aid will do well to emulate the example of this great English statesman. They should organize everywhere and fight for the principle, leaving details to be worked out in due time.

The Boy and the Farm.

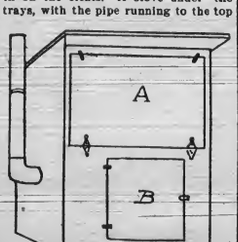
Teachers and farmers, teach the boys and girls to be honest and upright in every sense, but by all means teach them to work. It won't hurt them to do a little farm work. Send them to college if you can, but let's keep all the college boys and girls on the farm that we can, and then the farmers' interest will be looked after better. We will have better schools, better churches and better society. Insist on trying to keep the boys on the farm after they have received their education. They can keep the farm books and will lend an air of intelligence to the town. We need more educated people on the farms, when we will have less boys and girls going to the cities from the farms.—J. O. Gates, in Farm and Home.

Better visit the potato patch every day or the bug may get the start of you.

THE FRUIT BUSINESS.

If You Put Your Heart in It There Is No Reason Why It Shouldn't Be a Success.

As to location, start where you are; locate near home. You can do just as well, and enjoy the old home surroundings and friendships. You want to live, as well as make money, and the best life is in or near the old home. Grow the fruits that you like to care for. It is what we put our hearts into that brings the reward. Doubtless the apple is the best fruit to grow, for it is always wanted.



Plant the trees as closely as they will stand to fruit well, say ten by ten feet, then take out apart, later another part, till the trees stand 40 by 40. This means four times as many apples at the start, then twice as many; so with peaches. I believe in close planting, but many planters have not the courage to take out the superfluous trees when the time comes. I have some plum trees set with peaches nine by nine feet, which will bear well next season.

Prepare the land thoroughly, stir it all through the season, and use cover crops, if nothing more than weeds and grass. Don't plant other crops; let the orchard have the first and best. The advocacy of orchards in sod is doing harm. On the Eldwell farm in the Sacramento valley, California, worked with gang plows, the yield of wheat is 1f bushels an acre. Nearby a woman farmer works her land more thoroughly with the best tools, and gets 34 bushels. She does not know enough to vote, but she knows how to handle the land. Prune for shape and a low head. For vigorous growth, prune when trees are dormant; for less vigor prune in summer. When heavy growth has ceased, cut out the strong leaders, and the small branches will develop fruit buds. Don't shorten it, but cut out entirely. Then keep up vitality by culture and fertilizing. Intelligent treatment is most important. In spraying, never use bordeaux mixture after the buds have swollen. Spray thoroughly before; later, pick and burn all rotted fruit. Thinning the fruit is not only important for the immediate crop, but tends to create the habit of annual bearing. Thinning costs less than the barreling and marketing of surplus fruit at low prices.—J. H. Hale, in Prairie Farmer.

A FRUIT EVAPORATOR.

Easily Made at Home and Can Be Operated Rapidly by Women and Children.

A fruit evaporator is something which should be on every farm. To make one, have the roof slant at about eight feet tall at the highest. Build four feet square on ground. Put cleats inside for the trays to slide on. The trays are made of galvanized screening stretched on a frame that fits when slid in on the cleats. A stove under the trays, with the pipe running to the top on the outside. A door (A) above is large enough to put trays in; (B) small door below to feed stove. This completes this cheap evaporator. If kept running night and day, which can easily be done by putting fuel in stove late and closing all dampers, two evaporators full of apples and one of peaches can be dried in a day and night. Put a tablespoonful of sulphur on the stove for each tray of fruit, to bleach apples. The boys and girls of the farm can run it, and save the cull apples and surplus peaches. Dry the peelings of the apples, and sell them, too. They make good vinegar. Girls, this is a good way to make your pin money.—Mrs. Susie Holland, in Epitomist.

HOW TO CHOOSE CHEESE.

An Expert Tells How to Tell the Good from the Bad Without Making a Mistake.

Most housekeepers quail before that part of the family marketing which relates to the purchase of cheese, and wish the man of the house, who is usually the chief consumer as well as the critic, would always buy it. Such may find the words of an authority of value:

"A cheese with an indication of goodness will have an even-colored, not mottled, rind. The moment you press your fingertips on the rind you can begin to judge of the inferior makeup of a cheese. If it yields readily to the pressure of the fingers, and the rind breaks, or does not spring back readily when the pressure is withdrawn, you have got a soft article, caused by the slack cooling of the curd, a want of acid, or both. At best, it will have an insipid flavor, and will 'go off' as it ages. Cheese which feels so hard that you cannot press it on the rind is either sour, salted too heavily, cooked too much, skimmed, or suffering from a touch of all these complaints.

"A good cheese will be mellow to the touch, yet firm. Its rind will be of an even tint, elastic and free from puffs, and the sample will reveal firm, close-grained, buttery cheese of a nutty flavor."—Chicago Tribune.

BRIGHT SIDE OF IMMIGRATION

Many Foreigners Bring with Them Habits of Industry Which Serve Them in Good Stead.

There is no doubt a great deal of crime introduced into this country through practically unrestricted immigration, but the evil is not so great, we believe, as some alarmists maintain. The anarchists are, of course, the most dangerous people who come here from abroad, and they ought to be excluded, if possible, from the country. Still, it is difficult to reach them. They do not fight in the open, for they plot in secret for the destruction of human life and property, and they are the avowed enemies of all rightly organized society, says the Boston Budget.

There is, however, a brighter side to immigration. Many people come here miserably poor, without education, but with a desire to get ahead with the native wit with which they are gifted. They have learned to work hard through struggling for a mere existence in their own country, and they bring here habits of industry which serve them in good stead. They are willing to adopt any means of livelihood, no matter how lowly, and they not infrequently attain through rigid economy a financial position that they could never have attained at home. Indeed, they often leave natives far behind in the struggle for monetary success, because they do not indulge in the extravagance in living which has become so marked in many Americans, no matter what their social positions may be.

The thrifty foreigner climbs slowly but surely, and we are often surprised at the advance he has made in a few years. This is particularly noticeable in the Russian and Polish Jews who come to the United States. There are thriftless and disorderly ones among them, as there are among the other foreign immigrants, but the majority are sober and laborious, and their children, educated in our public schools, make astonishing progress in a short time, and show remarkable intelligence in mastering their studies.

Master Albert Shapiro, who recited the Declaration of Independence at Faneuil hall on the Fourth of July, is the son of a father who came from Poland a few years ago, poor, unlearned and unknown; but his son, under our free institutions, has developed into an admirable specimen of the young American that our free institution creates. It has been customary to read the declaration on occasions like that mentioned, but Master Shapiro declaimed it from memory with a justness of emphasis and an evident understanding of its meaning that won general applause.

The children of immigrants usually appreciate the advantages they have enjoyed, and are ambitious to be considered reputable citizens of the republic. Of course, there are some black sheep who make up the hoodlum element among them, but these are to be found in every community, large or small, and the toughs of the north are no worse than the lawless men of the south who have had generations in the country. They have in the past helped in settling this vast country, which now stretches from ocean to ocean, but if fewer of them would live in the cities there would be less sickness and fewer disorders. People crowded into narrow districts are apt to quarrel, but if they are scattered over large areas, they are not so often tempted to indulge in the dissipation which leads to crime.

FACES OF MEN AND WOMEN.

The Former Are More Often Marred by Deformity Than the Latter.

After they had held down a bench on Riverside drive for an hour, during which time 500 people had passed, one of them wound up his disconnected comments with this, says the New York Sun:

"Have you ever noticed how few women you see with any deformity in their faces? You may watch the crowd in any street and every tenth man will have a broken nose, or a disfigured mouth, or deformed chin, or some mark which indicates a misfortune. But not one woman in 50 is so marked.

"You see ugly women, women with telltale lines in their faces, and plenty of good-looking women, but, as I say, not one in 50—I have made the count frequently and that is the average—has a scar or an abnormal mark on her face.

"I asked a doctor about it, and his explanation was that women, being out of doors less than men, are more protected from accidents. But that is not satisfactory if you study the proposition.

"You may stand at the Manhattan end of the Brooklyn bridge in the rush hour, as I have done, and take 100 women and then take the first 20 men afterward that pass along, men and women who you know come and go to work daily, and you will find more men marked in the face than you will find women. I am not talking about women who go shopping, but women who work in the stores and shops.

"I used to be a night worker, and went home on the early morning trains which carry an army of night workers of both sexes—the women in such cases being from the bakeshops and cafes and places where women are as much in danger as men, and rarely did I see a woman whose face was marred by any natural deformity, or anything that would indicate an accident.

"The only conclusion I ever reached was that women are more careful of their faces than men, but that applies only to accidents. How about those who have been favored from birth? Why are they, proportionally, more fortunate than men?"

REMARKABLE PHENOMENON.

Flash of Lightning Turns a New Jersey Man's Hair from a Coal-Black to a Snowy White.

One flash of lightning has turned the coal black hair of Thomas Foxhall to a snowy white. Mr. Foxhall's experience is one of the most remarkable in the history of electrical phenomena. He is a wealthy engraver of Passaic, N. J., and once a week his business requires him to visit Philadelphia. He was there, seated in the office of a friend, when a thunderstorm broke over the building.

There was a blinding flash, followed almost instantly by a peal of thunder. The concussion was so great that it caused the window panes to shiver. The flame of blue and purple preceding the thunderclap lighted up the interior of the building with a ghostly glow. Mr. Foxhall and his friend were stunned and blinded.

When they recovered their senses they saw a great debt in the floor where the thunderbolt had passed. It was not more than three feet from the chair in which Mr. Foxhall had been sitting.

Mr. Foxhall scarcely was aware of the change which had taken place in himself until he looked at himself in a mirror. Then he saw his hair had turned white. There was no pain, no distress, further than the feeling of numbness which follows an electrical shock.

The mystery of it all is, how the mysterious energy discharged from the clouds could have bleached the pigment in the hair tubes without causing instant death. So far as known there is no similar case on record.

RABBITS BOARD A TRAIN.

Animals Are Driven to Flood-Bound Cars to Avoid Being Drowned—Provide Passengers with Game Diet.

Elliot G. Houston, of the Denver Record-Stockman, had an uncomfortable experience in traveling through the water belt of Kansas during the recent floods on his way to his old home, at Louisville, Ky. With 48 other passengers he was water-bound for six days on a Missouri Pacific train four miles from Bridgeport, Kan. It was impossible either to move the train forward or to go back, and in a short time the food supply was exhausted and the male passengers rustled eatables among the farmers of the neighborhood.

"We exhausted the food the first day," said Mr. Houston. "At the start we were told that we could have but two meals instead of three meals a day. Every semblance of food was quickly gone, and then it became necessary for the male passengers to get something to eat. The farmhouses saved us. Several of us got boats and rowed from house to house each day and in this way secured food sufficient for at least one meal a day. One means of securing food seemed to be furnished by Providence. The water drove poor little rabbits up under the very wheels of the cars. As the water crept higher the rabbits actually got on top of the wheels. Every morning it was easy to collect as many rabbits as we could eat. That seems remarkable, but it was really a fact."

King Enters Back Door.

While visiting in Weisbaden recently King Christian returned to his palace on foot. The sentinel did not recognize him and taking him for a humble soldier, ordered him to go to the back door, insinuating that the front one was only accessible to his betters. The king acquiesced mildly and entered by the back door. He recounted the incident later, laughing much over it.
